ARRANGING A BANQUET

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of Lansdowne Lodge, S. O. E., was held last night, when officers were elected for the coming year. There was a fairly good attendance and much interest taken in the proceedings. The officers elected for 1909 are as follows:

As stated above this was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Lansdowne Lodge, and in order to celebrate it in a proper manner a committee was formed to consider the question of holding a banquet in the near future. It is very likely that this will be the result as the general opinion seemed to be in favour of it last night.

OPENING OF THE NEW CITY MUSIC STORE

Mr. W. H. Ruse, a Member of the Musical Ruse Family, With the Genius of Moore, Will Open in the Arcade Block

Peterborough is to have another new music store for the sale of pianos, musical instruments and music. Mr. W. H. Ruse, who has been identified with music all his life, has secured a lease of the store adjoining Lindsay & Might's real estate agency, arcade block, possession of which will be given January 1st. In the meantime the side entrance in the market arcade will open into the office where Mr. Ruse will have a line of samples, from which to take orders, for which he has arranged with the manufacturers. Parties in need of anything musical, from a sheet of music to a piano, will do well to call and get prices and terms before ordering elsewhere. After January 1st the store will be fitted up and equipped for pianos, etc., in modern style.

ASSURANCE GIVEN THAT PARENTS RUN NO RISK

No Danger Anticipated in Sending Children to School.

Public School Inspector A Mowat informed the Examiner to-day that parents of children who are attending school need not be afraid of scarlet fever which has broken out in some parts of the city. The School Board, the teachers, and the Medical Health Officer have taken every precaution and there is no occasion to fear an outbreak in any of the schools.

SCARLET FEVER PLACARD WAS REMOVED WITHIN 16 DAYS AND WITHOUT CONSENT OF THE M.H.O.

Board of Health Asks Dr. Bingham to Exercise His Authority in Contagious Diseases Quarantined — Time Should be Six Weeks—If Danger is Gone it Could be Less.

THE NATURE OF THIS CASE

Moved by Dr. McNulty, seconded by Mr. James Murty that the Medical Health Officer direct his attention to those sections of the regulations regarding the isolation of contagious diseases and that he exercise his authority in that regard.

In other words the Board of Health desires that Dr. Bingham shall use his authority regarding the length of time that houses which have been placarded shall remain so.

This question was brought up at the regular meeting of the Board this morning. There were present, Dr. Burnham, Dr. McNulty, Mayor Rush, Jas. Murty, Dr. Bingham, Chief Rossel, Jas. Edgar and A. Parker. A letter was received from one of the local physicians relating to a family in the city in which one of the members had scarlet fever and the house was quarantined by being placarded on Nov. 11th. The card was taken down as it was stated, before the specified time and the doctor had it placed on again. The next day he was informed that his services were no longer required. A certificate was then procured from two other doctors, stating that there was no longer any danger of contagion. The card then came down to stay. The report stated that the card was on the house just 16 days, whereas it should have remained there 6 weeks.

There was considerable discussion on this case and it was remarked that the medical health officer should see that the cards are not taken down until danger is past. Both the Chief and Dr. Bingham stated that they had not given any authority in this case to take the card off the house. From the sentiment expressed by the members of the Board there will be no longer any laxity in dealing with contagious cases and especially the length of the quarantine period will be kept up to that required by law.

TOMMY GORDON TELLS OF HOW COMPANION SHOT HIMSELF WHILE HE FASTENED A LOOSENED GARTER

Young's Point, Dec. 8.—Nothing of a startling nature figured in the evidence of the inquest into the death of Roland Ayotte, who died a few weeks ago from a bullet wound at Oregon, Harvey township. The enquiry was resumed this morning in the annex of the Lakeview House, Coroner Dr. Gray presiding. Dr. Young who with Dr. Boucher held the post mortem examination was the first to testify. The only evidence bearing directly on the case was that the charge entered young Ayotte's body in a straight line.

Mrs. Ayotte, the dead boy's mother, and Mr. Baptiste Ayotte his father, also gave their testimony. The latter that he had heard a story once about Tommy Gordon getting a young lad to stand on a stump for a target while he shot at him. The story went that the boy fell off too soon and the charge entered the stump.

Thos. Weaver and Laura Gordon testified to finding the body. Tommy Gordon who was with young Ayotte, said that while the two boys were walking along together his garter became unfastened. He gave the gun to the other boy to carry until he fixed it. A second time the garter worked itself loose and while he (Gordon) was tying it, his companion exclaimed, "Watch me shoot that crow." He heard the discharge of course, and on looking up saw Roland Ayotte fall over to the ground.

The inquest was here adjourned until 1.45 this afternoon. The coroner's jury is composed of: Andrew Allan, foreman; Jos. Walsh, W. J. Bullock, Wm. C. Young, Josiah Bullock, Wm. Lane, Robt. Freeburn, Ambrose Davis, Geo. Davis, Peter Bullock, Jas. H. Kearney, Fred Young, Edward Young, Matthew Young.

THE CITY ENGINEER WILL REPORT ON MR. HOGAN'S CLAIM FOR DAMAGES

The complaint from Wm Hogan in regard to damages done his property in the re-building of the Murray St. Bridge was before the Whole Committee last night, and after being discussed was referred to the City Engineer for a report on the matter.

Ald. Neill stated that he had noticed that Mr. Hogan's place had been blocked up and while there was no legal claim against the city, he felt that as a matter of justice Mr. Hogan should be recompensed. He moved that the matter be referred to the City Solicitor.

It developed that a report had been received from the City Solicitor in regard to the matter.

Ald. Buller stated that the Board of Works and himself had been under the opinion that one entrance to Mr. Hogan's property had been left open but such was not the case.

Ald. Bradburn thought that the matter should be referred to the city engineer to get declarations from the men who were working upon the bridge as to what damage Mr. Hogan should have been put to. This would prevent the creation of a dangerous precedent. He moved in that direction and his motion which was seconded by Ald. Johnston was carried.

ANNIVERSARY CONCERT AT BETHANY CHURCH

The Presbyterian Church at Bethany held their annual anniversary concert last night in the town hall, Bethany. The hall was filled to listen to the programme given by the orchestra of the George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough. Each number on the programme was excellent, and the audience repeatedly asked for encores. The programme consisted of orchestral selections, solos, duets, quartettes and readings. Everything was well selected and executed. The audience left the hall very much pleased. Besides the pastor, Rev. Dr. Marsh, who was chairman, the clergymen from Bethany also said a few words.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The victory for John W. Dafoe in the recent libel action brought against him as editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, is, says the Ottawa Free Press, if the pun may be excused, more a victory for the free press than for the Free Press. It establishes the right of a newspaper to publish facts, which are within the purview of any number of people who attend a political meeting which may be disturbed by a hired crowd of disturbers, and it places beyond peradventure the power of any reputable newspaper to expose a deliberate attempt to break up a public assembly. It is one of these judicial decisions which will in years to come be accepted as a precedent in the jurisprudence of libel.

TRANSCONTINENTAL VINDICATED.

During the last elections Conservative politicians, doubtless upon the substantial suggestion of great interests, bitterly assailed the Grand Trunk Pacific project, and vendible Yankee journals were even pressed into the service and their mendacities widely circulated in an attempt to discredit the undertaking. But their treason was committed in vain. The people believed in the bona fides of the Government and in the earnestness of the men behind the enterprise, who were not politicians but business men practically interested in the work of building a railway and a nation. It will be learned with as much pleasure as surprise that the last section of the line from Moncton to Prince Rupert, was last week put under contract. It is a stretch of 204 miles, running through the clay belt of Northern Ontario, from Lake Abitibi westward towards Lake Nepigon. The sections in New Brunswick, the sections in Northern Quebec, the sections north of Lake Superior, and the mountain sections are all in active progress. The prairie section is already built and doing business. In the next three years the whole line from ocean to ocean will be completed and in operation. This means that a line nearly 4,000 miles long, every inch on Canadian ground will have been completed in seven years from the first sod, representing the greatest achievement in railway building the world has ever seen, and all the more remarkable for a country of only six millions of population, which has already done more than its proportion according to population, in building railways and canals in the interests of national development. The Grand Trunk Pacific was needed, the Liberal Government saw and met the need. One of the greatest railways in the world, bound to do one of the greatest works of the world, is on the ways and, in spite of its great length and of the mountainous regions through which some of it passes, the Grand Trunk Pacific will have the lowest grades and easiest curves of any other long railway in existence. All that is modern in methods and some things unique have been embodied in its construction, with a view of giving rapid and economical transportation.

AN INDEPENDENT OPINION.

The action of the Ministers of the Dominion Government, who have abolished the "patronage list' in their departments is variously regarded. Those who have a real desire to see a genuine reform of conditions look upon it as an important indication of the bona fides of the Ministers and a step towards a desirable reform of the civil service. Some of the Conservative press, however, see in it or pretend to see in it, only a little false pretense. The Canadian Courier, by no means prejudiced in favour of Liberal interests, sees only good, and hope for greater good, in the movement. It says:

"Recent startling events have sounded the death-knell of political patronage. The political axiom that "To the victor belongs the spoils" is about to be limited in Canada as it has been in Great Britain and the United States. Mr. Brodeur has abolished it from the Marine Department and Mr. Pugsley from the Public Works Department. They cannot do it all at once, but they have made a beginning. Some newspapers, notably the Toronto News and Toronto Saturday Night, doubt the bona fides of these politicians, but the average man will accept the public statements of these gentlemen until they are shown to be hollow. The politician moves along the line of least resistance and fortunately today that means the patronage list is to be avoided."

OPPOSITION LEADER PROBLEM.

The Globe thus deals with what may be regarded as the constitutional aspect of the Opposition leadership question:

The problem of a salaried Opposition leader is again complicated by an attempt on the part of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper's friends to elevate him to the position. The Ontario and British Columbia leaders have been spoken of as possible successors to Mr. Borden, whose two consecutive defeats seem likely to be made an excuse by friends of other aspirants. But there does not seem to be any constitutional means by which the office can be transferred. Even if the leader were willing to resign no one has authority to accept his resignation. He cannot resign to his Excellency, not being a Minister of the Crown, neither can he resign to the Premier, who is only technically responsible for the proper discharge of his duties. He was not called upon by his Excellency to form an Opposition, so there is no mandate to be withdrawn. Even Parliament by a majority vote cannot deal with the matter. Having no legal appointment or standing, the Opposition leader cannot legally be removed. Only the grim reaper can make the office vacant once it is filled. It is even more permanent than the Bench, for a Judge can be removed by impeachment in Parliament.

The Conservative party might to a man demand the leadership of Sir James Whitney, Premier McBride, or Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, and even if Mr. Borden himself were agreeable there would be no means of effecting the transfer. The Auditor-General cannot authorize the payment of a salary on the strength of what some man may tell him regarding what has happened at a caucus, formal or informal, neither can he authorize a salary on a newspaper report, however reliable. There would be nothing to prevent Mr. Borden handing over the salary to any successor he might be willing to acknowledge, but that would be a far different matter from an official transfer. The office seems, in fact, the one permanence in a political system noted as elastic, responsive, and suited to changing needs. Nothing short of the Hayti experiment can depose a leader of the Opposition, and even it an indignant following should force him to take refuge in a foreign Consulate, he could still hold office and demand its emoluments. Before the claims of any successor are pressed the malcontents should devise some method by which the mantle can be transferred to other shoulders.

NOT PARALLEL AT ALL.

The Ottawa Journal has the following:—

"Sir Hector Langevin, though his personal probity was never questioned, was driven out of a Conservative ministry because of the organized pilferings of public moneys in his department. Mr. Justice Cassels is collecting evidence of the sort that should induce the Liberal Government to see a deadly parallel between the things of 1891 and the things of 1908."

The Journal is one of the few journals in Canada that vainly endeavour to conceal their Conservative partyism behind the mask of alleged independence, and their thinly veiled attacks upon Liberalism are even more offensive than those of honest Conservative papers, which make no pretence of concealing the animosity which consumes them against the hated 'Grit."

We would remind the Journal that in the case of the Conservative minister, whose name it forces into the political controversies of the day, regardless of the duty of letting the name of the dead rest, there was a direct, absolute and incontrovertible corrupt collusion between the minister and a contractor, who was also a member of Parliament, to rob the Government and the people of Canada.

The enquiry conducted by Mr. Justice Cassels was instituted by a Liberal Government, regardless of who might be hit in the inquisition. The offences disclosed, and they were grave, were committed by subordinate officers of the Government, most of them appointees of a Conservative Government, and were carried out in the routine of departments work without the possible knowledge of the heads of departments, and in pursuance of old bureaucratic methods. The Government took prompt steps, on this knowledge coming in to its possession, to punish the offenders, and to change the system and the coming session will give the Opposition an opportunity of voting for a measure that it is hoped will forever destroy any possible operation of "grafting" methods in the future.

Between the situation in 1891 and that in 1908, there is no parallel, deadly or otherwise.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Will our Conservative friends who are so horrified by the Ottawa patronage lists take, asks the London Advertiser, a look at the Ontario public accounts for 1907. The attention of local Conservatives is particularly called to pages 140-149, which deal with the London Asylum. The list of names reads like a roll-call of the Conservative executive.

The "Soo" must be an expert at sitting on the ragged edge; that is if a part of all the stories dispatched out about the closing of the steel rail mills are reserved for local consumption. A day or two ago the report was sent out that tthe works were to be closed. That meant a "black" Christmas for hundreds of working men and their families. The latest news, however, is that an unexpected rush of orders warrants the announcement by the managers, that the mills will reopen on Monday with a prospect of continuing operations all winter. Christmas is, therefore, restored to the calendar of a thousand workmen and their families. May their Christmas be all the merrier for the narrow escape it had from being no Christmas at all.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

Conservative Animosity Likely to Disfranchise Ottawa During Session—Church Asks for Dramatic Censorship — Unwise Action of Canadian Japanese Agent — Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Birthday Honoured in England —South African Land Grants.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Dec. 8.—The protest against the election of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the City of Ottawa, which resulted from the animus of a disgruntled contractor is giving the Conservatives of the capital an anxious hour. As is known, it was the intention of the Premier to sit for East Quebec, for which he was also elected, but while the protest proceedings are pending, he will be debarred from making a choice as to which constituency he will elect to represent. It is possible therefore that Ottawa may be practically disfranchised of one of its members during the whole of the approaching Parliamentary term. Some of the irreconcilables still claim that this will be a "moral victory,' but the "Tory" Citizen says: "Can't the Conservative party pretty well feed up on moral victories already?'

At a conference of the Anglican clergy of the city yesterday the whole question of present-day dramatic performances was discussed, with the result that a committee was appointed to consider practical means of controlling the theatre, as to the character of the plays presented in Ottawa. The members of the committee are disposed to urge upon the Dominion Government the necessity of a system of censorship along the lines adopted in England.

The Marine Department investigation will be resumed by Judge Cassels in Ottawa on Tuesday of next week, and it is whispered that some of the old "Tory" appointees are already experiencing a trembling sensation in their shoes.

It is stated that W T R Preston, Canadian Commercial agent in Japan, has instituted action against two of the pincipal newspapers of Japan for reprinting articles from The Colonist, of Victoria, B.C., regarding him during the last election, which statements, he claims, were scandalously false. It is not unlikely that Mr. Preston's faculty for getting into hot water may lead to his recall.

At Tenterden Hall, Middlesex, England, where Postmaster-General Lemieux was on Monday entertained by Sir Hugh and Miss Gilzean-Reid, two prairie maple trees were planted in the grounds—one by the Postmaster-General in recognition of the birthday of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and another by Lady Tenterden, wife of the great grandson of the famous Lord Chief Justice, in honour of the visit of Mr. Lemieux to the "ancestral home." Miss Miller, the Canadian singer, rendered "The Maple Leaf for Ever," the company joining in the chorus. In another part of the grounds Queen Elizabeth planted a cedar of Lebanon, which still flourishes.

Under the act of last session granting lands to the South African Canadian Veterans, three thousand five hundred certificates have already been issued. It is noted, however, that most of the certificates are put on the market, only a small proportion of the "Vets." electing to occupy the land.

Elliott, Morgan and Phelan.

It was moved by Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald Johnston, that a committee composed of the Mayor, Ald. Morrow and Bradburn make a report upon the widening of Louis street.

Property Committee

Ald. Bradburn reported for the Property Committee as follows:

1. That the lot on the river front which R. Sheehy had during the year past be rented to him for another year, at $25 in advance.

2. We instructed the clerk to write to the Board of Trustees of the Nicholls Hospital and the management of St. Joseph's Hospital, and ask them to meet this committee to confer in regard to hospital treatment for patients suffering from contageous diseases.

The Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light Committee and Committee of the Whole Council also made reports.

By-laws Passed

The following by-laws were passed:

THE EXPENDITURES AND PAYMENTS FOR THE FIRST ELEVEN MONTHS OF YEAR---- INTERESTING FIGURES FOR RATEPAYERS

Ald. Morrow reported for the Finance Committee as follows:—

1. That 500 copies of the Times' industrial number be ordered at $10 per 100 copies.

2. That $2 paid as dog taxes by Mrs. M. King, be refunded as a kennel license was afterwards taken out.

3. That the chairman and Ald Bradburn be authorized to settle the matter of the taxes on lots 12 and 15, plan 26, through which Aylmer street was extended, and that the tax collector be authorized to accept the taxes as arranged by them without any added percentage, and to remit such taxes as the city would be liable for, for the part of the land owned by the city.

4. That the rate of interest on the debentures to be issued be 4 1-4 per cent., and that the sinking fund be based on 3 1-2 per cent.

5. That the previous instructions to take proceedings to expropriate land to widen Louis street be rescinded, and that no action be taken on this matter at present.

WAS IN BED FOR THREE MONTHS.

PEOPLE SAID SHE HAD CONSUMPTION.

Read how Mrs. T. G. Buck, Bracebridge, Ont., was cured (and also her little boy) by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

She writes: "I thought I would write and let you know the benefit I have received through the use of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A few years ago I was so badly troubled with my lungs people said I had Consumption and that I would not live through the Fall. I had two doctors attending me and they were very much alarmed about me. I was in bed three months and when I got up I could not walk, so had to go on my hands and knees for three weeks, and my limbs seemed of no use to me. I gave up all hopes of ever getting better when I happened to see in B.B.B. Almanac that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was good for weak lungs. I thought I would try a bottle and by the time I had used it I was a lot better, so got more and it made a complete cure. My little boy was also troubled with weak lungs and it cured him. I keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it for anything."

Price 25 cents at all dealers. Beware of imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Ask for it and insist on getting the original. Put up in a yellow wrapper and three pine trees the trade mark.

ESSAY ON THE ART OF PAINTING

FINE MUSICAL PROGRAMME

On Friday evening last the regular meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. was held, when a very interesting essay on "Art" was read by Miss Mamie McCarthy. The essayist confined her subject almost entirely to painting, and in her introduction pointed out that an artist can never be manufactured any more than one can manufacture gold—the art intellect is born in the true artist. The writer aimed at defining clearly the chief characteristics of greatness in painting and placed as the first, the choice of a noble subject. The artist who make a choice of sacred subjects as Leonardo da Vinci did in his "Last Supper," is a painter of the highest rank, as it implies that he has a natural disposition to dwell on the highest thoughts of which humanity is capable; he who delights in representing the acts and meditations of great men is a painter of the second order and he who represents the passions and events of ordinary life, of the third.

The second characteristic of the great school of art is that it introduces in its conception of its subject as much beauty as is possible, consistently with truth. In this respect schools of art become higher in exact proportion to the degree in which they apprehend and love the beautiful. Thus, the saintly artist monk, Fra Angelico, loving intensely all spiritual beauty, will be of the highest rank; Correggio, loving intensely all physical beauty, of the second rank; and Rubens, apparently insensible to beauty and caring only for truth, of the third rank. The corruption of the schools of high art, so far as this particular quality is concerned, consists in the sacrifice of truth to beauty. Great art dwells on all that is beautiful, but false art changes or omits whatever it considers ugly or objectionable.

The third characteristic of great art is that it includes the largest possible quantity of truth in the most perfect possible harmony. If it were possible for art to give all the truths of nature, it ought to do it. But, as this is not possible, choice must be made of some facts which can be represented, from among others which must be passed over in silence. As its greatness depends on the sum of truth, and this sum of truth can always be increased by delicacy of handling, it follows that all great art must have this delicacy to the utmost possible degree. All coarse work is the sign of low art.

The fourth characteristic of great art is that it must be inventive; that is, produced by the imagination. Hence lower art merely copies what is set before it; while the higher either entirely imagines its subject, or arranges the material presented to it, so as to manifest the imaginative power as much as possible. However, imaginative art always includes some facts as we see them in nature, for creation in its full sense is impossible to man. For example, "The Light of the World," Holman Hunt's great poetical picture, where the Saviour stands knocking at the door, the whole thought and arrangement of the picture is imaginative, but the several details of it are wrought out with simple portraiture; the ivy, the jewels, the creeping plants, and the moonlight, having been calmly studied or remembered from the things themselves.

In conclusion Miss McCarthy pointed out that a painting is nothing unless it expresses thought. The picture which has the nobler and more numerous ideas, however awkwardly expressed, is a greater and a better picture than that which has the less noble and less numerous ideas, however beautifully expressed. No weight, nor beauty of execution can outweigh one grain or fragment of thought. The writer gave as examples of pictures expressing numerous and, of course, well connected, thoughts. "The Highland Shepherd's Chief Mourner," by Sir Edwin Landseer, and "The Last Judgment," by that greatest of artists, Michael Angelo, and her conception of each of these world famous pictures was exceptionally fine.

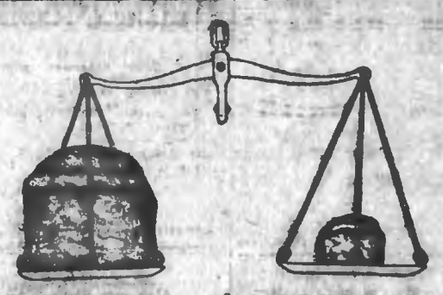
Instrumental duet—Misses Connor.
Vocal solo—Miss Gertrude Delaire.
Instrumental solo — Miss May Trombley.
Vocal solo—Mis Mamie Theobald.
Essay—Miss Mamie McCarthy.
Vocal solo—Miss Clara Tangney.
Instrumental duet—Misses Gorman and Pearce.

The next paper will be read by Miss Alice Moloney on December 18th.

ASTONISHING RESULTS.

Follow Each New Discovery of Science

The great strides that medical science has made in the last few years is due to the germ theory. When the germ of a disease has been discovered the doctors have not been slow in finding a drug to kill it. In a few years, it will be rare to find a bald-headed man or woman. The falling out of hair is due to a dandruff germ, and now it has been discovered how to kill this germ. The remedy used is called Newbros' Herpicide. Its success has been marvelous. Not a failure has so far been reported. It is also a delightful hair dressing free from oil or sticky substances. Try it and be convinced of its actual merit. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for Sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1. McDermid & Jury and Payne's Drug Stores, special agents.



The light bread or the leaden loaf is a matter of choice—not luck. Choice of method—choice of yeast—but, above all, in the choice of the flour. She who chooses will not have to bargain with fortune for successful baking.—It is made from the finest, selected Manitoba wheat, which contains more gluten (that quality which makes bread light) than any other wheat.

It is milled under the most sanitary conditions—absolute purity is one very important quality which the Ogilvie System of milling guarantees. There is no other flour in Canada upon which so much is spent to insure its perfect purity.

Ask your grocer for Ogilvie's Royal Household—the flour that makes light bread.

DRINK PLENTY OF GOOD WATER

Also Valuable Recipe to Relieve Kidney Trouble Anyone Can Prepare

TRY THIS AT YOUR HOME

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water waggon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

To cure rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

COUNCIL THANKS MAYOR RUSH FOR MANNER IN WHICH HIS WORSHIP HAS PRESIDED OVER THE MEETINGS OF YEAR

An unusual feature marked the last regular meeting of the City Council last night, when after the business of the council a vote of thanks was passed to His Worship Mayor Rush for the manner in which he has presided over the meetings of the council in the past year. The motion was carried by a standing vote, and amid the enthusiastic applause of the aldermen.

Ald Phelan, in introducing the motion, said that he thought the thanks of the council were due to Mayor Rush for the excellent manner in which he had presided over the deliberations of the council. It had, he felt been a pleasure to attend the meetings during the year so great had been the harmony existing as the result of the manner in which his Worship had carried out his duties.

Ald. Morrow, in seconding the motion, said that it had indeed been a pleasure for him to attend the council meetings during the past year. At no meeting during the year had it been necessary to move an extension of the time, which he felt sure was a record.

Mayor Rush, in replying to the vote of thanks, which was expressed to him by City Clerk Armstrong, thanked the aldermen for the great honour they had done him. He thought that no similar vote had been passed, and he felt very grateful for the honour. He was glad the meetings during the year had been attended by such harmony. The council was not always unanimous on certain matters; and it was not fitting that they should be so, but there had been little or no friction.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY'S PARCHMENT PRESENTED TO MR. JESSE AIRRIES

A pleasing function added variety to the last regular meeting of the City Council last night, when Mr. Jesse Airries was presented with the parchment of the Royal Humane Society of Canada, for his bravery in rescuing from drowning of little James Butler, in August of this year.

Mayo. Rush made the presentation, and in doing so explained the circumstances of the rescue, stating that young Butler had been bathing and got beyond his depth. Mr. Airries was fishing near by and plunged into the river, saving the boy after considerable difficulty. His act was a brave and laudable act, and Mayor Rush complimented the young man for his heroism, which, he hoped, would be an example to everyone.

PEOPLE WILL VOTE ON BY-LAW TO SPEND $30,000 TO PURCHASE EXHIBITION GROUNDS

The by-law calling for an expenditure of $30,000 for purchasing the Exhibition grounds will be submitted to the people in January, although last night some of the aldermen wanted to leave the matter over for a while fearing that it would endanger the other money by-laws to be submitted in January. Ald Morrow brought up the matter explaining that the by-law for $49,000 for the building of Smith St. bridge, and $25,000 for street extension and other business were to be submitted.

After some discussion, Ald. Morrow, seconded by Ald. Bradburn, moved that the matter be left over until a latter date.

Ald. Butler moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Tovey, that the by-law be submitted to the people at the municipal elections in January.

The amendment was carried by a vote of 6—5, and the amendment will go to the people in January.

POOL ROOM OWNERS ASK THAT THE LICENSE ON TABLES BE REDUCED

At the meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council, Messrs. M Pappas and Hill, and the applicants before the council to ask that a reduction be made in the yearly licenses for pool and billiard tables, urging that the present rate was too high. Mr. D. O'Connell was present and addressed the council upon behalf of the deputation.

Mr. O'Connell said that it would appear that the rate had been established by a very ancient by-law. The rate was $40 per year, for the first table in fact for all tables. In other places the rate was $25 for the first table and $10 for the other tables. Mr. Pappas had already thirteen tables for which he paid $520 per year and was about to install six more which would make a total of $760. In addition he was a heavy ratepayer. Mr. Smythe had eight tables for which he paid $320 per year, and a bowling alley which cost him a licence fee of $50.

Mr. O'Connell pointed out that there were clubs in which there were pool tables from which no revenue came to the city, and he submitted that this was an unfair discrimination against those in business. While the by-law might have been all right when it was drawn up the conditions were different now, and he asked that a reduction be made.

Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. Neill, that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee to report as soon as possible.

Mr. Hickey waited upon the Board in regard to the opening of Aberdeen avenue.

It was moved by Ald. McIntyre, seconded by Ald. Elliott, that a drain be constructed on Bethune street, from what point may be necessary above Smith street, to Aberdeen Ave., and along Sheridan avenue to the Communication road.

The motion was defeated and the Board of Works will have to wrestle with the matter again.

CITY ENGINEER RECOMMENDS THAT THE ROMAINE STREET SEWER BE RE-BUILT

That old bugbear of the council the Romaine street sewer was once more before the aldermen last night, when a report was read from the City Engineer, recommending that the sewer be rebuilt, and the result was a long discussion over the matter, with the final result that it was left in the hands of the Board of Works again.

The report from the engineer was as follows:

In reply to your inquiry as to the advisability of re-constructing Romaine street sewer; in September, 1906, when the sewer was first ordered to be built, I strongly advocated the route via Princess street to Lock street, but was over-ruled and Romaine street route was adopted. Since then Romaine street has been well built up on the south side, besides two new churches and the school and therefore requires a sewer. Having ascertained by experience the nature of the ground, the difficulties met with when building can now be guarded against by laying the pipe and manholes on timber (as was done recently in Toronto where similar difficulties were experienced and half a mile of sewer had to be re-constructed) and the passage under the G.T.R. laid with a new cast iron pipe. In rebuilding, a 12 in. pipe instead of a 9 in. pipe should be used as I advised in the first place, but was over-ruled in that. The man hole on the school connection built by the School Board should be re-built as it also has sunk.

As the past season has been exceptionally dry, this would be the most favourable time to undertake the work of rebuilding, commencing in January which with favourable weather and a strong gang, should be completed in about 3 weeks. If this is decided on, application for crossing the G.T.R. should be made at once.

In the discussion that followed Ald. Neill advocated going ahead with the work as recommended by the City Engineer, at once, and moved along that line, seconded by Ald. McIntyre.

Ald. Morgan thought that the council should wait until Engineer Chipman arrived and took the levels there and made a report. Ald. Bradburn, Ald. Tovey and other aldermen were dubious as to whether or not a sufficient fall could be obtained along Romaine street, and several suggestions were made in regard to the matter, which was finally left in the hands of the Board of Works.

The result is very pleasing to the eye and is appreciated by the members. The work was done by Mr. J. P. Shevlin.

MOTHERS ATTENTION?

Your Delicate Child May Be Restored To Health by Vinol—Read The Following Letter From a Canton, O., Mother.

"I wish I could induce every mother who has a weak, sickly child, to try that delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol. Our little daughter was pale, thin and sickly. She had no appetite and no ambition.

"We tried various medicines, but without any benefit whatever, and she could not take cod liver oil or emulsions, as they nauseated her and upset her stomach.

"Learning that Vinol contains all the medicinal and strength-creating properties of cod liver oil, but without the disagreeable oil, and tonic iron added, we decided to try it, and the results were marvellous .It gave her a hearty appetite; the colour returned to her cheeks and she is stronger and in better health than she has been for years.

There is nothing equal to Vinol for delicate, ailing children and feeble old people ,to build up strength and restore a normal healthy condition. Those who try it and receive no benefit may have their money returned on demand—that's your guarantee: McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets, also, Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets, Peterborough.

SURPRISED THE YOUNG PEOPLE

Rev. J. R. Webb, Assisted by His Wife, Provided Pleasant Evening.

Webb, conducts one of the meetings of the Young People's Society, and last night this occasion came around again. The subject of his address to the members was "A Consistent Christian Life." There was a good attendance and the address from its profitable points and the interesting manner in which they were presented was greatly enjoyed.

At the conclusion, Rev. Mr. Webb, assisted by Mrs. Webb, had a very pleasant surprise for the young people. Refreshments which had been unannounced were provided, and a pleasant social hour was spent. The young men and women expressed their appreciation of the kindness of the pastor and his wife, having thoroughly enjoyed the meeting.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys every three minutes.

They work night and day to daily remove about 500 grains of impure matter. If they fail some part of this impure matter is left in the blood, bringing on pain in the back, headache, dizziness, irregular heart, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gravel, dropsy, deposits in the urine. Booth's Kidney Pills make the filtering right and overcome kidney trouble. Hundreds of Peterborough County residents have found this out.

Mrs. John Wallace, of No. 323 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says: "I had suffered with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble for over two years and could find nothing that would benefit my condition. My back was weak and a dull, heavy pain settled across the small of it, extending into my sides and shoulders. I could not sleep at night as the kidney secretions were so frequent and irregular that I would have to leave my bed a number of times. I was dizzy and weak and would usually awake with a dull headache. Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McDirmid and Jury's drug store, cured me when all else failed. I am stronger and feel better generally. I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, and I would not be without a box in the house."

Ward System Of Electing Aldermen Not For This Year

Council Turn Down Proposed Vote on Such a By-law—Petition Presented Signed by 250 Ratepayers.

ONE CHANGE NOW PROPOSED

The people of Peterborough will not have an opportunity of voting on whether or not they favour a return to the ward system of electing aldermen. Last night a petition was submitted to the council signed by 250 ratepayers, asking that the ward system be adopted, but the aldermen were evidently not in favour of the proposition and when taken up in the committee of the whole council, a motion that a by-law be submitted to the people was defeated by a vote of 7—4.

To the Honourable Mayor and Aldermen of the City Council of Peterborough—

We, the undersigned ratepayers, whose names are here subscribed, do hereby humbly ask and request by this petition that the present council will take into due consideration and will take such action as will be necessary to introduce and adopt a by-law to repeal the present system of electing representatives of the people to the City Council. Also that the ratepayers will have the privilege of voting upon the adoption of such by-law at the coming election of our city council. Further we humbly ask that the present city council will take immediate action on the introduction of such by-law by giving such readings as the same may require at their regular meeting or otherwise at special meetings."

When the matter came up, Ald. Bradburn asked what right the council had to make any change in the system.

Ald. Morrow understood that application should be submitted before Nov. 1st, and that it must be signed by 30 per cent. of the ratepayers.

The City Solicitor explained that the council was not compelled to submit a by-law unless such conditions were carried out, but they could submit a by-law if they wanted.

Ald. Morgan moved seconded by Ald. Buller, that a by-law be prepared and submitted to the people at the January elections in regard to a return to the ward system.

The motion was defeated by the following vote—

Ayes—Aldermen Morgan, Buller, Tovey and McIntyre.

When the matter came up in the council again a similar motion was defeated by the same vote, after a short discussion. Ald. Elliott said that while he was not opposed to the ward system, yet he felt after going to the Legislature for power to elect aldermen for two years it looked very foolish to go talking about another change.

FARMERS MUST CHANGE THEIR WAYS

President Brodie Discusses Farming at Guelph Fair.

FARMERS NOW "MINE" LAND

Chief of Winter Fair Association in Opening Address Makes a Plea For Intensive Farming in Ontario—Prof. Zavitz Speaks on Forestry Problems — Favors Big Purchases by the Government.

Guelph, Dec. 8.—Although the Guelph Winter Fair, the second largest of its kind on the continent of America, did not open its doors to the public until yesterday morning, practically the Ontario agricultural festival commenced on Saturday. The fair has now been established for a quarter of a century, and its growth has been, in a measure, an indication of the development of the farming industry in the banner province of the Dominion.

The statement made, therefore, at its opening session by its president, Mr. G. A. Brodie of Bethesda, to the effect that Ontario farmers must radically alter their ways if, as agriculturists, they intend to maintain their position as leaders of the world, is of exceptional interest. Mr. Brodie, in his address at the Ontario Agricultural College, contended that Ontario farmers must pay more attention in the future to intensive farming. Bitten with the fever of land greed, that has so declared itself in the west, he said that the farmers in Ontario "mined" their land rather than farmed it.

Another interesting address delivered at the union was that of Prof. E. J. Zavitz, in which he discussed the forestry problem. He points out that in Ontario there were many hundreds of square miles of land absolutely unsuitable for agricultural purposes. On some of those areas, in the effort to make them fruitful, there had already been expended "three generations"—"lives," as he termed it, "of blood, sweat and tears, at a net profit of $3.75 per acre." Far better, in view of the ever-increasing timber problem, that these districts should again come under the control of the crown, and be made to supply to future generations wealth and its concomitants in timber.

Premier Not In Wreck.

Ottawa, Dec. 8.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier is in Ottawa and has been for some days.

Nevertheless last night an Associated Press despatch had the Premier in a railway mix-up in Minnesota, the despatch reading:

"St. Vincent, Minn., Dec. 8.—Two cars on a Great Northern local train from St. Paul were thrown into a ditch at St. Vincent yesterday by a broken rail. In one of the cars was Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, who was among the passengers shaken up, although no one was hurt."

To Prove Thaw Sane.

Pittsburg, Dec. 8.—The reproduction of a story written by Harry K. Thaw, in a society journal reaching all the social world of Pittsburg, has started a report that Mrs. William Thaw and Mrs. Copley Thaw, mother and sister of White's slayer, have begun a campaign to establish a general belief in Thaw's sanity.

The story is called "A Beginner in the High Alps." It was written by Thaw in prison, and appeared in an eastern publication some time ago. It is reproduced here by request of the mother and sister of Thaw.

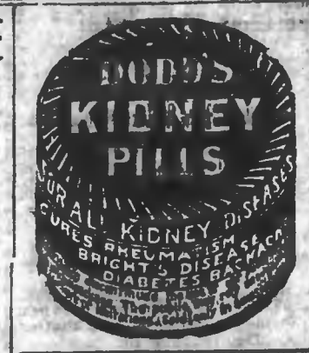
Valuable Jewelry.

Stratford, Dec. 8.—John F. Hamlet, a Dane from Toronto, arrested here, had in his possession a valuable lot of jewelry. He had taken quarters at a local hotel, and when arrested his outfit was tabulated by the police. It comprised several valuable diamonds, rings, watches and other articles. The prisoner is believed to have been implicated in several robberies in Ontario, and the police consider they have landed a dangerous man. He will be given a hearing before Magistrate O'Loane to-day.

Killed Felling Tree.

Quebec, Dec. 8.—Captain Levien Boillon, an old and well-known navigator, was killed yesterday morning by a tree that he was felling crushing his skull.

"WOMEN!"
" Are You Nervous?"
The results of modern civilization are evidenced in an increase of nervous disorders. It could not be otherwise with the way we eat, drink, lose sleep, and keep up a continual round of excitement. The work, the worry, the excitement, all tell upon the nerves till they cry out in revolt, and will not be pleased till a remedy such as
MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS
come along with their nerve-strengthening and energizing properties, and restore them to their normal condition.
Mrs. Wm. Levi, Markdale, Ont., writes: "I had for several years been troubled with nervousness, and, like many others, spent lots of money on medicine that did me no good. I was so bad that the least noise would make me jump and my heart would thump so you could hear it plainly and I could not lie on my left side at night. I saw a few testimonials of others and decided to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and to my great joy and surprise they completely cured me and it only took six boxes to do it. I have a neighbor, Mrs. Rickett, and I induced her to try them and they effected a cure. I can endorse their use for anyone afflicted as I was."
Price, 50 cents a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.



GERMANY PLEASED WITH AGREEMENT

WILL BE STORM IN SENATE

Hot Debate In U. S. Upper House Is Expected as Result of Conclusion of Verbal Agreement Without a Formal Treaty—Germany Has an Identical Understanding With Japan Regarding China.

Berlin, Dec. 8.—Chancellor Von Buelow, during the budget debate in the Reichstag yesterday, referring to the American-Japanese agreement, said:

"The new arrangement is thoroughly in harmony with the principles of Germany's policy in the Far East, the principles of the 'open door' economically, the preservation of the status quo territorially, and the integrity and independence of the Chinese empire. We have no occasion to regard the agreement otherwise than sympathetically."

Answering a complaint that Germany was left out of the American-Japanese agreement, the chancellor called attention to the fact that Germany already has a precisely similar arrangement with Japan, through an exchange of notes. Japan explicitly accepted the principles of the Anglo-German agreement of 1900, which guarantees the maintenance of the "open door" and the territorial status quo.

Warm Time In Sight.

Washington, Dec. 8.—The indications are that the Japanese-American entente designed to protect the territorial integrity of China will be the subject of a great deal of debate in executive session of the United States Senate during the present session.

The fact that such an agreement has been entered into through diplomatic exchanges between Japan and the United States without the formality of a treaty is not acceptable to Democratic leaders. As a result they propose to institute an enquiry to determine the exact form of the understanding between the two countries with a view to showing, if possible, that the agreement in fact, is a treaty.

If a controversy should be raised in the Senate over the question as to whether the President and Secretary of State were usurping constitutional powers of the Senate, it is likely that disposition of the question will be postponed until after the adjournment of the present session.

In this event the probability is that Mr. Root will be one of the Senators from New York and he would be expected to take an active part in the defence of the right of the President to engage in relations with foreign Governments along the line of the Japanese-American agreement.

Check Distresses Kaiser.

Potsdam, Dec. 8.—The Emperor who has been living in seclusion since Nov. 1, yesterday resumed audiences with reference to official business.

The Emperor is described as being greatly depressed by recent events and not disposed to talk even to members of his household, as he feels deeply his loss of prestige abroad and among his own people. The Emperor feels grieved that old loyal Ministers, as well as Chancellor Von Buelow, should desire to limit his freedom of speech in his after-dinner conversations, even though with foreigners.

Port Arthur's Utilities.

Port Arthur, Dec. 8.—In connection with the municipal elections the ratepayers will decide by plebiscite whether to continue to run municipal franchises by an elective commission of experts, removed from the influence of annual elections, or whether they shall be leased to private companies. The ratepayers will also vote on a bylaw to raise 25,000 for street railway extension.

Arrested at Rifle's Point.

St. Catharines, Dec. 8.—Held up at the point of rifles in the hands of two determined young farmers, George North and Seymour Wilson, two men who gaves their names as John Doyle and James Schram, were captured early Sunday morning in Grantham Township, and yesterday were committed for trial by Magistrate Campbell.

Want Strang For Railway Board.

Winnipeg, Dec. 8.—At a special meeting of the Board of Trade yesterday morning, at which Hon. Frank Oliver attended, Andrew Strang, Winnipeg, was recommended to fill the vacancy on the Railway Commission, caused by the death of Hon. Thomas Greenway.

Carnegie Library For Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 8.—The City Council last night decided to submit a bylaw to the electors for $3,000 to purchase a site for a Carnegie Library. Mr. Carnegie makes a grant of $12,500 for the building if the city provides the site.

Congress In Session.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Both Houses of Congress held brief sessions yesterday. Big crowds attended the opening.

NO LOCAL OPTION VOTE FOR A YEAR

Brantford Council Throws Out Temperance Measure.

BRAMPTON SEEMS OPPOSED

Its Council Makes Slow Progress With Bylaw and Opinion of Councillors Is Against It—Big Crowd Present When Brantford Kills Plebiscite Motion by a Narrow Majority of One—Came as a Surprise.

Brantford, Dec. 8.—Brantford City Council by a vote of 7 to 6 knocked out the local option bylaw last night. The council chamber was packed.

The council went into committee of the whole, where the bylaw was when the temperane aldermen bolted a week ago, leaving no quorum.

Ald. Suddaby, who previously supported the bylaw, was put in the chair. Before the vote was taken ex-Magistrate Woodyatt addressed the council on behalf of the license holders, and E. Sweet followed for the local optionists. There was no discussion.

Ald. Andrews and Draper, previously supporters, refused to vote, while Ald. Blakney voted that the bylaw be struck out.

The result was scarcely anticipated and caused a gloom among the temperance workers.

Before proceeding with business, Mayor Bowlby intimated that anyone making a demonstration or addressing an alderman would be arrested. Four policemen were kept in the lobby. A report from the city engineer declaring the council chamber unsafe for a crowd was also read and no one moved during the proceedings.

Before adjournment a resolution was submitted that local option ought to go to the people in January. The resolution was lost, Mayor Bowlby tieing the vote by voting nay.

The council will meet again Wednesday evening, when the hydro-electric power bylaw to expropriate the lighting plant of the Western Counties Power Co. will be given necessary readings.

Brampton Slow.

Brampton, Dec. 8.—The local option bylaw had another airing in the council chambers last night, but no further progress was made. Councillor Ashley again moved the adoption of the first clause. Richard Watson, who had opposed its adoption a week ago, received new light in the meantime and supported it, but Dr. Sharpe, who was favorable last week, voted against, leaving the vote 3 for and 4 against.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

There was a fall of 10 inches of snow in Montreal yesterday.

Flavelles, Limited, of Lindsay, lost two carloads of turkeys, valued at $12,000, in the dock fire at Portland, Me., Thursday night.

A paper known as The Northern Light has been started at Athabasca, and is probably the most northerly publication in the world.

The oil tank steamer Oriflamme, oil-laden, from Philadelphia Nov. 25 for Cette, France, was towed into Halifax in a disabled condition yesterday morning.

At New York, Louis Evans, aged 19, shot himself dead in the Riverside Hospital, North Brothers' Island, where he had been under treatment for consumption for four months.

Baby Carriages Excluded.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 8.—To prevent the spread into Canada of the foot and mouth disease vehicular traffic is completely suspended between the two cities on either bank of the Niagara river.

An order just issued prevents all vehicles from crossing the bridges; baby carriages and sleighs are not excepted. The bridges are also fumigated at intervals daily.

It is rumored that pedestrians will not be allowed to cross the bridges, but this is not likely, as the more mild measure of having a disinfecting mat, to wipe their boots on, is probable.

Burglars at Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, Dec. 8.—A. C. Thoburn's drug store was burglarized Sunday night, $17 being stolen. Part of this sum belonged to the N., St. C. & T. Railway, which lost $500 by burglary at another of its offices ten days ago.

CHURCH LEAGUE LAUNCHED LAST NIGHT WITH SEVEN TEAMS AND IN CHARGE OF GOOD OFFICERS

Mr. E. N. McWilliams Elected President—Everything Points to Successful Season—Rules and Regulations Formulated—Junior and Senior Series.

OTHER TEAMS EXPECTED

Seven churches were represented at the meeting in the Y. M. C. A. last night, when a Church Hockey League was organized and from present indications there should be some fast games materialize between the clubs which will put teams on the ice.

The George Street Methodist Church was represented by Stanley Wade St. Andrew's by Ernie Reid; Murray Street Baptist by B. Miller; St. John's by C. Halpany; Park Street Baptist by Fred Reed; Knox Church by Fred Reed; and All Saints' by Harry Flowers.

In each church boys' clubs have been formed and it is from these that the players will be drawn for the league games. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Patrons and Patronesses—The ministers of the various churches and their wives.

Hon. President—Dr. Wightman.

Hon. Vice-President—Dr. Middleton.

President—Mr. N. E. McWilliams.

Vice-President—Ernie F. Reid.

Secretary-Treasurer—Fred Reed.

The executive committee will be composed of one representative from each club.

It is the intention to have a junior and senior league with the above officers doing duty for both.

The next work was the discussion of the rules which should govern the league and the players. Every player must be a member of a club before the first day of September of the current year.

No player will be eligible to play in the Church League after playing in two games in any other league.

No player who plays in two games in the senior Church League will be allowed to play in the junior Church League.

Those eligible to play in the junior league are those who were under eighteen on the first of December.

The entrance fee was placed at one dollar. Each club must also deposit a guarantee of three dollars for a senior team and two dollars for a junior team.

Each team is allowed fifteen certificates.

The ice on which the games will be played are the Knox and Park street rinks.

A meeting is called for Thursday evening, December 17th, at 8 o'clock, when all the teams intending to enter must be represented, and must have their entrance fee as well as their guarantee deposits.

With the above rules and with a body of officers under Mr. McWilliams, whose experience should carry the league along successfully, there is bound to be good hockey and it will scarcely by surprising if some of them do not come up to City Senior League standard.

BANKERS TAKE TWO OF THREE GAMES FROM THE FRONTENACS

The Bankers won two of three games from the Frontenacs, Lang's team, in the ten pin league series at the P.B.C. last night and thus clinched their hold on first place with a record of eight wins and only one loss. The Midgets are a fairly good second.

The game was hard fought and exciting throughout and on total pinnage the losers had just a shade the better of the contest, their aggregate showing a majority of ten pins to the good at the finish of the third game, the large total in the final contest giving them the advantage.

In the first game the bowling was not of a very high order, the Bankers winning out by twenty-two pins, but it improved in the second game when only fifteen pins separated the teams.

In this game the first and only fouls of the night were called, Hoolahan being the offender on two occasions. On one the lost a strike, and as subsequent events proved, this might have easily turned the tide of victory in the Frontenacs' direction.

In the last and deciding game of the evening the Frontenacs rolled well together and won by a majority of 48 pins, Lang incidentally rolling up the highest single of the evening 185.

Hoolahan had the highest total of the night with 472 closely followed by Ford of the Bankers.

The work of the winners was characterized by the same excellent team work that has marked their games since the opening of the league, all three working together like a machine.

To-night the Examiner A team and the B. A. C. will be the attraction, and the Exam has a surprise up its sleeve Geo. Cairns having decided to give his valuable services to the team.

A HOCKEY ORGANIZATION TO GOVERN ALL CLUBS IN THE CITY

The proposal to form in Peterborough a hockey organization to concontrol all branches of that sport is being considered and there will likely be a meeting this week to discuss the matter. Those who are interested believe that if such an organizaiont were instituted it would have a direct tendency towards the unifying of sport and would be a step in advance towards the formation of the athletic association talked of which would govern all lines of sport.

The hockey organization would have as one of its chief objects the arrangements with the rink company. No club under its supervision would therefore secure undue privileges—all would be treated as fairly as possible. Players, too, would get what is coming to them. In the selection of the players for an O.H.A. team for any series the officials of the supreme organization would do so regardless of the desires of any particular club and therefore the best possible teams would be placed on the ice.

These are but a few of the many benefits suggested and at the meeting to discuss this new organization, the project will be fully explained.

QUAKERS ARE ANXIOUS TO SEE MERCANTILE LEAGUE FORMED

The Quaker Oats hockey boys met last night when they organized for the coming winter and are prepared to enter the Mercantile League, if some of the other teams who played last year, and who are talking of entering this league, will do so. They will have a good line-up and are looking forward to the formation of a league before all the hours for the rink are spoken for. The G. T. R., Cressman's and other are of the same feeling and want to see the league got under way. The players think that it is up to some of those who are managers or factory owners to call a meeting at an early date and consider the advisability of forming the league. Everyone who has been spoken to so far thinks that the league would be a success.

HOAGLAND WINS FAST RACE FROM ERIE WALKER

The Erie Dispatch says:—Willard Hoagland, the touted middle-distance walker of Auburn, N.Y., made good at the Casino Rink last night every promise made by his manager, defeating E. H. Hubbell, the Erie pedestrian, in a 10-mile heel-and-toe match, by a distance of less than one full lap, 17 of which were required to make a mile. No better sporting event has been witnessed in Erie in many a day, a statement that any one of the 400 spectators who witnessed the match will verify.

Mr. Hubbell's exhibition was one that commanded the best efforts of his adversary and brought an equal share of applause. When Hoagland crossed the line on the last lap of the race Hubbell was rounding the far turn to the half-lap point, just 30 seconds in the rear. Hoagland's time was 1 hour 24 minutes and 16 seconds, and Hubbell's time was 1 hour 24 minutes and 45 seconds.

Hoagland Takes Early Lead

The Auburn contestant got away from the line ahead of his opponent, jumping to a lead of five yards on the first lap. This advantage he gradually strengthened, sprinting all the way and displaying the stride which has won for him over 300 races.

When the first mile had been covered, Hoagland seemed to gain even more speed and after the two men had raced abreast over the final lap of the third mile, Hoagland lurched ahead as they crossed the line and maintained the lead of one lap to the finish.

After Hoagland had taken the measure of his opponent there were many of the spectators who looked for a recurrence of the feat every mile or so. But as the mile cards went up and still Hoagland had not gained an additional inch, the crowd realized that a tough contest was on tap and even if Hubbell could not cut down his opponent's lead he was firm in his determination to keep the breach from growing wider.

A Clean Contest

From the standpoint of a true sportsman, no cleaner exhibition of any kind has ever been witnessed in Erie. Both men agreed to the rules laid down by the referee before the match and neither man made the slightest attempt to violate. The admonition of the referee was that two warnings would be given for infractions of the agreement and forfeiture for the third offense. The first warning was not given. This fact speaks well for both contestants, as well as their managers, W. G. Dey Monde of Auburn, and Mr. Benning, of Erie.

Five musicians served to keep the enthusiasm among the spectators at a high pitch.

Y. M. C. A. TO PROVIDE RINK FOR BOYS

Another rink in prospect for the city is that which the Y.M.C.A. will prepare for the members of the association, mostly the juniors. It will be built on the lot to the south of the building, and will be sufficiently large for a good game of hockey. With all the rinks that are now assured there should be some hockey and skating in the city this winter.

BASKETBALL GAMES ARE BOOKED FOR LOCALS

It looks as if there is going to be some fast basket ball for several of the Y. M. C. A. teams between now and New Year's. The Midland Seniors are slated to appear in the local "gym," against the Tigers, on New Year's eve. The locals will try to turn the tables on the quintette from Georgian Bay.

The seniors will journey to Toronto on the 15th, to meet the fast team at the Central Y. M. C. A. It is very likely that the seniors will take a New Year's trip to Ottawa and Montreal. These trips are offering great inducements to the boys to get into the game and there will likely be a close run for a position on the teams that make the trips.

BOWLING

Bowling at the Y.M.C.A. alleys is coming along fast and the interest is growing every week. Mr. Ernie Bruce holds the highest score for this month so far, having rolled up 209 last night. The attempts to make high scores are making things interesting and the game is proving a success. A league has been formed with five teams contesting and the following schedule has been drawn up:

Thursday, Dec. 10—Happy Thoughts vs. Chieftains, Staff vs. Methodists, M.A.S. vs. Leaders.

Monday, Dec. 14—Staff vs. Happy Thoughts, Chieftains vs. M.A.S., Methodists vs. Leaders.

Thursday, Dec. 17—Happy Thoughts vs. Methodists, Chieftains vs. Leaders, Staff vs. M.A.S.

SHRINKAGE ONE-FIFTH.

Sir Geo. Drummond Discusses Trade Depression In America.

Montreal, Dec. 8.—The annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal was held yesterday, with the president, Sir Geo. Drummond, in the chair.

Sir Geo. Drummound said: "A year ago business in the United States was staggering under a sudden collapse of credit and acute money stringency, while in Canada the brakes had been applied and the slowing down process had begun.

"The check had been beneficial and financial affairs are now on a sound basis.

"To-day the situation is much improved, confidence has been largely restored, credit is again good, the money markets of the world are abnormally easy, but the volume of trade has been considerably diminished, measured by the value of imports. The shrinkage in Canada within a year has been approximately 20 per cent., namely, from $362,460,000 to $297,300,000, the figures being for the twelve months ending Oct. 1, 1907, and 1908, respectively. On the other hand, the value of domestic exports in the same period has been well maintained, being $231,500,000, as against $244,300,000 last year.

"The past year certainly was, and the present holds out the prospect of being, emphatically the era of railway construction. The Grand Trunk Pacific, between Prince Rupert and Moncton, is likely to occupy a considerable time, while it cannot be overlooked that most of the other railways in the country have been occupied with extensions much greater than the public have any idea of. For example, the C.P.R., at the end of June, had over 700 miles under contruction in different sections of the country, and the Canadian Northern was also engaged in increasing its mileage in Quebec and the western provinces."

STUDENTS PUNISHED.

Five Are Fined $10 for Rowdyism In Kingston Street Fight.

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 8.—Police Magistrate Farrell yesterday levied a fine of $10 and costs each on five students of Queen's University, arrested on Saturday night for participating in the riot on Princess street. The charge of interfering with the police was not pressed.

The culprits pleaded guilty, not as individuals, but as representing the student body.

The student prisoners were attended in court by Principal Gordon, Dean Connell of the Medical College, and Francis King, barrister.

Queen's students marched in a body to the Police Court, but were refused admission.

When Mayor Ross crossed the market square a crowd of students, awaiting the result in the Police Court case, hooted at him and some yelled "Traitor," because on Saturday night he refused to use his efforts to free the arrested students.

Code For Naval Warfare.

London, Dec. 8.—The business section of the international conference now being held in London to frame a code for naval warfare held its first session yesterday.

The delegates read the proposals of their respective Governments and then elaborated them in short speeches. This was followed by a brief preliminary discussion.

It has been decided to hold meetings three times a week and to adjourn over the Christmas holidays.

The social entertainment of the delegates will begin Dec. 10 with a dinner to the delegates and their secretaries by the Earl of Desart.

Cruiser Badly Buffeted.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 8.—With her wireless telegraph mast broken off at the heel, a petty officer fatally injured, doors broken in, a boat swept away, and minor injuries inflicted in different parts of the ship, H. M. S. Brilliant lies in the dockyard, her officers and crew thankful to be in harbor again. The cruiser left St. John's, Nfld., for this port on Wednesday morning. With ordinary weather she would have tied up at the dockyard on Friday morning. As it was, she did not tie up until Sunday morning, encased in ice.

Keep Out the Japs.

Vancouver, Dec. 8.—County Court Judge Grant announced yesterday morning that no longer will his court be allowed to use as a medium for the railroading of Japanese into the favored realm of British citizenship. Judge Grant declared that the usual formal certificates by notaries, giving statements of good character, will not hereafter be allowed, but that the strictest requirements of the law must be complied with.

Murderer Attacks Guard.

Vancouver, Dec. 8.—With the hope of being shot and killed in a melee and thereby avoid hanging John Pertella, colored, made a vicious attack on Warden Bryner in the provincial jail, New Westminister. Pertella is to hang with two others Friday week. The crime was the murder of his mistress in Vancouver last August.

Mrs. Maybrick's Big Win.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 8.—The case of Mrs. Florence Maybrick and her mother, Baroness von Roque of New York, involving title to lands said to be worth about two and a half million dollars, was decided yesterday in their favor in the Chancery Court here.

Smallpox Costly.

Brockville, Dec. 8.—The last smallpox epidemic in Brockville cost the municipality $6,485 for 79 cases. The town is constructing a new isolation hospital, which will be ready for occupation by the first of the new year.

CHIPPAWA MAN THREATENED.

J. F. Macklem Receives Letter From Black Hand.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 8.—The Black Hand, that mysterious Italian organization that resorts to violence when its demands are not complied with, has made its appearance at Chippawa, and the life of the wealthiest resident in the village is threatened. Now every citizen is moving about armed and sleeping with a pistol under his pillow.

On Friday last, presumably late in the afternoon, a letter was placed under the door of James F. Macklem's office, which adjoins his home, directing that he leave $1,000 beside the horse block that night or his home would be burned to the ground. The letter was crude in construction, but the author made plain his demands.

Mr. Macklem moved his valuables from the house and at once notified the police. Detectives set to watch and pursued two strange foreigners. Revolvers were freely used, but the men escaped. Another case has been reported.

MUSTN'T HURRY.

Premier Fisher of Australia Partly Approves Council Scheme.

Melbourne, Dec. 8.—(C.A.P.)—Referring to the proposal of Lord Rosebery's committee to reform the House of Lords, Mr. Andrew Fisher, Australia's Labor Premier, says that if the nominees of the oversea states can make known the views of the states they represent without binding them, nothing but good can come of the proposal, but attempts to hurry on the creation of an Imperial Council will defeat their own object, though such a council is not impossible in the future. The Canadian Associated Press is informed that the present Government intends to take no action on the report.

LIBERALS WILL GO IN.

Calder and Motherwell Are Elected In Western Bye-Elections.

Winnipeg, Dec. 8.—Bye-elections were held in Humboldt and Saltcoats, Saskatchewan, yesterday, owing to the resignation of Dr. Neely and J. N. McNutt, who were elected to the Dominion Parliament.

Hon. J. A. Calder and Hon. W. R. Motherwell, who were defeated in the provincial election last September, were the Liberal candidates. Returns up to midnight indicate that both Calder and Motherwell will be elected by large majorities.

Does Electrocution Kill?

Albany, Dec. 8.—Speaking of the report from Trenton, N.J., that efforts are to be made by county and prison physicians to revive the victim of the next electrocution at the state prison there for the purpose of proving or disproving the theory that has been expounded, that electrocution only stuns the victims, who are later killed by the surgeon's knife during the autopsy, Superintendent Hollins of the state prison gave the opinion that when the contacts are made properly the man is dead before the surgeon's knife touches him.

No Need For Y.M.C.A.

Guelph, Dec. 8.—There is no need for a Y.M.C.A. in a city the size of Guelph, said Rev. C. H. Buckland of St. James' Church, when speaking on the subject, "If all the Sunday schools and churches did their duty."

He went on to say that he believed every school house ought to be fitted with a gymnasium, churches and Sunday school halls should remain open all week, and the Carnegie public library reading room should remain open on Sunday afternoons for the benefit of the young men.

Mrs. Ingersoll's Win.

Washington, Dec. 8.—The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday decided in favor of Mrs. Ingersoll, widow of the late Robert G. Ingersoll, against Joseph Coran and others, involving a claim of $100,000 by Mrs. Ingersoll on account of services rendered by her husband in breaking the will of the late Andrew J. Davis, a Montana millionaire.

Smith Cheese Factory Made Progress Under Ald. Gillespie

He Recalled the Past Eleven Years' Business Done at the Factory—Total of $231,606 Received.

IT IS A MODERN FACTORY

Probably none of those who were present at the Central Smith cheese factory were more interested in the affair than Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie. For five years he was engaged as maker at the fourth line factory and although the equipment was not as modern as it is now, the record he established was one to be proud of. Smith cheese by the excellence of its quality has always been of the best that this country produces, and Peterborough cheese has a reputation on the market.

Mr. Gillespie commenced his duties in charge of Central Smith factory in the year 1898, the gross earnings of his first term being $10,138.13. Each year found the business increasing until in 1902 the gross earnings were $23,869.05. Thus in the fifth, his last year the patrons of the factory received considerably more than double the amount from the first year's earnings under Mr. Gillespie's management and the foundation of a successful dairy business for Central Smith was assured. At present the factory is one of the best equipped in the district, and this fact is in itself a good advertisement. It is probable that before next year there will still be other improvements which will increase the facilities of manufacture and bring the patrons even higher returns.

In addressing the people at the meeting on Friday night Mr. Gillespie stated that he always looked forward to this affair. He had attended them all during the past eleven years and he was proud to witness the growing prosperity of the factory and the continued high quality of the butter and cheese that is being manufactured. In conclusion he read the following statistics showing the total amount of money that the patrons of Central Smith factory had received during the past 11 years and also the total amount of money that had been received.

HOLIDAY GIFTS FOR CHRISTMAS REMEMBRANCE

Just now many, and perhaps most of our readers are occupying their minds with the holiday presents that mark this era in our annual lives, in every family where the amenities of refined life are observed. This annual interchange of the gifts of love and friendship is one of the highest attributes of modern life, and constitutes a duty to which the best attention of the better people is carefully given.

While the growing aesthetic taste among cultivated people has consigned the cheap and tawdry gifts that used to do duty for the occasion, to the limbo of the things that we have outgrown, the more educated taste now looks to the combination of artistic beauty with practical utility or intrinsic value in the selection of holiday gifts, and instinctively turns for satisfaction to the jewellery store where the achievements of the schools of art and design and the art of the gold and silversmith unite in presenting a field of choice where all needs and all tastes can be abundantly gratified. These suggestion are impressed upon one's mind by a visit to, or even a passing by, the magnificent display on exhibition at the store of MILBURN, the Jeweller, at 349 George street. If it be true that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever, here are joys enough for all eternity. Anyone who can at all appreciate the most exquisite achievements of artistic merit here exemplified in a thousand articles designed for use or ornament, or combining the requirements of both, should call at this store and examine the lovely array of goods now on display and at the command of the holiday purchaser. Clocks, watches, rings, pins, bracelets and articles of vertu are in a bewildering array of ravishing beauty. Whether you buy or not, the visit will repay you, but when you come to learn of the amazingly moderate prices at which these elegant goods are being offered for the holiday trade, you will be more than human if you can resist the temptation and the unprecedented inducements to buy. MILBURN, the Jeweller 349 George street.

GEORGE STREET W.F.M.S. WERE ENTERTAINED

Enjoyable Meeting Was Held at the Residence of Mrs. Lindsay.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the George Street Methodist Church, was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. H. P. Lindsay, when the members were most pleasantly entertained by Mrs. Lindsay and Mrs. Jas. Stubbs. There was a large attendance and the session was profitable and enjoyable. After the regular business of the meeting was transacted a short but delightful programme was rendered. Miss Pilling and Mrs. Wood gave enjoyable vocal numbers that were much appreciated, and the Watch Tower was conducted by members of the society. Afterwards refreshments were served by Mrs. Stubbs and Mrs. Lindsay and a pleasant social hour was spent.

CONGREGATIONS REQUESTED TO RAISE PASTORS' SALARIES TO THE AMOUNT REQUIRED BY ASSEMBLY

Presbytery Meeting at St. Paul's Church Yesterday Morning—Good Attendance—Considerable Business Transacted—Rev. Mr. Abraham Moderator.

CALLS WERE RECEIVED

A meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery was held yesterday morning at St. Paul's church when considerable business of importance was discussed. The attendance was fairly large and quite representative. Rev. H. S. Abraham, of Port Hope, was moderator for the Presbytery.

A call from Rice Lake was extended to Rev. John A Black, B.A., of Massey, Ont., and conditional arrangements were made regarding his induction provided he accepts it. A call was also received from Omemee and the associated congregations, and was moderated in by Rev. Mr. Pogue, in favour of Rev. Mr. J. S. McFarlane, B.A., of Warkworth, but owing to the shortness of the time in which it had been prepared, the proper number of certificates had not been secured. A final decision will probably be made in two weeks.

Rev. Dr. Marsh, convener of the committee that had in charge the organization at the Stewart settlement, reported that it had been accomplished in a satisfactory manner.

Rev. Mr. Buchanan, of Dundalk, in the Presbytery of Orangeville, was asked to sit with the Presbytery and to correspond. He was present as the convener of the General Assemblies Committee to lay before the local Presbytery the claims for the Home Missions.

Another important consideration was that regarding those congregations which are paying less than $600 a year and the manse to their ministers. It was decided to request them to make the necessary effort in order to raise the salaries to the amount required by the assembly.

Five Children From 2 to 8 Years Received At Children's Shelter

Five children from Lakefield were brought down to the Children's Shelter a few wdays ago, owing to the illness of the father and the consequent impoverishment of the household. The doctor attending the case was instrumental in having them placed in the Shelter temporarily, until the father is recovered. The oldest is eight years old and the youngest is only two. They are very bright children and are getting along well in their new home.

TOBOGGAN SLED DASHED INTO TRAIN BUT THE RIDER ESCAPED

To escape literally within an inch of his life was the unpleasant experience this morning of a youth exercising himself tobogganing on Barnardo avenue. He was occupied in this pleasure for some time during the morning and almost remained too late for his personal safety.

On one occasion when he was coming down the hill he did not notice an approaching train on the Lakefield track until it had reached the crossing. Quick as a flash he threw himself off the sled within a few feet of the wheels of the advancing train. The toboggan of course could not be stopped and was dashed headlong beneath the passing cars, and ground into splinters.

Many viewed the interesting exhibit this afternoon and others will have an opportunity, as the building will be open until ten o'clock to-night.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE WILLIAM RUTHERFORD

Remains Interred in Centreville Cemetery on Monday Afternoon.

The funeral of the late William Rutherford was marked by evidences of the high place he held in the esteem of the community in which he was best known. It took place on Monday afternoon at one o'clock, from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Alex. Hunter, Cavanville. There was a large attendance from South Monaghan, Cavan and Peterborough. Although the distance from the residence to the cemetery at Centreville, is about eleven miles, a large concourse followed the remains to their last resting place. The religious services were conducted by Rev. D. A. McKenzie, pastor of the Centreville Presbyterian Church, where the late Mr. Rutherford had worshipped for about seventy years, assisted by Rev. W. Johnston, of Millbrook. The former spoke in affectionate terms of the many personal and public virtues of the deceased, and of his fidelity to his religious obligations, during the three score years and ten he had been a worshipper at the Centreville Church.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. John Buckham, William Buckham, Joseph Byers, John Rutherford, John Riddell and Joseph Wood.

RECEIVED INTO THE SODALITY

Impressive Ceremony Last Night at St. Peter's Cathedral.

A beautiful and impressive ceremony was witnessed at St. Peter's Cathedral last night when forty young ladies were received into the sodality as Children of Mary and 34 others were received as aspirants. All the members of the society assembled at the Convent before the evening devotions and marched to the church where they occupied the front central pews. Before benediction the reception was held. The aspirants received the white ribbons and medals and blue ribbons and medals were for those who became Children of Mary. Acts of consecration were read and afterwards His Lordship Bishop O'Connor addressed the society, especially the new members, in a splendid address of advice and good counsel.

This society is rapidly growing and it may not be long before all the young women of St. Peter's are members. In Mother Edward of the Convent the society has an untiring adviser and assistant and under her care it has grown in numbers and in its activities.

The theatre-goers of Peterborough and vicinity will no doubt be glad to learn that the attraction to hold the boards at the Grand ter one week, commencing next Monday night, is the famous Partello Stock Company, which came to us last season unheralded and made a decided hit. The company this season is headed by that clever little comedienne, Miss Alice Kennedy, who is so popular among the theatre goers, and her support this season is the best possible to be obtained. The company's list of plays this season are composed of the following New York successes. "The College Girl," written by Mr. Justin Adams, author of "Quincey-Adams Sawyer," "A Yankee Girl Abroad," "The Postmaster's Daughter," "Cumberland 61," "Tempest and Sunshine," "A Jealous Wife," "Thelma," "Lena Rivers," "The Girl of Eagle Ranch," A new play of life in the Golden West made famous by Miss Mamie Fleming. "A Daughter of the People," "Sisters," "Under Western Skies," "When The Harvest Days Are Over," Mr. Felix Haney's last season's big success. "A Yankee Girl," a beautiful story of the south, with no shooting.

High Class specialties will be introduced between the acts which is direct from the Keith-Proctor circuit, the best possible to be obtained. A car load of special scenery and electrical effects is carried and each and every play will receive a complete scenic production. Ladies' 15-cent tickets are being issued for opening night, limited to 200. The play selected as their opening bill is one of the prettiest plays ever written, entitled "The College Girl." CAUTION AND COURAGE.

Reports from Ottawa, inferentially purporting to reflect official sentiment, indicate that at the coming session, efforts will be made to keep down the public expenditures to the lowest point consistent with effective public service. For the past twelve years there has been a buoyant revenue and an animated spirit of public confidence, in every sort of enterprise We are a new country of great distances and great needs. We had to meet large demands for the provision of the necessary equipment to national development, especially in the line of transportation and allied concerns. Money was spent lavishly, and it would seem justifiably. We had the money and we had the needs. We spent largely to deepen our canals, to deepen the St. Lawrence to the sea, and improve the harbou of Montreal. Navigation interests in all parts of the Dominion, wharves, break-waters, light houses, harbour improvements, ave been well looked after, and we have spent large sums in launching the and Trunk Pacific, which is we under way and must be kept undert way. Public buildings have been generously supplied. All this because they were needed and we had the money. Much of the work done, which is necessary to our national equipment, had waited for years, to the natural detriment of the interests affected, because the national finances would not before warrant undertaking it. A decrease of inflow of revenue, which, it is hoped, will be only temporary, counsels corresponding caution in expenditure, but this caution should be allied with prudent courage, should not be allowed to go to the extent of neglecting palpably needed public improvements, especially those relating to the bettering and extending of our transportation facilities. upon which our national prosperity, development and advance depend.

Lest you forget—let us remind you to do your Christmas buying early.

LIMITING DEBATE.

Among the matters which will probably be suggested at the coming session of Parliament will doubtless be the question of limiting the power of members to waste the time of Parliament, and increase the cost of legislation, by limiting the liberty of debate or restraining it within limits this side of license. This will naturally apply to liberty of speech, when it is palpably made an occasion of obstruction. The obstructive tactics of the Opposition last session, were the last straw. The appalling waste of time, a consequent increase in cost of what comes under the name of legislation, the bitterness, the unseemly exhibitions of what, in other circles would be called hoodlumism, had not only its material bad effect but tended to discredit the good name of the country, and the good sense of our central parliamentary body. That is not all. Parliament theoretically meets to discuss public questions which bear upon the transaction of the business of the country. Parliament cannot be in the proper temper to deal with public questions on their merits if unlimited discussion and gratuitous waste of time in obstruction, and, consequently, distraction of attention from legitimate business is allowed to obtain. We have all seen, to suggest a familiar illustration, how talkative and consequently squabbling city council meetings have operated to the injury and delay of legitimate civic business. Instances are not lacking where council meetings have been held, when the hours have been talked away in purposeless spouting, making necessary adjournment to do business at another meeting. Many words darken speech, and too much talking, either in a council, or legislature or parliament, obstructs business.

The closure of debate in Parliament is regarded as a remedy. But it is, as the Globe, points out, a two-edged sword. It should not be employed when obstruction is justified—a delicate point to determine—for what one party might call obstruction, the other party might regard as discharge of public duty. The situation is a serious one. The presently predominant party, together with the public interests, suffered greatly last session from the great liberty of debate. Circumstances might be reversed and the time might come when the public interests might suffer, as our history furnishes precedent, from lack of freedom of debate. Both parties are concerned in maintaining the decencies of parliamentary discussion, and we are not likely to see a repetition of the scenes that disgraced last session, the disgraceful abuse of the liberty of Parliament, and avowed obstruction. The policy that led to these things is now regarded, even by those in whose interest it was ostensibly pursued, as a mistake. These scenes will not probably be repeated next session. The hotheads that caused them are effectively silenced; public opinion excluded them from Parliament. It may be long before the liberty of speech will be similarly abused. The power of closure is a serious weapon to place in the hands of a parliament. While it might be benignly used to prevent undesirable liberty of speech, there is a possibility of its being used to imperil other liberties.

To-day is the tercentenary of John Milton, the poet, of Paradise Lost.

A LITTLE CONTRAST.

Premier Hazen, of New Brunswick, must envy Premier Scott, of Saskatchewan, whose bye-election experience is quite opposite. Premier Hazen, in the general elections, seemed to have made a tremendous sweep of his Liberal opponents, scoring a big majority in the House. Two of his supporters resigned, in Carleton and Northumberland, to enter Parliament, but were defeated; bye-elections held to fill the vacancies resulted in the defeat of Mr. Hazen's candidates and the election of two Liberals. Two of the supporters of Hon. Walter Scott, Premier of Saskatchewan, resigned to enter the Dominion Parliament; they were both elected and the two Liberals, Messrs. Calder and Motherwell, who were defeated in the general elections for the Legislature, were returned in the resulting bye-elections. Thus the Conservatives lose four supporters in New Brunswick and the Liberals gain four in Saskatchewan. Hon. Mr. Hazen, the Conservative leader in New Brunswick, will be cautious hereafter about opening seats. They do things better in Manitoba—an obliging Conservative government is good to its own. Hon, T. Mayne Daly resigned a lucrative government office to contest in the Conservative interest a seat in the Dominion House against Hon. Clifford Sifton in Brandon. He was defeated but dropped gracefully back into the seat the government had kept warm for him.

SUNDAY CHURCH PARADES.

In 1900 the Protestant ministers of Orillia, adopted a resolution in the following terms: "That while welcoming associations which, in their corporate capacity, attend Divine service, they should not be accompanied by bands of music, or hold any procession on the Lord's Day, other than walking between their lodge room and the church, that such special services should be at the ordinary hours of public worship, and also that there should be no excursions or invitations to brethren at a distance, and no entertaining of visiting brethren in connection with such services on the day of rest." After eight years' experience the ministers concerned think that the rule embodied in the resolution, has been satisfactory to all interested parties, societies, etc., and the ministers have issued a circular letter commending similar action to other ministers throughout this district, in the interests "of a quiet and orderly observance of His Holy Day." Is the sanctity of the day of rest the only matter involved? It does seem to be so. Is not the matter of the value of religious worship and service-to-order in question? Is there any certainty that formal parades of societies and military are prompted by the sole desire of worship? Of course, attendance at church even under such conditions, is a recognition of human obligations, is respect of Divine relations, but, in the main, does church parade attendance involve the recognition mentioned, or a recognition of the claims or the demands of society relations or military order. Ecclesiastical processions on Sundays can be justified as tangible evidence of a faith whose obligations rest on all men, but in the case of society and military church parades the society or military idea is thrust to the front—both purely, secular considerations. Was not the Pharisee of old a type that calls attention to its piety, by substituting for prayers on the street corners and broadened phylacteries, the beat of drum and the blast of trumpet?

COUNTER-ACTION IN WEST PETERBOROUGH PROTEST

The Globe has the following this morning in its Osgoode Hall news: The first counter action in regard to an election protest was taken yesterday in the filing by Mr. J. R. Stratton of a statement of preliminary objections to the protest against this election in West Peterborough. The objections are in effect:

That the security provided by statute was not properly given, and was not given until some time after the petition in question was filed; that the said security was not given in bank bills or gold or Dominion notes or legal tender; that the alleged copy of security and notices were not verified, that the original petition and copies were not signed by the petitioner in person; that the signature of the petitioner was not verified; that the petition and copies were not in form, and not endorsed in accordance with the provisions of the statute and the rules governing the same; that the provisions of the statute as to the filing of the petition and as to service thereof were not observed or complied with; that the order made on December 2, 1908, whereby, amongst other things, it was "ordered and adjudged that the copy of the petition and of the notice of the date of presentation and a copy of the deposit receipt and the appointment of petitioner's solicitor may be served upon the respondent by delivering such copies to Roland Glover or such other clerk as may be in charge of the respondent's office at Peterborough, and the steps and proceedings under said order were irregular and null and void; that the material upon which the order of December 2 was made, and the said order and steps and proceedings thereunder were and are insufficient and irregular, and that said petition should now be dismissed.

To Be Dyspeptic Is To Be Miserable.

Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. It is largely due to gross errors in diet, over-eating, too free indulgence in stimulants and over-taxing the stomach with indigestible food, eating too rapidly without chewing the food sufficiently, indulging in hot biscuits, pastry, pickles, confectionery, etc.

Constipation, headache, heartburn, sour stomach, distress after eating, belching of wind, faintness, and fullness and distention of the stomach are a few of the many distressing symptoms of the poor, weary dyspeptic. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the stomach, stimulates the secretion of the saliva and gastric juice to facilitate digestion, removes acidity, purifies the blood, and tones up the system to full health and vigor, and thereby cures dyspepsia and all its tributary diseases.

Mr. Amos Sawler, Gold River, N.S., writes:—"I was greatly troubled with dyspepsia, and after trying several doctors to no effect, I commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters and I think it is the best medicine there is for that complaint."

COMMENDS THE HOTEL KEEPER

Proprietor of Bethany Hotel Spoken Well of by Several Ministers.

In the speeches made on Monday night at the anniversary concert of the Bethany Presbyterian church—one of Dr. Marsh's congregations—reference of the highest commendation was paid to the character of Mr. Jas. McKinnon, owner of the hotel at that place. Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Millbrook, stated that he had known Mr. McKinnon for many years and knew him to be a man of character and decision. In Dr. Marsh's remarks concerning him he stated that Bethany was to be commended on having such a man as Mr. McKinnon as hotel keeper in the place. When the law permitted him to sell he sold, and when it ordered him to stop he did so. The speaker said he had never heard any suspicion relative to Mr. McKinnon.

The Dearth Of Conversions Is The Church Declining?

Sermon Delivered by Rev. Robert Pogue in St. Paul's Church Last Sunday Morning on the Occasion of His First Anniversary as Pastor of that Church.

Last Sunday was the first anniversary of the Rev. Robt. Pogue's pastorate in St. Paul's Church, of this city. His morning sermon was a powerful plea on behalf of increased zeal and work for the Church of Christ. He spoke as follows:

I intend this morning to speak on "The Dearth of Conversions," or the fewness of conversions in the Church of Christ—the fact and the cause.

I. Let us begin by inquiring if it is really so that there is a dearth of conversions? Is it a fact that few souls are being saved through the preaching of the word? Is it true that the Church is failing to realize her true glory in the salvation of souls? Is Zion low? Is Jacob small? Are there few being received into our Church through the gate of the new birth?

Let me preface my answer to these questions by a remark or two.

1. It is impossible to determine accurately by statistical reports the number led into the Kingdom of God yearly. Congregational statistics do not always furnish reliable information. Many names are entered there that have never been entered in the Book of Life. And many names have never been tabulated in a congregational report that are entered in the heavenly record. There are Christian men who never sat at the Lord's table. There are good men outside all our churches.

2. Then, secondly, results do not always follow immediately after the preaching of the Word. There is a sowing time and there is a reaping time. And while in some cases the harvest follows closely on the sowing, God's method is generally in harmony with that natural law. Let me give you an illustration. Dr. E. Cumming tells of a meeting he once held in a kitchen. There were actually only about twenty present. He preached the word as faithfully as he knew, and that was all he heard of that sermon for 25 years. It dropped almost completely from his memory. But at the end of 25 years he had occasion to send into Glasgow for a student to come and preach for him. As soon as the young man entered his home he asked him if he remembered preaching a sermon in the kitchen of a certain home 25 years before. With difficulty he recalled the occasion. "Well," said the young man, "that night my mother was converted, and it is due to her godly training and influence that I am now a student for the ministry." That is an illustration of the truth that the harvest does not always, even in Spiritual things, follow immediately on the sowing.

3. Then we must make allowance for this fact, namely, that conversions in many cases seem to be a matter of growth. Some are led into the Kingdom gradually. Many have been brought up in Christian homes and instructed in the knowledge of the Christian life, and taught to love Christ from infancy, and they are not able to place their finger definitely upon the point of time when they were subjects of the great change of conversion. Now, I believe, the work of regeneration in every case is instantaneous. There is a moment when the soul is dead and there is a moment when it is alive. There must be a moment when the eternal life of God is in the soul and a moment when it is not. But the manifestation of that life may be gradual. The moment of birth is seldom the moment of conscious existence.

Now in discussing our subject I wish to make all due allowance for these facts.

But, granting what has been said, is it not so that there is great cause for humility on the part of the Church.

(1) Listen to the confessions of some of the leading men in the religious world, men who are in a position to know. Dr. R. Nicoll, Editor of the British Weekly, believes there is a dearth of conversions. I may say, possibly no man in all Britain is in a better position to judge of the condition of affairs in the Church. He seems to have his fingers on the pulse of the whole ecclesiastical organizations of the British Isles. And he says: "In churches which are both prosperous and enterprising, and whose praise is in all the land, conversions of the old order at least, are practically unknown."

Conditions have not changed much on this continent during the last ten years. Almost the last thing D. L. Moody did before he died was to write an article for the New York Independent, in which he stated that there were 3,000 congregations in the United States mostly from the Congretational al. Presbyterian bodies that did not report a single conversion in a year. He then asks: "Can this be true? The thought has taken such hold on me I cannot get it out of my mind. It is enough almost to send a thrill of horror through the soul of every true Christian. What must the Son of God think of such a result of our labors as this?" I believe that one thing which hastened the end of that great man was the low condition of the Church of Christ. As you know, he gave himself more and more in his closing years to the rousing of the Church and Christian people, rather than to the work among the unsaved, believing that not until the Church of Christ was brought back to apostolic belief and practice of the great work of evangelism could we hope to see much accomplished among the unsaved.

(2) But let me give you some statistics. We cannot resist the logic of facts. I take two great evangelistic bodies; the Wesleyan Church in England, the other, the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. A few years ago, the Wesleyan Church in the Old Country, with 2,000 ministers, 17,000 local preachers, 131,000 Sunday School teachers, could only report at the close of a year's effort, 3,549 conversions for a single year.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States has 3,600,000 members, 18,000 preachers, 13,000 local preachers and about 350,000 Sunday School teachers. The value of their Church property which is free of debt is about $147,000,000. And yet, despite these enormous figures, the average annual increase of membership in the last five years has been only about 27,000.

Our own Presbyterian Church in Canada, while reporting much larger additions for last year, is far from doing what she ought to do, and what the Master expects of her. With her 1,300 ministers, 23,000 Sunday School teachers, 265,000 members, she received into her communion last year only 15,000—or on an average of 4 to every preaching station in the Presbyterian Church of Canada.

Now, do not let us shut our eyes to these facts. Do not let us say that we are raising a false alarm when we point out these conditions. If we are, then the General Assembly of our Church raised a false alarm last year when it saw the necessity for the appointment of a committee on evangelism; and some of our Presbyteries have raised a false alarm when they have set aside days for fasting and prayer; and the thousands throughout our Church, who are feeling the need of revival, and are praying earnestly for it, are raising a false alarm.

One of the dangers to which the Church is ever exposed is the danger of false security. The Church may say as she has said in the past, in the presence of like conditions: "I do not see the need for anxiety. Everything is well and prosperous. I am enriched, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing." No doubt congregations have said this and individuals have said this again and again, and yet the Lord's verdict on such has been, "You are poor, miserable, and blind, and naked."

We must be impressed, brethren, with the magnitude of the evil. We must try to realize the sorrow and disappointment of the Son of God at all this coldness and deadness. We shall never apply ourselves to the "cure of souls" as we should until we have some idea of the nature of the hurt. We must get thoroughly imbued with this thought that the Church of God has been raised up for the one grand work of saving a lost world, but she is failing in her mission. And we shall have to humble ourselves before God because of it—crying as did Joshua: "O Lord, what shall I say when Israel turneth her back upon her enemies. for the Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land will hear of it, and shall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth—and what will Thou do to Thy great name?"

II. And now let us pass on and enquire into the cause. It is self evident that every effect must have a cause and that the cause must be proportionate with the effect produced. And it is only as the effect is discovered and felt that the cause is removed. What is the effect again? It is that the Church is failing in the very purpose of her existence; she is suffering defeat, she is not going on with her great mission of winning the world to Christ. Well, what is the cause of it?

1. I want to make a confession to you. Identifying myself with my brethren of the ministry in taking my share of the blame, I must confess that the pulpit itself is largely responsible for present conditions.

Is it not so that in many pulpits throughout the land a false emphasis is given to the importance of literary culture? I do not mean to affirm that sermons should not be models of the literary art, where that is possible. But, what I mean is that the constant effort after literary style has led to a false emphasis on these things, and so people have been offered the husks instead of the kernel. People do not go to the House of God to study rhetoric and composition. They come to worship God—to have their souls refreshed, their spiritual energies quickened and their love for God and Christ, and the souls for whom He died, deepened. And the minister when he stands in the pulpit should bend his energies and direct his prayers towards the accomplishment of this object. He stands before people to appeal to the heart, the conscience and the will rather than the intellect. Culture is demanded, but not a culture that so sharpens the intellect that it cuts out the heart. And when the emphasis is laid on excellency of speech or enticing words of man's wisdom, we rob the gospel of its power. What a contrast is offered us in the rugged eloquence of Peter and many of the literary productions one will read to-day in homiletic journals. Listen to Paul: "And I brethren came not unto you with excellency of speech or of wisdom, and my speech was not with enticing words of men's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power, that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."

2. Then, the pulpit, in many places, no longer preaches the Gospel. It does not preach to save sinners. Dr. Nicol says that he listened to twelve sermons by young preachers some time ago and in not one instance was there the faintest approximation to saving truth — not the slightest evidence of how a sinner might be saved. Our colleges are failing to train ministers properly for the great and distinctive work of the Church.

3. Then, preaching is no longer of that stern prophetic character that marked the days of great revivals. We do not hear thundered in men's souls now: "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Are we not in the habit of addressing people as though they were all saints, while many are dead in trespasses and in sins.——And, when we do address ourselves to sinners our manner is apologetic and stammering. We try to make the Christian life easy. We do not speak as the Master did: "Straight is the gate and narrow is the way," or of the difficulty of being saved. We do not insist as He did, on men denying themselves, of taking up the cross and following Him in a life of severe discipline, and unselfish service.

But the pew must bear its share of blame.

And I have this charge to bring against the pew: The Church neither believes nor realizes that the one purpose of her existence is the Glory of God in the salvation of souls. How many understand and believe that the one purpose for which the Church was constituted the body of Christ, was that she might continue the work which Christ began on earth? How many believe, and live in keeping with their belief, that the one object for which the Holy Spirit was given was that the Church might be endued with power for the work of saving men?

Let us look for a moment at that statement: "The one work of the Church is to glorify God in the salvation of souls." I think it is quite clear from the word of God that the glory of the Church is her soul-saving power. For that she was raised up of God, and for that she exists. A glance at the Book of Acts makes that perfectly clear. The Holy Spirit scarcely considers it—if I may use the expression—worth while to mention the word Church, except in connection with additions to the Lord. The object of every sermon that is reported is the salvation of souls. The Church was born in a revival, where 3,000 souls were added to the Lord. Shortly afterwards 5,000 more were added. Then a number of the Levitical priests were obedient to the faith. Philip goes down to Samaria and many believe his word. And so the Church went on by leaps and bounds until the whole old Roman world was brought under the banner of the cross. Then the Church had nothing but triumph to record; now it is mostly defeat. Oh! we have machinery the most perfect, innumerable organizations yet we are met with the appalling statistics—that 3,000 churches cannot report a single conversion in a year.

And all this because the rank and file of Church members do not consider it the one business of their lives to give Christ's salvation to a lost world. Brethren how is it with us? What is your faith? and what is your practice? Are you living to bless men and to carry Christ's salvation to lost souls? Are you praying for a revival? Praying for the unsaved about you? Are you living as a branch of the true vine to bear fruit for the refreshing and life of a hungry world.

2. And, then, I have this charge to bring against the pew: It does not desire the salvation of lost men. First, we do not believe this is our special mission on earth—and then, of course, we have no particular desire to see it accomplished. And this lack is often seen in the pulpit. A minister once asked Mr. Spurgeon for an explanation of his success in soul winning and his own complete failure. Mr. Spurgeon asked:

"Do you expect to see souls saved every time you preach?"

"Oh! No!"

"Then according to your faith be it unto you."—The inference being that as ministers and people we shall see results when we truly desire them.

Ministers must drink the cup of Christ and share to the measure of their capacity, his agonizing compassion for souls. One of the greatest sermons Spurgeon ever preached was on the words: "When Zion travailed she brought forth children." In that sermon he showed that the mystery of the new birth, the salvation of souls, additions to the Church must be preceded on the part of the Church by the birth pangs of prayer and effort. No birth without pain, no souls born from above without birth pangs on the part of some child of God. When you and I agonize for souls we shall have them.

Mark Guy Pearse some years ago, said that he has never known a Sabbath in a long ministry of ten years, in which there has not been a conversion or conversions under his preaching. And then he says: "How any Christian minister can endure to live without conversions is to me incomprehensible." Ah! that is the trouble with ministers and people, we can endure it all too easily. But we shall all have to learn this: that unless we go forth weeping into the Master's harvest, we shall never come again with joy bringing our sheaves with us. And we shall have to learn that not until we cry and give God no rest will he make Jerusalem a praise in the whole earth.

3. A third charge I bring against the pew is: we do not pray for conversions. We do not believe it is our special work, we do not desire to see it accomplished, and so we do not ask God for it.

A little book was written a few years ago that bore a strange title. I am quite sure that the title, if true, would be welcome tidings to the average Church member to-day. Here it is: "And the Almighty hath decreed that there shall be no more prayer." Sarcasm! you say. Yes, but that holy kind that cuts deep into the secrets of your life and mine, and lets us see the disease and the defects there. We have failed to exercise the gift of prayer. What was true in Isaiah's time is true now: "He saw that there was no man and wondered that there was no intercession." "There is none that calleth upon Thy name, that stirreth himself up to take hold of Thee."

I shall not institute an inquisition into your prayer habits. I do not stand here to condemn for past failures—but to plead for better things in the days to come. To plead for more prayer, more intercession, more time that we may lay before God the conditions about us.

4. My last word is this: The Church does not live to save men. She does not believe this to be her special work. She does not desire it. She does not pray for it—and she does not live for it. What do I mean? I mean this: The greatest hindrance to the spread of the Gospel among the unsaved is the inconsistent lives of those who belong to the Church. It isn't the higher critics that are doing most to destroy the influence of the Church—and I have no more sympathy than you with the work of destructive criticism—but it is the lower living of those who call themselves Christians. It is little wonder that few of the outside world are enquiring the way to Zion with their faces thitherward when they see how little the inhabitants are actuated by the true Spirit of Christ.

The Master said: "Ye are my witnesses—Ye who sit at my table and confess my name—Ye are my witnesses—in the shop, at the lawyer's bench, in the doctor's office, behind the counter, before the counter, in the home, on the street, in the lodge—Ye are my witnesses." Nowhere can men find what Christ is like but by looking at you. Nowhere can they see the beauty of holiness, the attractiveness of the Christian life, but in the men and women who belong to Him, and to whom He said "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me."

We read a good deal about the coming revival. I do not pretend to know what is hidden in the counsels of eternity, or say what shall be the character of that movement when it comes. But I'll tell you one thing: The revival that we need is a revival that will teach Church members to love one another—that will lead them in all their business relations, and social relations, in their walk and conversation to apply the teaching of the Golden Rule. May God grant us that revival.

Brethren, I begin to-day my second year's ministry in your midst. One year ago to-day I preached my first sermon as your pastor. I looked forward hopefully a year ago to my ministry in St. Paul's. You ask me if I have been disappointed? I might with as much reason ask you, "Have you been disappointed? I am conscious of my failure in many places. The year has been a busy one. I thank you for your patience with me, notwithstanding my failures. It has been the happiest year, in many respects, of my life. No people could have loved a pastor or supported him with a more loyal devotion than you.

But I take you into my confidence, when I say that I am not satisfied with either my own attainments, nor yours. We have scarcely begun to grasp the problem that is given us, in the Providence of God, to solve, the problem of holy living, of work among our young men, of the conversion of the unsaved among us—of the evangelization of the world and of the whole round of Christian duties.

For some few Sabbaths, I shall seek to bring to you the most heart-searching messages I can give. The one object I shall seek to serve in these, is the sanctification of the life—resulting in Christian service. Then in the evening I shall endeavour to preach the Evangel of Jesus Christ, in all its simplicity and power with the object of bringing unsaved ones to decision.

I ask, therefore, for your faith in this as the great mission of the Church. I ask that you earnestly desire its accomplishment. I ask that you pray earnestly and unceasingly. And I ask that you live for it.

I am jealous for the people of St. Paul's. I want, when I hear outsiders speak of you, that it will be of a people who are eminent for holy, consistent living, loving, unselfish Christ-like service. And I ask you to-day to dedicate yourselves, as I seek to do it with you, to our great mission and great service.

During the past week the secretary has received inquiries from poultrymen in Toronto, Bowmanville, Whitby, Muskoka, Cannington, Villers, Bethany, St. Thomas and Cobourg.

Special terms have been made for visitors to the show with the railways and a large crowd is anticipated.

The show will be held in the market hall.

SATISFIED WITH THE ACTION OF THE COUNCIL

Mr. Gregg Praises City Aldermen for Manner in Which Market is Being Run.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Please allow me a little space in your valuable paper for a few lines. I heard some men talking on the market square last Saturday and judging from what I heard some of them seemed anything but satisfied. I want to say that I have been going to the market for seventeen years, and I must say that the arrangements that the council have made for the year 1908 are ahead of anything that has ever been there before—at least in my time—and I earnestly hope that the council will see their way clear to do the same in the future. Let me add that a better man than Mr. Ball to carry out the wishes of the council and the people at large cannot be found. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this space.

Yours very respectfully,
JAMES GREGG.

CHRISTIAN EVANGELIZATION BECOMING A WORLD MOVEMENT

Laymen's Missionary Movement Reaches Peterborough—City's Foremost Men of All Classes and Creeds Unite in Effort to Convey Truth to All People in the Present Generation—Leaders in Religious, Civic, Business and Social Life Unite in a Common Platform.

EARNEST ADDRESSES FROM LEADING CHRISTIAN WORKERS

A meeting of an unusual and most interesting character, and destined to be of influence and importance in its results took place last evening in the basement of the George street Methodist church, where, through the initiative of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, there was gathered upwards of 400 in numbers of the best and most representative citizens of Peterborough.

The spacious basement was decorated with flags and bunting in a very effective and attractive manner, and the proceedings of the evening were opened shortly after seven by participation in a bounteous banquet, served in admirable style by Coleman Bros., the caterers, and which met with evident appreciation by the large throng. An orchestra discoursed admirable harmony during the dinner.

Those present included the Mayor and a good representation of the Board of Aldermen, the Chairman, the secretary and members of the School Board, the leading merchants of the city, and a liberal representation of the bench and bar. It included large delegations from St. John's, St. Paul's, the Methodist and the Baptist congregations of Peterborough, and was as thoroughly a representative gathering of all the best elements and the most important interests of the city, as has ever been witnessed on a public occasion of any kind.

After ample justice had been done to the generous spread, chairs were reversed so that all faced the rostrum.

Chairman's Address

Mr. D. W. Dumble, the chairman of the evening, then introduced the serious business of the evening in a brief but earnest address. He said he had seldom felt more embarrassment in addressing a public gathering than before one of this peculiar kind, where men of all denominational views were met together, openly professing themselves to be followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. They had been told that where two or three were gathered together He would be in the midst of them, and surely in such a meeting they must realize the presence of the Master. It was for them to grapple with the matter that was before them, to examine into their hearts and their lives, and to see each for himself if these were consistent with their professions. Those could rejoice who had met the Master, who knew that He had come into their lives and given the peace that passeth all understanding—who could look up and say, "My Lord," without condemnation and without fear. They were here as Christians, possessing that great gift to consider the obligation resting upon them of how best to bring others to the knowledge of Jesus Christ. Those who enjoyed the high privilege of Christian knowledge and fellowship, must realize that they have a responsibility outside themselves, and ask themselves whether they had performed the duty that lay upon them toward others. It was a time when great things can be done, and ought to be done, and must be done. The responsibility lay upon them, individually, of bringing the knowledge of God to all the peoples of the earth. He had never before in this city stood before so large an audience of men openly professing to be followers of Christ, and he hoped they would all be filled with a sense of all the responsibility and the duty that such profession imposed upon them.

Mr. Wilson, secretary of the Peterborough Laymen's Movement, gave statistics gathered from Peterborough Protestant churches, showing the amount contributed for general church purposes in this city to be $47,082.72, as against $11,840.29 for foreign and home missions, a total of $58,923.01. This represents per Christian head—there being 4,284 Protestant church members in Peterborough—$10.99 per year for general church purposes, and the not very flattering sum of but $2.76 per year for missions, as against $8 per head for the latter purpose in Toronto, and $5 in much smaller places than this city.

Mr. J. C. Patterson

Mr. J. C. Patterson, K.C., of Toronto, prefaced his remarks with the quotation "If this work be of man, it will come to naught; if it be of God, ye cannot prevail against it." This he said was the language of 1900 years ago, and it might be well applied to the present movement. The fault of the day with professing Christians was not that they sought to impede the work of spreading the knowledge of God, but they were not sufficiently keen in promoting it. A year ago in Toronto this great work had begun, to unite all the churches in an effort to evangelize the world in the present generation. The object was to present the Truth adequately to all peoples. It's object was, not to Christianize, but to stimulate in each denomination a more active work, each using its own instrumentalities to bring the Truth to all, leaving to the spirit of God the instilling into all hearts of a true understanding of it. The aim of the Laymen's Missionary Movement was to instill and distribute enthusiasm in this great work throughout all the evangelical denominations, so that each should collect and expend its own resources in its own peculiar way, but with a greater zeal and the knowledge and appreciation of a common purpose, and of a general cooperation. He spoke of the original meeting in St. James' school house in Toronto, when this matter had been presented by Rev. J. Campbell White, and said that when he regarded the spirit awakened there during an assemblage of hard-headed business men, bankers, lawyers and professors, he had realized as never before, the spirit which came on the day of Pentecost, and which he felt was with that meeting. He took for his theme: This movement, its meaning and motive. Analysing its title, he said, instead of "Laymen's" he would have preferred simply "Men's." Men implied force, virility, energy, the power and the determination to overcome resistance. He was not unmindful of the Marys and Marthas and Ruths of Christian history. He thanked God for the women who had done so much for the work of the Master all through the centuries—"Last at the cross and first at the tomb." But this was a work that peculiarly devolved upon the men. The word "Missionary," he said, meant men doing for others what God had done for us. Our God was a missionary God: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believed in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God had commanded us to go into all the world and carry the Truth to all living creatures. He wanted a missionary man. It was a command. It was placed first in the Lord's Prayer, "Thy Kingdom come,' and what God placed first, you do not and you cannot put second. The third word, "movement" meant progress — the cutting away of old things and the implantation of new methods. It meant going forward. He would epitomize their work and their duty in the matter. "We can do it, and we will." Were they as Christians to sit down and admit that anything as impossible that God had set before them to do? Some would say "we don't need foreign missions." He would ask them where would be the German and English, Scotch and Irish civilization to-day, if missionaries had not carried the Truth to our barbarian ancestors centuries ago! The average contribution to Foreign Missions to-day was $2.60 per head. They wanted to increase that to $5 per head and they could do it. Few places were in the enjoyment of so many advantages as Peterborough. They were above the average, and they should contribute something to make up for people elsewhere who did not come up to the average. If their hearts were touched with the sense of Christian duty the money would come all right. This movement meant victory—they were not going to let go—they were going to win.

Mr. N. F. Davidson, K.C., of Toronto, who is a brother of Rev. Canon Davidson, of St. John's Church, Peterborough, made an earnest and eloquent appeal for more liberal effort to forward the work of evangelizing the world, and his remarks frequently stirred the enthusiasm of the audience to applause. The meeting in Toronto, to which Mr. Patterson had referred, had been an epoch in the history of that city, and this meeting could be made an epoch in that of Peterborough, if it were rated at its right importance. It was time that men should come to realize that missionary enterprise was the business of businesses, and set about to do it in a business-like and earnest way. It was a work that had to be tackled by men like men—the work of evangelizing the whole wide world in a single generation. The object of this movement was to bring together in a common effort the men of different churches. The only question should be, "Who is on the Lord's side?" They should all stand together, no matter what their differences of faith and practice might be. The union of all the Christian forces for the evangelization of the world in a single generation would make that object entirely practicable. Out of $40,000,000 demanded for this purpose, Canada was asked to raise $4,500,000. Referring to the recent business depression he declared that it had been a good thing for the country. It had saved them from the dreadful tendency to materialism, to which our people were being subjected, which measured all things by the sordid dollar, and had turned the people toward higher things, better things and more profitable things. A Montreal editor claimed the origination of a phrase which had appealed to the judgment of the nation, and had had much to do with the success of the premier in the recent election. "Let Laurier Finish His Work." This great work in which they were asked to join might well adopt the motto "Let Jesus Christ Finish His Work."

"Onward Christian Soldiers," was then sung by the audience in a most inspiring manner.

The Practical Result

On motion of Mr. Vincent Eastwood the assemblage unanimously resolved to pledge themselves individually to support and advocate a general movement among the several Protestant congregations of Peterborough, to raise an amount equal to $6 per head each year in support of Foreign Missions.

Some Resolutions

Before close of the meeting the following resolutions were passed:—

Moved by Mr. David H. Moore, seconded by Mr. E. A. Peck,—That the lay members of the Protestant churches of Peterborough, realize that the acceptance of the Gospel of Jesus Christ into their lives implies the acceptance of the obligation to be co-workers with Him in making known to the whole world the glad tidings of salvation through faith in the Son of God, they therefore hereby accept the obligation and pledge themselves to a heartier sympathy with all missionary enterprises and to a more liberal and constant contribution of financial assistance to the missionary efforts of the churches.

WARNE
THE JEWELLER

SHALL WILL OF PEOPLE BE TRAMPLED ON? ASKS MR. HANNA

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Mr. Editor,—You will kindly allow me a little space on a public question in your issue. Being one of the two hundred and fifteen that signed the petition to return to the ward system, I notice in what a slick way a few of the city council gave it the turn down. First, one alderman raises a technical legal point by stating "that the application should be submitted before November 1st," and second "that twenty per cent. of the ratepayers should have signed the petition." I think it a very good criterion to go by. The result of the canvassing of the few who had the opportunity was that out of that number ninety-five per cent. signed the petition for the ward system. So it would be quite safe to say at least, ninety per cent. of the people would want the ward system. However, the council surely could have asked them their wishes. Another alderman plays the part of the double actor when he says that he was not opposed to the ward system, yet the votes against the submitting of the by-law to the people, under a flimsy excuse, and says it looks foolish when we are seeking to elect aldermen for two years. But the city solicitor opened the eyes of the council that they might submit the by-law if they wanted to do so.

What is left for the voters to do is to elect such aldermen as are willing to ask the people, "What is their will concerning their interests in general?"

Is it not time for us, as citizens to speak up when our rights are refused?

ALBERT HANNA.

ROLAND AYOTTE CAME TO HIS DEATH BY ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING, SAYS JURY; INQUEST WAS CONCLUDED YESTERDAY

Considerable Evidence Was Heard —Tommy Gordon's Comprehensive Story of the Shooting— Stood Cross-Questioning Without Flinching.

HIS SISTER'S ACCOUNT

Special Staff Correspondence.

Young's Point, Dec. 9.—"That the said Roland Ayotte came to his death by accidental shooting," was the verdict reached by the coroner's jury yesterday in the inquest into the death of little Rollie Ayotte, who was killed in Harvey township on November 12th. Considerable evidence was heard during the day but there was nothing of a sensational nature brought out, the evidence pointing strongly to the fact that young Ayotte had been shot accidentally, although just how, it was hard to ascertain from the testimony. There was nothing to indicate that there was any foul play in connection with the boy's death, and it only took the jury a few minutes to bring in their verdict after they had retired to consider the evidence.

The inquest which had been adjourned from December 1, was resumed at ten o'clock in the annex of the Lakeview House, with Dr. Gray presiding. Mr. R. E. Wood represented the Crown, while Mr. O. A. Langley, of Lakefield, was present in the interests of Tommy Gordon, the 12-yaer-old boy, who was with Ayott when the latter was shot. Gordon's evidence was the most important heard during the day, and the manner in which he told the story of the accident, evidently favourably impressed the jury.

The Autopsy Report

Dr. Young, of Peterborough, who assisted by Dr. Boucher, performed the autopsy on Saturday, was the first witness, and gave the report of the post-mortem as follows;

"The body was that of a boy well nourished, and apparently about ten years of age. Post mortem discoloration was decidedly marked. A wound extended to the left of the sternum between the seventh and eighth ribs, round in appearance. The external edges of the wound were inverted. Before removing the sternum we found two hard felt gun wads. There was a wound penetrating the left lung and breast which in our opinion was the cause of death. The chin and left side of the face was powder marked. There were no other external marks of violence. The other organs were apparently healthy.

T. W. H. YOUNG, M.D.
R. P. BOUCHER, M.D."

Dr. Young testified that they had found a number of shot in the left lung. The wound in the breast was such as would be caused by a shot, and its cleanness would indicate that the shot had been fired at very close range.

To Mr. Langley the witness said that there was no stray shot outside of the wound.

The Deceased's Mother

Mrs. Baptiste Ayotte, the deceased's mother, was the next witness and testified that her son would have been ten years old on December 3rd. On the day that he was shot he was sent to school, but as the teacher was not there he had come back as far as Mr. Gordon's house. She had not seen him until he was brought home dead in the evening. Messrs Thomas Weaver, Herb Weaver and other men brought him home. There was no hole in his shirt or sweater when he had put them on that morning.

The Father's Evidence

Baptiste Ayotte, the boy's father, was next called, and corroborated the evidence of the previous witness as to his son's movements on the day upon which he was shot. He told of his being notified by Thomas Weaver of the boy's death, and of finding his son's dead body in the road leading across Mr. Gordon's property. He had not seen young Gordon there after he arrived nor did he see a gun there. The witness said that he had been told that young Gordon was a very bad boy. He had been told that he had put Mrs. Trotter's little boy, a child of five or six years, on a stump as a target, and had shot at him. The boy had dropped from the stump and the contents of the gun had entered the stump. He had also heard that young Gordon had threatened to shoot Joseph Gillespie's boys. He had heard some of these things before his boy was shot.

Thomas Weaver testified that he was Tommy Gordon's uncle, and that he was working in the woods not far away from where young Ayotte was shot. Tommy had come running up to them and told them that Rollie had shot himself with his gun and they had gone to the spot and found the body. Young Gordon when asked how it had happened, had explained that his garter came untied, and while he was fixing it he had given Ayotte his shot gun to hold. Ayotte had asked for a cartridge, and while he was still busy fixing his garter he had heard a shot and saw the boy fall. The boys were friendly and played together and he had never heard of a quarrel between them.

Dr. Young, re-called, testified that from what he could find, the shot must have entered the body from straight in front as there was no slant either up or down.

Robert Weaver gave evidence corroborating that of Thomas Weaver in regard to working in the woods, to being notified of Ayotte's death by Tommy Gordon, and to the story that the latter had told in regard to the accident.

Laura Gordon's Story

Laura Gordon was the next witness. She testified that she was Tommy Gordon's sister and had been at home on the day that young Ayotte was shot. Tommy had come running home and had told her that Rollie had shot himself and asked what he should do. She had told him to tell his uncle Thomas Weaver, and he had done so while she had gone to where the body was found. She had found that Ayotte was dead by feeling his heart. Rollie had come to their place about 9.15 o'clock in the morning and had stayed there until the afternoon getting his dinner there, and the boys had played around the house until 4 o'clock, when she had told Tommy to take the cows to the lake. Ayotte had said he would go with him as far as the corner on his way home. Tommy had taken the gun with him because it would be dark when he was returning. Tommy had told her the same story of how the accident occurred as he had the other witnesses.

Tommy Gordon's Evidence

Thomas Gordon was the next witness and stated that he was twelve years of age. He explained the circumstances of the shooting at considerable length, and stood the questioning of the Crown Attorney and Coroner Gray without flinching. He stated that Rollie Ayotte had come to his place in the morning, and had remained there until 4 o'clock, and that they had played together around the house all day. At 4 o'clock his sister had told him to take the cows to the lake and Rollie had said that he would go with him as far as the corner. They started out together and after they had gone a short distance from the house witness' garter became untied, and he gave the gun to Rollie to hold while he tied it. The gun was not loaded, but Rollie had asked him for a cartridge while he was tying his garter, and he had given it to him. A little further on the witness' garter again became loose and he once more handed the gun to Ayotte. As he was fixing his stocking Ayotte had said: "Watch me shoot a cow," but the witness did not think anything of it until he heard a shot, and looking up saw Ayotte falling to the ground. He had supposed that he had tripped and that in falling, the gun had exploded. He had rushed to his home and told his sister of the shooting and then had told his uncle. "The gun was not in my hands when Ayotte was shot," said the witness.

The inquest was adjourned at 12.45 for luncheon.

Upon resuming, Chas. Bickell was called, and stated that he was an undertaker residing in Lakefield, and that he had attended the funeral of the deceased boy. Dr. Gray had given him instructions to bury the boy as he thought, after examining the case, that it was an accident. He had investigated and young Gordon had given him the same account of the shooting as she had at the inquest. The witness said that he was familiar with fire arms and had shot at the Dominion Rifle ranges and won shooting prizes at Lakefield. He gave considerable evidence as an expert of the effect of a shot at close range, and stated that in his opinion the muzzle of the gun could not have been more than a foot away from the boy when he was shot. He thought that the shot had an upward tendency, judging from the wound.

It was possible for a gun to be discharged by a heavy jar upon the stock.

Joseph Johnston testified that he had been working in the woods near the Weavers', and had been told of Ayotte's death by Thomas Weaver. He told of going to the spot where the body was and of seeing it there. He had had no talk with young Gordon in regard to the case. He had seen the boys playing together that day.

Edward Johnston, who had been working with the previous witness, corroborated his testimony, but threw no new light on the matter.

This concluded the testimony and the room was cleared to allow the jury to consider the evidence.

Their deliberations lasted but a few minutes when they brought in a verdict of accidental shooting and were dismissed.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL QUESTION DISCUSSED

Dr. Frederick Explains the Estimated Cost of Suitable Place.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Apparently we are on the verge of a considerable outbreak of scarlet fever, and as in the past our facilities for attending to it are almost as inadequate for handling it as a generation ago, and not as good as a few years ago, when the hospitals accepted these cases in a special ward.

Ours is too progressive a city to be still floundering in the mud on this question.

It is only when a number of unpleasant messes arise, such as those which have occurred in the past few weeks, that we awaken to the recognition of our out of date condition.

The majority of people forget or do not realize, that the quarantine and isolation of infectious diseases is for the benefit of the public at large which should pay for this protection.

Isn't it enough hardship for a poor man to have these diseases come to his home without the neighbours, the law, and public at large compelling him to pauperize himself for years to come, by staying at home weeks or months without work, without perhaps enough food to live on, and yet those for whose safety this is done are unwilling to share the expense.

Take the concrete examples of recent date,—an honest, hard working woman with a family of five children, two of whom are breadwinners. Each of the latter were taken from their work to nurse the others, ill with scarlet fever, in order that the main bread-winner might stay away from the family for the public protection. Think what this would mean to you in the same circumstances:

Away from her family for three months—

Board to pay for three months—

Two bread-winners less for three months.

Consider the other case where a very ill child in an institution with a number of other children, was infected with scarlet fever, probably from some ignorant visitor coming from an infected house not disinfected.

Why should a poor man disinfect his home at his own expense for public protection, if he is too poor to pay for it, when we (the public) don't care whether he does or not, and at any rate are unwilling to recompense him for it.

If this had been your child and it had died, would you not feel indignant at our lax and careless system in Peterborough.

The Board of Health wants to solve the problem, the council wants to solve the same thing but up to the present they have been unable to do so.

Dr. McNulty last year made a sensible suggestion, when he proposed home isolation, compensation of bread-winners for loss sustained, and disinfection at public expense.

But this suggestion was ignored entirely, because the trouble has not struck home to those who have power to act. With but few exceptions the scarlet fever has been in the homes of the poor and powerless.

The plan we, the public in our selfishness would like, is to have the Nicholls Hospital Board build an infectious disease hospital, pay for the nursing and run it free for all. But why should they? We do not appreciate what we have. If like other cities, we were taxed the twenty odd thousand of hospital upkeep we might worry. Other cities are always begging for hospital funds. Having become used to spoon feeding in this way, we think the Nicholls or other Hospital Board should still spoon feed us free.

Statistics

During the last year, as recorded in the city books, the case of infectious diseases are:—

Month.	Scarlet Fever.	Diphtheria
February	6	0
April	3	0
May	2	0
July	7	0
August	4	0
September	4	0
October	9	1
November	4	0
December	4	0

Allowing an average rate of $10.00 per week compensation for the minimum number of weeks (6) on Dr. McNulty's plan, and $2.00 per case for disinfection, the city's bill for protection would have been about $2700.00.

It does not seem necessary to compensate the bread-winners to this extent, for most of them can board out at about $1.00 to $2.00 more than they can live at home and still earn wages.

At this rate and $2.00 for disinfection, making an average of about $8.00 per case, the city's bill would have been about $400.00.

If full compensation were allowed to those out of work, it would only add a few hundred to this, making perhaps $600.00.

But this does not consider or assist those unpleasant circumstances where cases suddenly develop in the Nicholls Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital, the House of Providence, Barnardo Home, or strangers in boarding houses or hotels.

I heard a man of authority who knows say he considered that a suitable building for practical use could be put up for $3000.00.

The council seems afraid of running expenses and mention $4000.00 as the minimum.

There are in the city a couple of graduate nurses, thoroughly reliable, ethical and competent, whose services can be obtained at about $400.00 per year. As assistant an extra nurse could be supplied from Nicholls Hospital, or when desired from St. Joseph's, at a rate of $6.00 per month, or $72.00 per year, payable to the hospital.

This would afford a grand opportunity for our nurses to obtain a training they are now wunable to receive, viz., the handling of infectious cases.

Allowing $7.00 a week for food, 11 tons of coal per winter, and $460.00 per year for a porter for scrubbing, disinfection, washing and furnaces, allows a standing expense without patients of—

Nurse	$400 00
Hospital assistant nurse	72 00
Coal	100 00
Food	350 00
Porter	400 00
Telephone	18 00
Electric light	20 00
Water	20 00
About $1406.00.

Last year's expense rating at about 25 cents per day per patient, for light diet, or,

Food	$600 00
Medicine	100 00
Disinfection	100 00

Thus we have a standing expense of at most, $1500.00, and an expense variable with the number of patients from $500.00 to $1500.00

These plans may not fit in with the theoretically beautiful and perfect isolation hospital, as planned by the powers that be, but will cover the present and ordinary future needs, and save some unfortunates a lot of worry.

Yours,
E. V. FREDERICK.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S FINAL ADDRESS

Retiring President Issues Last Message to Congress.

IS STILL AGAINST TRUSTS

He Repeats His Conviction That Movements of Corporate Interests Should Be Strictly Regulated—Calls Proposed Labor Law Against Injunction Class Privilege in Most Brutal Form.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Interest in both Houses of Congress centered yesterday in the President's message, the reading of which began in the Senate at 12.15, just a quarter of an hour after the Senate had convened, and in the House a few minutes later. The galleries of both Houses were well filled. The chief points in the message are:

Placing of railways, telegraph and telephone companies under interstate commerce commision and removed from the domain of the anti-trust law. As regards rates the power of the commission should be summary.

There should be regulation by the National Government of the great interstate corporations, including a simple method of account keeping, publicity, supervision of the issue of securities, abolition of rebates and of special privileges. There should be short-time franchises for all corporations engaged in public business, including the corporations which get power from water rights. There should be national as well as state guardianship of mines and forests. Labor legislation should be enacted into law.

Postal savings banks will make it easy for the poorest to keep their savings in absolute safety. The regulation of the national highways must be such that they shall serve all people with equal justice.

There must be prohibition of child labor, diminution of woman labor, shortening of hours of all mechanical labor. Stock watering should be prohibited, and stock-gambling, so far as is possible, discouraged. There should be a progressive inheritance tax on large fortunes. Industrial education should be encouraged. As far as possible we should lighten the burden of taxation on the small man.

There should no longer be any faltering with the question of taking care of the wage-workers who, under our present industrial system, become killed, crippled or worn out as part of the regular incidents of a given business.

Recommends increased salaries for the judges and simplification of the administration of justice, which "operates with peculiar severity against persons of small means and favors the very criminals it is most desirable to punish."

The bill demanded by labor leaders before the House committee on judiciary last year, in regard to injunctions, is referred to as legalizing blacklisting and boycotting in every form and representing a class of policy which, if carried out, would mean "the enthronement of class privilege in its crudest and most brutal form."

The Hawaiian Islands should be made impregnable.

American citizenship for Porto Ricans is recommended.

TRAIN KILLS TWO.

Wagon Is Struck by Express Near Dunnville on Michigan Central.

Dunnville, Dec. 9.—A double fatality occurred yesterday morning at a level crossing on the Diltz road, about six miles from here, when a fast express on the Michigan Central struck a wagon in which Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Miller and their three-months-old infant were driving into town.

Mrs. Miller and the child were killed instantly, and Mr. Miller was seriously injured.

The crossing at which the accident occurred is particularly dangerous owing to trees obscuring the view, and several fatal accidents have happened there before.

The bodies of the two victims, together with Mr. Miller, were brought to Dunnville to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton S. Depotty, parents of Mrs. Miller.

Mr. Miller is reported last evening to be likely to recover.

Was Troubled With Weak Back For Years.

Could Not Perform Household Duties. Doctors Attended Without Avail.

Mrs. Arch. Schnare, Black Point, N.B., writes: "For years I was troubled with weak back. Oftentimes I have lain in bed for days, being scarcely able to turn myself, and I have also been a great sufferer while trying to perform my household duties. I had doctors attending me without avail and tried liniments and plasters, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was about to give up in despair when my husband induced me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after using two boxes I am now well and able to do my work. I am positive Doan's Kidney Pills are all that you claim for them, and I would advise all kidney sufferers to give them a fair trial."

A RELIGIOUS FANATIC MEETS HIS DEATH

"Adamite" Sharp Fatally Wounded in Kansas City.

DEATHS WILL TOTAL FIVE

One Policeman and Little Girl Are Killed, Two Are Mortally Hurt, and Sharp Is In Hopeless Condition, as a Result of a Fight In Which "Adam God" Prophet Attacks Police—Once Raided Canada.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 9.—In the shadow of the city hall, a riot in which religious fanatics and the police participated, resulted yesterday afternoon in the death of two persons, the fatal injury of three others, and severe injury to two persons.

A. O. Dalbow, policeman, and Lola Pratt, aged 14 years, were killed, and the fatally injured are: Patrick Clark, police lieutenant; John Sharp, a street preacher known as "Adam God"; Michael Mullane, policeman.

Probation Officer Holt of the juvenile court yesterday went to Fifth and Hain streets to investigate a case of alleged abduction.

Probation Officer Holt met Sharp, who was exhorting a crowd on the street. With Sharp was a woman named Selzer and five children, ranging in age from three to 14 years. Holt then inquired as to the identity of the children. The woman replied that the officer "had better attend to his own business." The officer persevered in his enquiries, and Adam God "who wears long white beard and hair, struck him a blow behind the ear with a pistol, inflicting an ugly wound.

Sharp and his companions were within 50 yards of the police station when officers stepped into the street. The Sharpites, with profane abuse, served notice on all that they would preach right "under the eyes of the police station, and the police cannot prevent us."

The officers did not, however, expect serious trouble, and were not prepared for the volley of bullets which met them almost immediately after they appeared on the scene.

A riot call brought policemen from all directions. Thoroughly aroused, the officers closed in on Sharp and his followers, firing as they went. When the firing ceased "Adam God" was fatally wounded.

The woman and the children fled to a houseboat on the Missouri river. Fifty policemen followed them and found that the woman had barricaded herself in the houseboat. Standing on the boat with a shotgun she shouted to the officers, "Come on, you fiends." The boat was only a few feet from the bank of the river and several officers dashed toward it. The woman dropped her weapon, and seizing two of the children, she sprang into a row boat and began to row into the middle of the river. She was ordered to stop, but she only pulled the oars more vigorously. The police fired a volley at the rowboat. One struck Lola Pratt, tearing away the greater part of the child's face. She died later. The woman then surrendered.

At the police station she said she was Mrs. Pratt, wife of one of the companions of "Adam God," and mother of the dead child.

Louis Pratt, who was with the preacher when the first shooting took place, was arrested uninjured.

Winnipeg, Dec. 9.—John Sharpe, the man who styled himself "Adam God," and whose career as religious fanatic ended in bloody battle in Kansas City yesterday, is the man who last July invaded Canada from Missouri and for two or three weeks defied the Provincial Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Will Fight the Dutch.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 4.—(via Willemstad, Curacao, Dec. 9.—The Government has resolved to fire on the first Dutch warship that commits an unfriendly act, and the beginnings of what may develop into a strong movement against President Castro have been noticed.

It was learned here to-day that President Castro recently closed negotiations for the purchase in Germany of three gunboats.

FIAT IS REFUSED BY SIR JAMES

Premier Whitney Denies Application Regarding Power Question.

APPLIES TO LONDON CASE

Acting in Absence of Hon. J. J. Foy, Leader of Provincial Government Decides That Hydro Should Not Become a Party to Beardmore Suit Against Toronto—Another Application Is Possible.

Toronto, Dec. 8.—Sir James Whitney, Acting Attorney-General, has refused to grant a fiat making the Hydro-Electric Power Commission a party with the city in the suit, brought by Mr. W. D. Beardmore. The decision, which was made public last evening, also applies to the case of Smith v. London. However, in the judgment there is a clause by which the applications may be renewed after the opening of the Legislature. The full text of the judgment is as follows:

"These applications were fully argued before me by counsel representing the different interests on the 1st of December. I am expected, apparently on the mere statement of a plaintiff that the members of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission were guilty of fraud and deception, as set out in the statements of claim, to assume the truth of the statement, and, therefore, grant a fiat. Under this doctrine it would be simply necessary for a plaintiff to interject into his pleading any allegation calculated, if true, to justify the issue of a fiat, and a fiat would follow as a matter of course. As I cannot agree with this, and as under such circumstanes fiats have been many times refused, I do not see my way clear to grant these applications.

"Apart from the question of fraud, the plaintiffs' contention in each case rests upon the view that the Municipal Councils had not the power under the statute to finally enter into contracts with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission without submitting the terms of them to the ratepayers. I have personal knowledge that this was not the intention of the Legislature, and I cannot divest myself of this knowledge. It may be that at its next session, which cannot now be long delayed, the Legislature may make a declaration on the subject.

"In refusing the applications now I reserve the leave to the applicants to renew them, after the opening of the session."

At the meeting held in Windsor after the recent visit of Hon. Adam Beck, it was decided to invite all the cities and towns between St. Thomas and Windsor to a power conference on Friday next at 1.30 p.m. The representatives have been asked to submit the amount of power their municipalities will be likely to require.

The conference will deliberate with a view to the submission of electric-power bylaws in January. The Hydro-Electric Commission have until February to close the additional contracts arranged for at the cheap rates under the original McGulgan contract. Prompt action by the municipalities in the west will enable these rates to be taken advantage of.

To Prohibit Hop Substitutes.

London, Dec. 9.—A bill prohibiting the use of hop substitutes in the manufacture of beer was introduced in the House of Commons yesterday by Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd-George.

This bill, which the tariff reformers hail as a protective measure, was read for the first time. In addition to stopping the use of hop substitutes, it prohibits the importation of hops except in bags properly marked.

EXAMINER "A" BOWLERS MAKE IT A BLANK FOR THE B. A. C.

The Examiner A team took three straight games from the B.A.C. last night in the Peterborough Ten Pin league series at the P.B.C., the losers attributing their reverses in a large measure to the rigid enforcement of the foul-line rule which worked a hardship upon Best and Bruce, who was playing under the new conditions for the first time. The scores were small all along the line, though Huston managed to roll a very fair average. Cairns made his first appearance with the team but being out of practice did not show his real merit. McCrea was high man for the losers, his best single being 159, and his aggregate 410.

To-night Hutch's Hams and the Lock Works come together, and the last named is counting upon taking three games. The lunches think otherwise and have been putting in a lot

PETERBORO' TO HAVE TWO O. H. A. TEAMS—BIG MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT

Peterborough is to be represented in the O.H.A. this season by an intermediate and junior O.H.A. team, at least that is what it looks like at the present moment, and the fans will no doubt be glad to hear the announcement. Yesterday it was decided to enter two teams, and a telegram was sent to W. A. Hewitt, at the O.H.A., notifying him of the club's intention to have two teams this season. A meeting of all those interested in hockey will be held on Friday night of this week at the Oriental Hotel, when officers will be elected and other arrangements made for commencing this season. Every one who is a hockey enthusiast, whether as a player or a fan is asked to be present as much important business is to come up.

The Examiner is informed on good authority that all the older players who have helped to win championships for Peterborough in the past, will turn out again this season, and a big effort will be made to carry off the honours. The old guard will form the nucleus of what should prove a team that will be decidedly hard to beat as there are a number of speedy young players who will step in and fill the vacancies. There should be a big attendance on Friday night.

THE LAKEFIELD HOCKEY CLUB ORGANIZED FOR CITY LEAGUE

Lakefield will again be in the City Hockey League this winter. Mr. W. W. Leonard, a representative of the northern Club was in the city yesterday and announced their entry. WRESTLING.

Artie Edmunds won the wrestling bout in Toronto last night with Young Roeber, getting the decision on a foul. The New Yorker, however, gave the pocket Hercules an awful argument getting three falls. Edmunds protested the second fall and although Referee Hewitt decided that it should count Roeber was game, and decided not to claim it as a fall. His sportsmanlike action, however ultimately lost him the match. The conditions were the best three out of five falls, somewhat unusual requirements in the wrestling game.

HOCKEY

The Belmont Club are considering placing a team in the City Hockey League.

THE VALUE OF COD LIVER OIL

No physician would dispute the value of COD LIVER OIL in nervous and pulmonary diseases, if the nauseous grease did not so derange digestion as to more than counteract the good done by the therapeutic principles of the oil.

In "BRICK'S TASTELESS" there is no grease. It increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, invigorates the nerves by nourishing them, and CURES Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis. Its timely use is an insurance against serious consequences, as the weakened system is a prey to germ disease, such as Tuberculosis, Typhoid and Typhus Fevers, and Diphtheria.

"BRICK'S TASTELESS" is put up in eight (8) ounce bottles, retail price fifty (50) cents, and in twenty (20) ounce bottles, retail price one (1) dollar.

THE MISSING ENGINEER RETURNS TO OWEN SOUND

Will Swear He Had Nothing To Do With Bribing Detectives.

Examiner Special.

Owen Sound, Dec. 9.—George Pumple, the C.P.R. engineer, missing in the liquor case, has returned. FIVE DOCTORS GAVE HER UP!

ULCERS AND SORES DEFIED ALL TREATMENT.

Zam-Buk Has Worked Complete Cure

Miraculous indeed is the cure which Zam-Buk has worked in the case of Mrs. Jane Beers of L'Orignal, Ont. "I began to suffer," she says, "from ulcers and skin sores. These broke out on my legs and different parts of my body, and spread to an alarming extent, causing me great pain. They defied all remedies I applied to try and heal them, and remained suppurating open wounds.

"One medical man after another gave my case up, and until I had consulted five different doctors, and they were all baffled by my case. Then I went into hospital and was there five months, and came away very little better. The sores were so extensive, and I was so weakened that I had to walk with a stick and a crutch. This was my condition when first I began to use Zam-Buk. I applied it to the sores, and in a few days I thought I saw an improvement. I persevered with the balm and, to cut a long story short, the wonderful balm did what all the doctors had failed to do—healed my ulcers. I have now put away my stick and crutch, the ulcers and sores are healed, and I take this opportunity of strongly advising all who suffer from sores, ulcers, or open wounds to give Zam-Buk a proper trial.'

It is by affecting such impressive cures as this that Zam-Buk has established its world-wide reputation. In every country to which it has been introduced it has become the leading family balm and embrocation. This surely is proof of exceptional merit!

Purely herbal in nature it supplies the housewife with a handy and effective cure for the hundred-and-one injuries to which she or the children or the husband are liable.

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for eczema, ringworm, scalp-sores, cold-sores, chapped hands, sores due to blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Beware of cheap and harmful imitations sometimes offered as "just as good."

CHARGED WITH PERJURY.

E. Kenyon Stow, Cobalt Capitalist, Arrested in Toronto.

Toronto, Dec. 9.—Justice Riddell yesterday afternoon ordered the arrest of E. Kenyon Stow, defendant in a mining action involving $51,300 damages in the non-jury Assizes.

At the close of the hearing Justice Riddell in giving judgment to the plaintiff declared that Stow had sworn falsely when he said that he had not promised to give 10 per cent. of the stock of a mining company to J. Carling Kelly and ordered his arrest for perjury.

Stow was taken into custody by Detective Kennedy upon a warrant which the detective swore to, the charge being:

"That E. Kenyon Stow as part of his evidence under oath in open court made an assertion that he did not agree to give one T. Carling Kelly ten per cent. of the stock of a company to be formed to take over the Otisse Mining Co., such assertion being known to said Stow to be false and being intended by him to mislead the court."

Bail has been fixed at $2,000, Stow having offered $1,000 cash. Bail was accepted by S. L. Owens, local manager of the Bank of Ottawa.

Justice Riddell allowed Mr. O'Meara to amend his claim from $51,300 to $100,000.

BRAMPTON MUST VOTE.

Mandamus Issued to Compel Temperance Plebiscite.

Toronto, Dec. 9.—Chief Justice Meredith yesterday issued a mandamus to compel the town council of Brampton to submit a local option bylaw, saying:

"I think it would be the purest formality to hold that this is not the petition signed with the heading upon it. I have more difficulty as to the other point as to whether the prerequisite literal application has been shown."

His lordship quoted from an American authority to the effect that in public matters, as there might be no one whose duty it was to make the application, the literal demand was not necessary.

"That sounds to me like very good sense," remarked the chief justice, "and it ought to be the law of the country."

His lordship also remarked that the loose, careless manner in which the temperance lists often fail to comply with the plain, simple direction of the law, imposed a burden on the public.

EVANS IS ELECTED.

He Wins Mayoralty of Winnipeg Against R. A. C. Manning.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 9.—William Sanford Evans was yesterday elected mayor. With six polls to hear from he has 4,134 votes, R. A. C. Manning, 3,091 and the dark horse, W. S. Eades, 82, giving Evans a lead of 1,043.

For controllers, R. D. Waugh and J. W. Cockburn with eleven votes between them, are 1,100 ahead of the next competitors, A. A. McArthur and J. G. Harvey, Joel Baker making a poor fifth.

No figures on the bylaws are obtainable, but it is believed the bylaw for $400,000 for an overhead bridge, and one for $215,400, carried with substantial majorities.

Want City to Assist.

Kingston, Dec. 9.—The Wormwood Piano Co., burned out, want the city to assist in the rebuilding, claiming that the fire protection equipment was inadequate.

A bylaw to bonus the Wormwood Piano Co., to rebuild the factory burned recently, will be voted on in January.

TRAIN FOR BUSINESS

Most men train their brains and almost entirely neglect their bodies. They do not seem to realize that keenness of judgment and clearness of thought depend as much on the body as on the brain itself. Any man can prove this to his own satisfaction by attempting to decide a weighty business problem while suffering with an acute attack of indigestion or a violent spell of biliousness.

The amount of work that the brain can do depends much on the healthfulness of liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices in tablet form. They act directly on liver, bowels, kidneys and skin—and enable these vital organs to rid the system of all impurities. Thus the blood will be kept pure and rich, the brain active, digestion sound, and life made pleasant.

"Fruit-a-tives" are now put up in new shape—the new 25c box as well as the regular 50c size. If your dealer does not carry them, write Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE QUESTION OF CHURCHES AND DINING ROOMS

Mr. Frederick C. Moore Contributes Letter—An Answer to Mr. Carlisle.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With your kind permission I would like to give my opinion about this "something," that my dear friend Mr. Carlisle is protesting against. Irishmen have the privilege of speaking twice, that is, if he speaks under a wrong impression "or makes a mistake," or happens to judge wrong. He can speak again and perhaps express himself more correctly. I think Mr. Carlisle not only misunderstands the reason why the social gatherings are held in churches, but perhaps also misunderstands what Paul meant in the quotation he asks us to read. I would ask if Mr Carlisle would inquire into the need of such gatherings as he condemns and find out just what they are held for, and also look into his quotation and see what it particularly refers to. There is one lesson in it for all of us, and that is not to back-bite and talk ill of one another. Allow me to quote Bloomfield & Doddridge on this particular portion of scripture:

"Here schisms and heresies are taken in the same sense as meaning divisions and parties in the church, but the latter term is now generally applied to separations from it upon matters of faith. The Apostle terms as divisions (or schisms) the want of regard, and of sympathy of feeling, and unity of spirit, described verse 20, as existing among the Corinthians, which doubtless led to many unhappy and unhallowed altercations.

"This apparently refers to the agape or love-feast, accompanying and at times preceding the Lord's supper. To this each brought a portion and the more wealthy seem to have taken again the food they brought, almost to the exclusion of the poorer sort, who thus would fare scantily and feel mortified. Bloomfield says:—'The fault with which they are charged is gross selfishness at a meal united with the eucharistical one and formed on such principles of Christian charity and brotherly communion as would be a proper introduction or supplement to it. These love-feasts are alluded to in Jude 12, and seem to have been joined to the Lord's supper in imitation of our Lord's uniting it to the passover feast. Some have thought that the Corinthians confounded partaking of the Lord's supper with their usual meals. Doddridge remarks that Socrates reproves other Greeks, the Athenians, for similar conduct at their common suppers."

My own opinion of social gatherings in connection with church work is that they are necessary for the bringing together of young people in our cities away from home and living in lodgings. These people's home must be the church and God forbid that the time may ever come when the church will be closed against such gatherings.

In London, England, and Dublin, Ireland, the mission halls and churches in some of the poorer districts, and not only the poorer ones, are kept open day and night for homeless folk and others who have not a good home of their own, where their sad hearts are made glad and happy. I have no doubt Mr. C. has seen similar work done in Belfast, Ireland—Christ-like people not only come to provide a happy time with singing and music, etc., but also out of love and kindness bring good things to eat.

It has been my privilege to attend a church of this kind in Dublin where social gatherings were a weekly affair and were absolutely necessary.

This church was our home and I have great reason to thank God for the kindness shown me there, and, Mr. Editor, if you will pardon my writing just a few words with reference to myself since coming to this country, I was a stranger in a strange land, but the good people of Toronto and Peterborough who have been so thoughtful as to have these gatherings, have enabled me to meet friend after friend, and to feel perfectly at home, even if I am away far from my dear old Irish home, by the side of the road. God bless the promoters of such gatherings as enable us to meet and know each other and help each other to live a better and purer life.

Yours truly,
FREDERICK C. MOORE,
599 Harvey street.
Peterborough, Dec. 8, 1908.

OBITUARY.

NETTIE HANLON

The Sharon Herald gives the following notice of the death of a young lady who was well known in this city and who had relatives residing in this district, Mr. Jas. Hanlon of Otonabee being an uncle.

Nov. 5th, 1908—To her wide circle of friends and acquaintances news of the death of Miss Nettie Hanlon, elder daughter of Mr and Mrs Richard Hanlon, which occurred about 11 o'clock Thursday morning at the family home on East State street, came with startling suddenness and was heard with genuine sorrow. Few knew that she was ill and those who did know were not aware tha ther condition was at all serious. She had been confined to the house since Tuesday, suffering apparently only from a severe cold. Her health was always delicate and her ailment developed into pleural pneumonia.

Miss Hanlon was a charming and accomplished young woman. She was born in Sharon 22 years ago and had spent her entire life here. She attended the public schools, but was compelled to give up her studies after reaching the Freshman class in the High School. She was a musician of more than ordinary ability, having graduated several year ago from St. Nicholastica's Academy. Miss Hanlon was a member of the Sacred Heart church and took an active part in church affairs. She is survived by her parents one sister, Frances, and one brother John. The funeral will probably be held at 8 o'clock Monday morning from the Sacred Heart church.

NOMINATIONS—Monday, Dec. 28
ELECTIONS—Monday, January 4.

For Mayor, Aldermen, Board of Education and Water Commissioner.

Six Alderman obtaining highest votes will hold office for two years.

The other six retire at end of first year.

Hereafter only six Aldermen will be elected at a time, as long as the new system remains.

By-laws will be voted on for the issuing of debentures for the Smith street bridge, the expenses of filling the water front and street extensions, and also the purchase of the Exhibition grounds. Total, $100,500.00.

Rate of interest on debentures 4 1-4 Per Cent.

In a few short weeks the annual nominations for civic honours will be held and a week later the people will have the opportunity of electing their representatives to look after the city's welfare for the coming year. With this in view, a few of the necessary details connected with the method of carrying out the work, have been secured for benefit of those ratepayers whose names are on the voting list for the municipal election.

The nominations will be held on Monday, December 28th, in the Council Chambers, at ten o'clock for Water Commissioner and for the vacancies on the Board of Education, and at noon on the same day and in the same place for the Mayoralty and City Council. Mr. T. F. Matthews is the retiring member of the Water Commission and Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Robt. Fair, W. S. Robinson and Dr. M. A. Morrison are the members of the Board of Education whose terms expire this year.

Vote on By-laws

There are three by-laws which will also be presented to the electors, the total amount of money involved being $100,500. There is one to provide for the issuing of debentures to raise $49,000 for a new bridge over the Otonabee at Smith street, a second is $30,000 to purchase the Exhibition grounds and the third is for $21,500 for the expenses of filling in the water front and for street extensions.

A New System

At this election a new law comes into effect in regard to the constitution of the council. Twelve aldermen will be elected, as has been the custom for several years, but the six securing the largest number of votes will hold office for two years, while the other six will retire at the end of the first year, and after that six will be elected each year, as long as the system remains in force.

Hangman Radcliffe To Send Three Men To Eternity At Once

Examiner Special

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—Official Hangman Radcliffe is on his way to New Westminster, B.C., to officiate at a triple hanging on December 18th. The doomed men are John Pertella, William Jenkins and Lee Clung. The first two are negroes and the last a Chinaman. Radcliffe has not as yet officiated at a triple hanging, but ten years ago he hung two men together at St. Thomas, Ontario. This time he has the task of sending all three to eternity at once, and as he has always been successful in his tasks, he will likely succeed in making a new record on the calendar of Canadian criminal history.

The Crystal Completely Renovated; Will Open Its Doors On Saturday

The patrons of that popular little theatre "The Crystal," will have difficulty in recognizing their favourite amusement house when its doors are open to the public on Saturday afternoon. During the past two weeks carpenters and decorators have been hard at work and as a result the theatorium is completely renovated and changed inside. The hall has been enlarged by an extension at the back and the floor has been lowered so that a good view of the screen can be obtained from any part of the house. The seating capacity has been largely increased by the improvement and the Crystal will be able to accommodate large crowds. However, the proprietor, Mr. Edwards has not been content with enlarging his theatre, but has also gone to considerable expense in decorating the interior with the result that he has one of the prettiest little theatoriums in Canada. Two boxes in theatre style have been constructed, one on each side of the hall, and adorned with neat brass railings, add considerably to the effect. The orchestra has been provided with room immediately in front of the stage, and their section is also cut off by a railing. The wall and ceilings have been done in attractive shades of red and green, the walls being burlap with artistic panels. The whole effect is charming and will surprise the Crystal patrons.

Mr. Hipperson has been the contractor in charge of the carpenter work, while Mr. Watson has looked after the decorating and painting. Both are to be congratulated upon the work they have turned out.

Team Of Horses Fell Through Trestle Bridge On G. T. R. Track

How a team of horses can run at break neck speed down a railroad track and half way across a trestle bridge, finally to lose their footing and become tangled in their harness and lie helpless across the beams and rails, how they could go through this experience and escape without a broken bone is more than a few residents in the vicinity of Murray street can understand.

Last night, after six o'clock, a team of horses belonging to R. Hicks & Co., started to run away from a house on Aylmer street, and dashed northward to Murray, where they turned west to Bethune, up Bethune to McDonel and around by Rubidge street until they came to the G. T. R. track, when they suddenly turned on to the track and ran towards the station. They reached the bridge over the creek and got almost half way across before their feet went down between the beams.

A number of men quickly assembled, word was sent to the G. T. R. station, and danger signals were placed on either side of the bridge. A load of lumber was brought from Hicks yards and as the horses struggled the boards were placed under them until they were finally extricated. Many expressions of wonderment were heard when it was learned that neither of the animals had been seriously injured.

NO ROOM FOR REST.

A go-ahead Government can never find rest. Its energy and enterprise make work for itself. The Liberal Government's energetic immigration policy by increasing the population of the West has increased the grain-growing capacity pari passu. This has made necessary the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay railways. These in turn will call for a still more energetic immigration propaganda and this in turn will call for enlarged facilities for transportation. The Government can never rest.

The water of Niagara Falls, on its way oceanward, reaches tide-water in twenty-three hours.

RURAL DELIVERY AND ROADS.

Rural mail delivery is now in operation on 945,087 miles of road in the United States. Of these roads 35,000 miles are macadam, the remainder being earth, sand or gravel. Since the service was first established $70,632,162 has been expended on roads traversed by rural carriers. Road officials and patrons are notified whenever repairs are necessary on rural routes. More work has been done on such public highways and more expenditures made in their improvements during the past year than in any previous year in the history of rural delivery, and the official reports received clearly indicate that interest in road improvement is being generally manifested throughout the country. If the institution of rural delivery in Canada is to lead to an improvement in the highways such as has taken place in the United States its advent will indeed be a greater blessing to this young country than rural free mail delivery itself. This will certainly be the case, if it is made a condition of free delivery that the highways along which the routes are to be maintained are of a certain standard. No investment the Government can make will yield such varied and valuable returns, in saving of time, wear and tear of horseflesh and vehicles, as liberal expenditure of money in providing public highways.

Canadian wheat was exported to Great Britain in the five months ending August, to the value of $13,425,503.

CIVIC TAXATION.

At this season of the year, when the municipal elections loom in view, the ratepayers of Brockville will be interested in the comparative returns to the Provincial Government by Ontario cities with reference to their assessment, taxation, totality and per head and their rate. According to the figures last submitted (1907) the lowest rate of taxation was 17.3 mills and the least amount collected per head of population, $6.87 was that of Guelph, which has a municipal street railway, waterworks, electric light plant, and the usual civic utilities. This, it is said, has been reduced this year still lower—to fourteen mills. The next lowest in collection per head is Peterborough $8.53, Fort William $9.20, Kingston $9.35, Port Arthur $9.84. The biggest amount of taxes per head of population is that of Chatham with $17.89 Toronto coming second with $14.94, and Ottawa third with $12.13. The mill rate of Chatham 36.4 is the highest, while Belleville has 27.9, and Niagara Falls 27.4. Details of population, assessment, will be of interest for comparative purposes;

Brockville; Population 8,926, assessment $3,660,295; total taxes $98,953.67, per head $11.08, rate 26 mills;

Guelph; Population 13,700 assessment $5,540,930, total taxes $94,056, per head $6.87, rate 17.3.

Belleville; Population 9,515, assessment $4,018,930, total taxes $112,322, taxes per head $11.80, mill rate 27.9

Brantford; Population 19,899, assessment $10,452,116, total taxes $246,195, per head $12.37, rate 23.6.

Chatham; Population 9,942, assessment $4,855,409, taxes $177,839, per head $17.89, rate 36.4.

Fort William; Population 13,882, assessment $6,326,270, taxes $127,751, per head $9.20, rate 20.2.

Kingston Population 18,626, assessment $7,937,240, taxes $173,753, per head $9.33, rate 24.6.

Niagara Falls; Population 8,976, assessment $3,959,005, total taxes $108,528, per head $12.09, rate 27.4.

Ottawa; Population 69,893, assessment $41,318,150, taxes $937,737, per head $14.13, rate 23.9.

Peterborough; Population 16,000, assessment $7,067,231, total taxes $136,417, per head $8.53, rate 19.3.

Port Arthur; Population 13,576, assessment $7,149,846, taxes $133,613, per head $9.84, rate 18.7.

St. Catharines; Population 12,295, assessment $6,084,985, taxes $149,281, per head $12.14, rate 24.5.

St. Thomas; Population 13,414, assessment $7,194,846, taxes $133,615, per head $11.21, mills 25.4.

Stratford; Population 14,069, assessment $6,018,310, taxes $157,183, per head $11.17, rate 26.1.

Windsor, Population 15,417, assessment $8,184,280, taxes $190,529, per head $12.36, rate 23.3.

The total exports of Canada for the twelve months ending August, 1907, were valued at $260,225,019; for the same period in 1908, the value was $205,956,949.

CANADIAN GRAIN MOVEMENTS.

By returns sent from Winnipeg to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, some interesting details of western grain movements are learned. For the three months ended Nov. 30th, double the number of cars of wheat were inspected than during any corresponding period on record; also the percentage of high grade grain was larger, while very few complaints were made as to the inspection. The total number of cars of wheat inspected was 41,750, which at 1,050 bushels of wheat to the car is equal to 43,837,000 bushels, out of a total of some 80 million bushels of the crop of 1908 available for export. In all 48,898 car loads of grain were handled, of which the C.P.R. carried 30,900 car loads, the Canadian Northern 14,212, the Great Northern (to Duluth) 2,604 and the Grand Trunk Pacific, in the two months of its operation carried 1,182 car loads. During the corresponding three months of 1907 the C.P.R. transported 17,985 car loads of grain; the C.N.R., 7,170 car loads, and the Great Northern carried to Duluth 683 car loads.

"The showing," the Ottawa Citizen remarks, "is an excellent one upon several counts. Not only is the proportion of the year's crop moved out during the season of navigation larger than previously recorded, but the quality of the grain is better, and the fact is made manifest that the provision of an additional outlet by means of the Grand Trunk Pacific has not kept pace with the increased productiveness of the West, all of which goes to show that it will eventually require not only the combined facilities of existing railways but also the capacity of the Georgian Bay canal and a railway to Hudson Bay to adequately cope with the Canadian crop moving problem."

Here is a candid admission that even in the interest of the profitable handling of the Northwest wheat crop the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is justified. Thus the logic of facts constrains a Conservative journal to antagonize the policy of its party which has levelled the heavy artillery of its criticism against the Transcontinental Railway. The Examiner has frequently insisted in connection with the construction of the Trent Canal that with its completion and with the completion of all projected railways and means of transportation, there would be inadequate facilities for the proper disposal of the western wheat crop. Mr. Charles M. Hays, President of the Grand Trunk Pacific in an interview with the New York Times, says that with six million acres of Northwest lands under the plough "we have only scratched the surface." What will the harvest be when sixty, instead of six, million acres are producing wheat? If six million acres produced eighty millions of wheat for export, it is easy arithmetic to show that sixty million acres will produce eight hundred millions of wheat for export. The Mother Country takes about 200 millions of breadstuffs per year, so that it will not be long before Canada can supply the wants of the British Islands four times over—can feed the home land and contribute 600,000,000 towards realizing our vaunt at the Queen's Jubilee—"Canada, the Granary of the Empire."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Eastern Dairyman's Association meets at Prescott on January 6th, 7th and 8th, 1909.

Winnipeg has elected a Conservative as Mayor. This fault is mitigated by the fact that he is a newspaper editor.

According to Osgoode Hall notes, Mr. Justice Britton has appointed Monday, the 14th inst., as the date for the hearing of the preliminary objections of Mr. J. R. Stratton in the West Peterborough election case.

The celibate editor of an evening contemporary writes of "the handsomely lighted room made radiant by the presence of so many lovely girls." Girls like "taffy," but they do not appreciate theoretical appreciation. Appreciation without appropriation is merely sounding brass and tinkling cymbal, which has no relation to the ring of the wedding ring, the true test of the coin of admiration.

The total amount to the credit of depositors in post office, Government and other savings banks for the year 1908, is $89,500,000. The amount thus on deposit in 1907, was $90,200,000, a difference of only $200,000, the year 1907 was the banner year in a long run of prosperity. The past year we have had a slight pinch of hard times, business of all kinds has been more or less depressed, employment has been less plentiful and less regular, but with all this the people at large, the people of moderate means, who generally resort to savings banks investments have decreased the deposits by withdrawing only, $200,000 out of ninety millions.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—It is understood that Hon. his keen and alert intellectual vigour, His long Parliamentary experience, and close and constant touch with the progress of public affairs, and his unrivalled ability as a public speaker qualify him to lead the Senate debates with tact and dignity, and to the public advantage.

Mr. F B Carvell, who is visiting here, referring to the rebuff given the Hazen ministry in New Brunswick, in its loss of two local seats recently, says: "If the Hazen ministry went to the country to-morrow it would be wiped off the political map."

The Department of Agriculture states authoritatively that there hasn't been a single case of foot and mouth disease discovered in this Province, and now that the worst of it is over we are pretty sure to escape. The strictest precautions are, however, continued, and will be unrelaxed, till all fear of danger has absolutely disappeared.

A Boon to the Bilious

Are you compelled to deny yourself many wholesome foods because you think they make you bilious? Do you know that your condition is more to blame than the foods? Your liver and stomach need attention more than the diet. When you find yourself suffering with a bilious attack, take and all annoying symptoms will soon disappear. They settle the stomach, regulate the liver and exercise the bowels. Their good effects are felt immediately.

Beecham's Pills mingle with the contents of the stomach and make easy work of digestion. The nourishing properties of the food are then readily assimilated and the residue carried off without irritating the intestines or clogging the bowels.

Beecham's Pills should be taken whenever there is sick headache, furred tongue, constipation, sallow skin or any symptoms that indicate an inactive liver.

EDUCATION FOR FARMER.

Guelph, Dec. 10.—The humanities of farm life and the evangel of higher living on saner lines formed the themes of the addresses at the usual big public meeting of the winter fair.

President Creelman of the college struck a responsive chord in the hearts of all thinking farmers at the meeting, which was packed to the doors. His remarks were taken up by W. F. Maclean, M.P. of South York, and if such doctrines of rational living were preached as broadly and accepted as completely over rural Ontario as they were last night's audience a regeneration in vitality of the people, a financial recuperation and healthier race of hardy stock should result. The high plane of the discussions and the co-operation of a sympathetic audience amply justified the assertion that Canadian talent on the rostrum as far excelled the imported article as day was better than darkness.

Hon. Jas. Duff occupied the chair, and in a breezy address referred to Ontario's wonderful possibilities in soil and rock bed, while material development might go on greatly all progress would prove abortive if the farmer was not educated from within, he said.

Popular Joe Downey, M.P.P., along with Mayor Newstead, made the address of welcome, and again referred to Guelph's claim and support of the winter fair. To these Lieut.-Col. McEwen, president of the fair, and Wm. Smith, ex-M.P., president of the Horse Breeders, replied. Hon. Dr. Landry, Minister of Agriculture of New Brunswick, also spoke.

CORONATION OATH.

British Government Would Leave Out Anti-Romanist Slur.

London, Dec. 10.—In the House of Lords yesterday the Earl of Crewe announced that the Government would introduce a bill changing the coronation oath, so that the clauses denouncing Roman Catholicism as idolatrous would not be in the oath, but not otherwise changing its Protestant features.

The Duke of Norfolk and Lord Ripon, Conservative and Liberal Roman Catholic peers, expressed their gratitude at the announcement, which, they declared would be heartily welcomed by the Roman Catholic people.

The Earl of Kinnaird, an Independent, and leader in many religious movements, especially in home missions, expressed grave doubt about the wisdom of such a change, and was not at all sure that the country would endorse the proposal.

The date of the introduction of the measure was not stated, but it is said it will be one of the earliest bills after the Christmas holidays.

Hops Bill Passes.

London, Dec. 10.—The House of Commons at 3.30 o'clock this morning passed the second reading of the Hops Bill.

The bill prohibits the use of hop substitutes in the manufacture of beer.

Lost, With 25 Men.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 10.—There is little doubt that the steamer D. M. Clemson went down with all hands near Whitefish Point. Twenty-three hatch covers have been washed ashore and their description convinces the Provident Steamship Co. that they belong to the missing boat. The crew numbered 25.

NEWFOUNDLAND PAYS TRIBUTE

To the Grand Work Dodd's Kidney Pills Are Doing.

Garnish, Fortune Bay, Nfld., Dec. 9.—Special—Among the fishermen here, who through exposure to wet and cold, are subject to those pains and aches which come from diseased kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are looked upon as a positive boon to mankind. They are never tired of telling how their backaches and their rheumatism vanish before the great kidney remedy.

Among many others Mr. Frank Banfield, after years of suffering, has found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills, and here is what he is telling his friends:

"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best medicine for backache I have ever used. I only used two boxes and they cured me of backache I had for five years. It started through a strain. My father's back also bothered him, and he got some relief from one pill I gave him. They were too precious to give him more. All persons suffering from backache should use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Why do Dodd's Kidney Pills cure backache? Simply because backache is kidney ache, and Dodd's Kidney Pills positively cure all kidney aches and ills. This has been proved in thousands of cases in Canada. If you haven't used them yourself ask your neighbours.

Preparing For Change.

Toronto, Dec. 10.—Legislation will be needed for the proposed change in the date of the Ontario Government's fiscal year. At present it closes on Dec. 31. It is purposed to close the next year on Oct. 31, necessitating a short term fiscal year of ten months.

Next session of the Legislature will consequently be asked to provide estimates for ten months. In order to carry on the business, however, estimates for the following 12 months will also be submitted. These will necessarily be somewhat light, as many of the expenditures cannot be estimated so far ahead. This will be remedied by providing heavy supplementary estimates in the following session of the Legislature.

It is understood that good progress is being made with the accounts and business will be in good shape for the session early in February.

To Develop Brockville.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—A meeting of the directors of the proposed Ottawa to Brockville Electric Railway was held here yesterday afternoon, and it was decided to progress the scheme as speedily as possible. The railway is intended to run through Augusta Centre, North Gower, Manotick and Merivale.

One of the ideas of the promoters is to develop Brockville and vicinity as a residential district, the electric railway making it possible for business men to travel to and from the capital daily.

The line will be used as a steam road in order to earn the Government subsidy. The distance is 60 miles.

United States' Bad Year.

Washington, Dec. 10.—The annual report of Mr. Cortelyou, the Secretary of U. S. Treasury, shows a reversal of conditions for the fiscal year 1908, as compared with the fiscal year for 1907. For the latter year the receipts were $84,236,586 in excess of the disbursements. For the fiscal year 1908 the disbursements were $58,070,901 in excess of the receipts, due to business depression and increased appropriations.

Fortunately, the report says, the available cash balance at the beginning of the fiscal year was $272,081,445.

Verdict For $450.

Milton, Dec. 10.—At the Assizes yesterday Allen Kemp, blacksmith of Oakville, was given a verdict for $450 against Harry Giddings, one-time champian athlete of Toronto University.

Making Traveling Safer.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—The Railway Commission has issued an order providing for the daily inspection of electric bells at highway crossings. When they are found to be out of order a flagman must be stationed at the crossing till repairs are made.

Another order provides that freight cars attached to passenger trains must be provided with air brakes and wheels with steel tires. It is also provided that there must in future be a distance of seven feet allowed from the centre of a mail car to the cranes at stations on which mail bags are deposited. This is to prevent accidents to passengers in putting their heads out of a window.

Acquitted of Theft Charge.

St. Catharines, Dec. 10.—Arthur E. Bull, Beamsville, was acquitted on the first of five theft charges before Judge Carman in sessions yesterday. The crown refused to press the other four indictments, but he was held in bail to appear at the June session. A number of witnesses swore that complainant could not be believed on oath.

Going to Prince Rupert.

Chatham, Dec. 10.—H. C. Clements, formerly M.P., who lost in West Kent in the last election, and Geo. Heyward, a prominent citizen, will leave for Prince Rupert, B.C., after the holidays. Both men will take up a permanent residence in the western terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

STEADY PROGRESS IN MINING

Practical Work Being Carried on Energetically—No "Sensational Strikes" Reported.

WINTER SEASON ARRIVES

"Business in the West is again on the upward incline and in a short time will be better than before the stringency." Such was the substance of the remarks of Mr. R. R. Hall, who has returned this week from a month's business tour to the Pacific Coast. All along the line of the C.P.R., the men of the West are in a mood more optimistic than ever before. The wholesale men report collections to be excellent during the past few months. During the money stringency which seems now to be in its dying stages, very little speculation was done on large scales, with the result that the Western people have their money still.

Mr. Hall states that lumbering and mining conditions in British Columbia are very brisk, and business along these lines promises to be active during the coming winter. The crops have, on the whole, been good. The immense production of grain this year is followed by a great shortage in cars to carry it east to the seaboard, and the people of the West are longing for the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, in order that their produce may be taken directly to the eastern markets and shipping points. They realize that the country in which they reside is vast enough to export products that will keep at least two transcontinental railways busy a good deal of the year.

A PRESENTATION TO NORMAL SCHOOL TEACHER

Lindsay Sunday School Give Him Biblical Dictionary.

Lindsay, Dec. 10.—A pleasing event took place in St. Andrew's Sunday school last evening when Mr. Geo. A Cornish, science master in the Peterborough Normal School, and formerly superintendnt of St. Andrew's Sunday school, and his wife, were made the recipients of tokens of esteem by the teachers of St. Andrew's Sunday school. Mr. Cornish was presented with two handsomely bound volumes of The Dictionary of Jesus Christ and the Gospels, by Hastings, and Mrs. Cornish with a fine Morocco hand bag.

Some months have elapsed since Mr. and Mrs. Cornish left Lindsay to take up residence in Peterborough, but advantage was taken of the annual Sunday school teachers' meeting last evening, and both were invited to attend. Mr. Cornish was formerly Science Master at the Lindsay Collegiate Institute.

FALSE THEORIES.

Lead to Worthless or Harmful Remedies

Stimulating the scalp may allay the itching of the dandruff, but that does not cure the scalp. The disease won't yield to quinine or capsicum nor alcohol, because it is caused by a germ or parasite. To cure dandruff the germ must be destroyed. Until recently there was no hair preparation, or dandruff cure, or hair restorer on the market that would kill that insidious germ that dries up the scalp in little scales called dandruff, and absorbes the vitality of the hair, causing falling hair, and finally baldness. Newbro's Herpicide is the only really scientific preparation to cure dandruff, prevent falling hair, and baldruff, prevent falling hair, and baldness Sold by leading druggists. Familiar Clause Appears In Presentment Of Grand Jury Recommends City to Provide Place Other Than Jail for its Poor—Poverty the Only Crime of Nine of the Inmates—Hospitals and Other Buildings in Good Condition.

THE ABSENCE OF CRIME

The Grand Jury of the General Session of the County Court made their presentation to Judge Weller yesterday afternoon, and is one that should be satisfactory to everyone. The absence of crime is one of the most prominent conditions and the county buildings were found to be well provided and under careful management. This Grand Jury recommends that something should be done by the city towards looking after its aged poor. In this respect their presentment is similar to many others that have been prepared.

The report is as follows:

To His Honour Judge Weller.

We, the Grand Jury at the General Session of the County Court of the County of Peterborough, beg leave to report as follows:

We have visited the county jail and were much pleased with the satisfactory conditions prevailing there, and particularly with the cleanliness of the premises throughout, for which every credit is due the officials in charge. We found fifteen inmates, all male, in the building, of which number nine were vagrants and the remaining six had been committed for various offences.

The former were mostly elderly men, whose only offence is poverty, and in this connection your jury would respectfully recommend that some arrangement should be made between the city and county of Peterborough, whereby these aged people might be better taken care of in the County House of Refuge, or if that is not possible that a separate building be erected on the jail property for the accommodation and comfort of these aged poor.

We also visited the Collegiate Institute in the Central Park, as well as the Normal School in the north end of the city. These schools are a credit to the city, nicely situated and thoroughly equipped for the purpose for which they were built.

Your jury also inspected the Nicholls Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital, and have to report that these, under capable and painstaking management, are institutions of which we may well feel proud. In them the surroundings are made bright and pleasant for any who find it necessary on account of illness, to take advantage of the comforts therein provided.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, and that you may be spared to hold for many years the exalted position you now occupy. It is a matter of congratulation that the duties of your Honour, as well as that of your Grand Jury, are so light at this session.

Yours respectfully,
JOSEPH MADILL,
Foreman.

APPENDICITIS PROVES FATAL TO ENNISMORE YOUNG MAN OF 21

Taken ill a few days ago in a Cavendish lumber camp, brought to St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock, David Crowley the second son of Mr. Patrick Crowley, Ennismore, passed suddenly away last night at half past eight o'clock. The news of the demise of this promising young man was received among the friends of the family with profound regret. In spite of everything that was done death ensued from a severe attack of appendicitis.

The young man who was only twenty-one years of age was brought to his home on Tuesday and yesterday was conveyed to St. Joseph's Hospital. After seven o'clock last night a friend started for Ennismore to bring the mother to the hospital, but before the home was reached the young man had passed away.

His death is mourned by his parents and by four brothers and three sisters. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning, leaving the family residence, lot 5, concession 10, Ennismore, at nine o'clock, proceeding to St. Martin's church and afterwards to St. Peter's cemetery for interment. The deceased was well known throughout the township and also in the city.

Was Charged With Stealing $13 But The Stories Of Theft Were Different

At police court this morning two residents from the surrounding country were involved in a case in which one man was charged with stealing $13 from the other. The defendant pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by the Magistrate.

The complainant stated that he was in a local hotel on November 7, and that the defendant had suggested to him that he should give him his money to look after, and he had accordingly handed him $13. He had not seen the money since and when he asked the defendant for it on Saturday last, he had denied any knowledge of the money. The complainant admitted that he might have had eight or ten drinks that day.

The complainant's sister testified to having seen the defendant with her brother and she thought another man in the hall of the hotel, and that she had heard someone say "thirteen," as if he was counting money She had seen the defendant take her brother by the arm and take him into the bar.

The defendant denied that the complainant had given him any money to look after, although he had seen him in the hotel that day, and had had a drink with him in another hotel. He also stated that he had been drinking, and admitted that he was not sober.

The Magistrate dismissed the case, saying that he would give the defendant the benefit of the doubt. He would have liked to have had more evidence on the subject.

A man who had been indulging too freely with the flowing bowl was allowed to go with a warning.

Superb Exhibit Of Art Work By Miss Mamie McCarthy and Pupils

The exhibit of art work by Miss Mamie McCarthy and her pupils in the old Bank of Montreal building yesterday afternoon and evening, was an attraction that drew a very large number of local people to visit the rooms during the day, and they were well rewarded for their presence. Those who had not had the opportunity of seeing Miss McCarthy's work were surprised and delighted with the excellence and variety of the exhibition, which is certainly a credit to the clever young artist Miss McCarthy is, indeed, to be congratulated, and Peterborough is fortunate in having in its midst such a talented young lady, who is not only able to execute most brilliant work, but who possesses the happy faculty of being able to impart something of her brilliancy and genius to her pupils.

The exhibit was a large one, two spacious rooms being called into service to show the pictures and other articles of art work, which included portraits in oils, water colours, charcoal and pencil drawing, and black and white work and china and silk painting. Miss McCarthy had many excellent pictures of her own on view, scoring her greatest successes in portrait painting. most of the pictures being painted from sittings. The most ambitious and undoubtedly the most successful example of her skill was the large oil painting of Rev. Dr. O'Brien, which is a magnificent work, earning the admiration of all who saw it yesterday.

Some superb painted chinaware was also shown by Miss McCarthy, and the display attracted much attention. Some of Miss McCarthy's pupils also made an excellent showing in this line, as well as with the pictures. The exhibit also included some work by the young artist's mother, Mrs. L. McCarthy, which demonstrated the skill of that talented lady. Some very clever silk painting on umbrellas and cushion tops was shown, it for the most part being the work of the pupils.

Date Of The Commencement Exercises Has Been Changed

The date of the commencement exercises at the Collegiate Institute has been changed from Friday the 18th to Monday, Dec. 21st. It being the inaugural affair of this kind a special effort is being made to provide a good programme and the friends of the students may expect something out of the ordinary. Apart from the musical numbers there will be the presentation of trophies, medals, etc., won at the Collegiate's field day of sports, and the diplomas and scholarships from last midsummer's examination. Miss Gladys Crane will read the valedictory of the year. Mr. H R H Kenner will be chairman. This will be the first entertainment in the new Collegiate Institute and will, no doubt, be most successful.

MANY IN ATTENDANCE AT ROLLER RINK

The "Rube" Carnival Proved to be Very Successful.

The Rube's Carnival at the roller rink last night proved to be the success that was anticipated. A large number of costumed skaters gathered on the floor and took part in the carnival. Of course most of the characters were rubes but quite a number were in fancy dress and presented a very pleasing spectacle which was greatly enjoyed by the spectators. The band was in attendance as usual, and rendered an excellent programme.

The prize winners were:
Miss Hazel Edgar, as a western girl.
Miss Alta Cavanagh in fancy costume.
Mr. Godfrey, as Buddy McGee.
Mr. Mitchell, as a clown.
Mr. Reilly, as a rube.

A feature of the evening was the presence of a life size Teddy bear.

The superior flavour and strength of "Salada" Tea makes it possible to make two cups to one from any other tea. Besides "Salada" is infinitely more delicious and healthful. 40

RECOMMEND SOME NEW STREET LIGHTS

Fire, Water and Light Committee Take Drive About City.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee went for a drive around the city last night to see what could be done towards supplying better light at several points from whence complaints had come. They were out for about half an hour and came back and passed the following motion:

Moved by Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Butler that an incandescent lamp be recommended on Charles street; two incandescent lamps at the corner of George and Smith streets; two incandescent lamps on Bonacord street, two incandescent lamps on Walnut street and to move the lamp on Park street opposite Elm street a little north and put it out on a long arm, the lamp to be placed as directed by the chairman of the committee.

The committee also took up a number of accounts and recommended them to be paid.

CARE NECESSARY IN CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

Canadian Fire Underwriters Association Issue Warning to Merchants.

The following etter has been sent by the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association to the Examiner, referring to Christmas decorations and displays;

Following our usual custom at this season of the year I beg to call attention to the dangers to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of the year. The use of Christmas greens, harvest specimens and other inflammable materials such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, and the like, especially in connection with electric and other lighting systems, is decidedly an increase of hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe.

"Any change material to the risk, but within the control or knowledge of the assured, shall void the policy, as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the company or its local agent."

In addition to the danger to property from the displays referred to, the danger to life in crowded stores or places of meeting, by reason of a panic occasioned by a fire, even though it be small and easily controlled, is so great that the underwriters, who have made a study of such hazards, would fail in their duty should they not give this warning.

GENUINE QUALITY IN CHRISTMAS FURS AT MODERATE PRICES

Present Weather Turns One's Thoughts To The Cozy Furs.

As the genuine old-fashioned winter advances upon us the fur store becomes one of the centres of interest and attraction that appeals both to the needs of the season and the especial delight of the angels of the household. While there is nothing that can contribute so materially to the comfort of the person in the winter season as a coat, wrap, or set of furs, there is also nothing that adds more to that grace and dignity of appearance that is the instinctive aim of every daughter of Eve. The fur garment lends an indescribable effect of refined luxury to the outdoor outfit of a lady which she thoroughly appreciates, and which even a mere man cannot fail to admire. And even gentlemen are not exempt from a due regard for a kind of apparel that gratifies a pardonable vanity while providing a real comfort.

A look through the fur store of E. N. McWilliams, at 374 George St., will prove an hour well spent to any one who choose to call, and there they can be convinced that in the more moderately priced fur goods, as well as in the rarest and most expensive, an up-to-date style and an exquisite appearance are to be found combined. For the gentlemen, Mr. McWilliams shows a splendid line of fur-lined, Canadian coon and wombat coats. Persian lamb, otter and beaver gauntlets, collars and caps, and goat, bear and other sleigh robes. For the children are provided children's carriage robes, Iceland lamb and other fur coats. Fur sets, white Thibet stoles and muffs. For the ladies there is an unlimited variety of beautiful and stylish goods. Persian lamb, Canadian Mink, western lynx, natural Alaska and black Alaska, muffs Xmas ties, stoles, pillows, muffs, etc., fur-lined coats, electric seal and natural Canadian muskrat coats, grey squirrel ties, stoles and muffs, white fox and Royal Sitka fur sets, Hudson Bay sable and Russian ermine. No holiday present can be found that will give the same pride and pleasure to the recipient as a selection from this elegant stock on view at E. N. McWilliams' Fur Store, 374 George street, Peterborough.

Practical Work Being Carried On In Cobalt Mining District

Cobalt, Ont., Dec. 10 — The story in the camp this week is one of steady progress in practical mining, with no tales of sensational strikes. All of the shipping mines are working two shifts a day to the capacity of their equipment. Many of the new properties are carrying on more active work, with slightly increased gangs.

Winter seems to have begun in earnest this time, and despite the fact that boats were out on Cobalt Lake only three days ago, hundreds of the boys are to-day skating all over the lake.

Just as soon as the traveling will permit, considerable mining machinery will be hauled in to these distant camps. The winter will be a busy one in that respect, and a great lot of supplies will be sent in for use next summer.

Industriously, the camp here is very busy. Not only are all the mines working to full capacity, but there is an immense amount of building and other work going on in the town.

Incidental to the mining operations here is the big boom in the flotation of new companies. A word of warning will not be out of place regarding some of these new flotations. Knowledge of the men behind the companies is usually the best safeguard. Reports from mining engineers are not always a safe guide. There are mining engineers of probity and mining engineers, so called, of the other kind. There is a story current in camp that one property engaged for superintendent — an ex-mixed-drink expert

One reason assigned here for the weakness in the mining stock list is that many people are selling their higher priced stock of the shipping mines in order to buy the low priced new issues. This is all right for the new companies — which number about one in ten — that have first class properties, but it will be bad for people who get into the remaining nine wild cat enterprises. There are several shipping mines in Cobalt that are able to pay generous dividends for some years to come, which offer reasonable investments in which the speculative feature is well removed from a mining venture.

At present prices La Rose, Crown, Reserve, Nova Scotia, City of Cobalt, Kerr Lake, Right of Way, Trethewey, Temiskaming, Chambers Ferland, Nipissing, Nancy Helen, and several other mines are considered by men who are on the ground and ought to know, to be a reasonably safe investment.

Those investors who stick to the shipping mines for higher priced stock and the near shippers in Cobalt Township for low priced ventures will come out best in the end. There are several good prospects among the newer properties scattered throughout the ore belt of Coleman. Outside of Coleman so far there is not one conspicuous success — not one mine that has been a consistent shipper for the past three years.

The success of Montreal River is dependent upon railway transportation for supplies, machinery and shipping ore, and the road has yet to be built. So far the Ontario Government refuses to be committed on this matter, despite the hopes of mine promoters that the road will be built next summer.

VERY ARTISTIC WINDOW DRESSING

Mr. H. C. MacDonald Has a Cleverly Planned and Carefully Executed Christmas Window at R. Hall & Son.'

"The Heralding of the Dawn of Christmas Morning," is the title of the delightfully seasonable window which Mr. H. C. McDonald, with his characteristic enterprise and good taste, has chosen to display a few of the many Christmas gifts that are to be found in Rich. Hall & Son's establishment. Handkerchiefs form the piece de resistance and a very large number are arranged in a most attractive backgroung. The doll, which Mr. McDonald makes such artistic use of in all his big windows, is the herald and is equipped with a trumpet and wings, while an imitation of sun rise adds to the illusion. The window just south of the main entrance contains a very artistic panel, illustrative of Christmas eve. The two windows are a credit to Mr. McDonald and to the firm.

The cold weather is having an invigorating effect on horseflesh, judging from the epidemic of runaways that seems to have been simultaneous with the fall in the mercury. This morning a milk delivery horse gave a speed exhibition that would make good at the Turf Club's matinee. It started on George street, turned west on Hunter and "swizzed" around the corner onto Aylmer street, leaving the sleigh there but continuing with the shafts and harness down to Simcoe street, where it turned west and lost itself in the distance as far as the uptown people were concerned.

CHEMONG STAGE OVER FIRST

Mr. Dan Whetung "Breaks the Ice" in Crossing Chemong Lake This Year.

Once again has Mr. Dan Whetung been the first to drive a team of horses across Chemong Lake. This morning the lake had a substantial coating of ice and no danger was possible. Mr. Whetung crossed early this morning and succeeded, of course, in getting to Peterborough with considerable less labour than is generally expended. The thermometer out at the Chemong Reserve during the night hovered around the 20 degrees below zero mark, and "Dan" was seen on the streets to-day wrapped up in mid-winter furs.

RINK MAY BE OPENED TO-MORROW

If Weather is Cold Ice is Practically Assured.

Ice at the Brock street rink to-morrow night is practically assured. It was looking fine to-day, and if the weather is at all cold it will present a keen hard surface for the opening night. Mr. Jack Thirtheck is looking after the manufacturing process, and is doing his best to provide good ice. Further announcements will be made to-morrow. Many have been enquiring about the opening of the rink and for their benefit as well also as those who were waiting patiently the opening will be announced in to-morrow's edition.

A DANGEROUS COUGH

RESTORED TO HEALTH BY VINOL

"For two years I had a severe cough accompanied by spitting of blood. I was discouraged, for I had tried different physicians and medicines, obtaining only temporary relief. Hearing of Vinol I decided to give it a trial. The first bottle did me so much good that I made up my mind to continue for several bottles if necessary, but by the time I had finished the third bottle the cough and the spitting of blood had both entirely disappeared.

"Allen & Cochrane, the Red Cross Druggists, from whom I procured the Vinol, can vouch for the correctness of this statement." Percy E. Smith, 179 Bank street, Ottawa, Ontario.

The reason that Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it is the only preparation that contains tonic iron together with all the healing, body building elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but no oil.

Without hesitation we proclaim our faith in Vinol for chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, and as a body-builder and strength creator for old people.

Anyway, if you try it and it does no good we will refund your money on demand. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's Drug Store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

COUNTY COURT WAS CONCLUDED

Judgment Reserved in Final Case—Other Hearing in Favour of Plaintiff.

The County Court sittings were concluded yesterday afternoon when after receiving all the evidence in the Wilkins-Grover case, Judge Harding, of Lindsay, who acted instead of Judge Weller, decided to reserve judgment. This was a long drawn out case and required all of yesterday to receive the evidence. Mr. R. E. Wood appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Geo. Sherry, of Norwood, for the defendant.

In the cases of Michael Carton against David Pilkey, J. Emmerson, Wm. Arbuckle, M. Kennedy, G. D. Reynolds, N. L. Stevenson and W. H. Baldston, which were heard before Judge Weller, the plaintiff was given judgment in all of the seven.

Mr. Carton sought to recover the payment of notes from the above defendants, which had been given to him by his brother, Mr. George Carton, for collection, as part payment of a large sum of money owing Michael Carton by George Carton.

THE CITY OF TORONTO DEFEATED

Board Decides in Favor of Street Railway Company.

HAS VIOLATED AGREEMENT

Tribunal Declares That Traction Company Has a Right to Select Whatever Streets It Deems Most Necessary to Handling of Traffic—City Should Not Interfere in Matter, Says Board's Finding.

Toronto, Dec. 10.—"The board determine that the company have the right to select the aforementioned streets (for new routes), and so declare.

"We find that the city has denied the company's right and has prevented the company from using the streets selected for their new lines, and has violated and committed a breach of the agreement which they made with the company."

Such is the summing of an unexpectedly strong decision by which the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board confirm the Toronto Street Railway Co. in their contention that they can lay out such car routes as they may deem best for their own traffic. The city is "beaten to a frazzle" evidently, though no order is made as to costs.

A company advancing all the capital, making themselves responsible for the success of the enterprise, taking all the risk of failure and loss, would require to have the right to select the streets where men most do congregate, where passengers could most readily and easily present themselves for carriage, and where the traffic could be most remunerative.

The denial of this right to the company to thus manage their business would require to be stated in very clear and decisive language.

While the city may requisition the company to extend its tracks * * * the company cannot be compelled to build * * * and the city may grant the right to some other person. To force the company to abandon and to grant the right to build on the abandoned streets to some other person or company, is the only remedy which the city has. This, however, does not prevent the company from picking and choosing the streets that they consider will fit in with the rest of their system.

APPLES WERE ROTTEN.

Big Ontario Shipper Is Reported by English Commissioner.

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—Ontario apple shippers get a bad jolt in a report received yesterday by the Trade and Commerce Department from the acting trade commissioner in Birmingham, in which, after dealing out high praise to British Columbia apples, he states that he came next to a shipment of 500 barrels of apples from a prominent Ontario shipper, all of which were rotten or half decayed.

The peculiar thing is that in each case the barrels were marked "Not to be shipped" or "Falsely marked." It seems that the consigners collected in advance and that the apples were thus sent forward.

Enquiry at the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture revealed the fact that while the inspectors at Montreal have power to mark barrels "falsely marked" they have no right to add "not to be shipped" and an investigation will be made as to who placed this mark upon the barrels or how it happened that when so marked they were allowed to be sent to England.

Hurrying the Irish Land Bill.

London, Dec. 10.—The House of Commons on Tuesday night passed the second reading of the Irish Land Bill.

During the course of the debate Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, announced that it was the Government's plan to push forward the bill as rapidly as possible at the next session.

Grain on the Lakes.

Port Arthur, Dec. 10.—The insurance season for vessels expired at midnight Thursday night, but, though all rushes to get their lines cast off before that time, several have had to remain in port, and there will be departures for four or five days yet. Boats that got away during the night and morning carried 1,837,112 bushels.

Mother Gave Her Child Away.

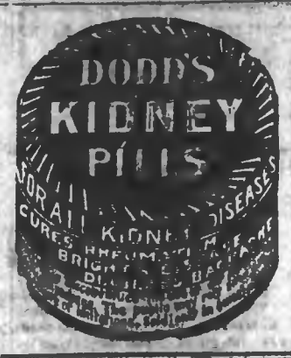
Had Given up all Hope of Living. Heart Trouble was Cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. Andrew Savoy, Gratten's, N.B., writes:—"In the year 1905 I was taken sick and did not think I could live any length of time. My trouble was with my heart and people told me that nothing could be done for a case like mine. I consulted the very best doctors but they could do me no good. For seven weeks I could hardly even the floor. I had no pain, but was so weak no body in the world can believe how I felt. I had given up all hopes of living and had given my little girl to my sister-in-law.

"One day a friend came to see me, and calling me by name, said, 'Lizzie, if I were you I would try a dose of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they are good for heart trouble.' My husband got me a box, but for two days I was not feeling any better, but on the fourth day my husband said, 'I believe those pills are doing you good.' I was able to say, 'Yes, I feel a good deal better this morning.' He said, 'Well, I will get you another box right away.' I took two boxes and three doses out of the third one, and I was perfectly well and have not been sick since then.

"I will never be without them in my home for God knows if it had not been for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I would not have been alive now."

Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.



BARTENDER ACQUITTED.

Charge of Perjury Against Robert Breckels Fails.

Owen Sound, Dec. 10.—Great interest was manifested in the trial here yesterday of Robert Breckels, a former bartender in the Coulson House, accused of perjury.

It was alleged that accused on the occasion of his trial on the 19th of August last, when he was charged with having sold whisky, gave false testimony on oath knowing it to be untrue. On that occasion he denied having on the 4th or 5th of August supplied License Detectives Adamson, Allan and Gifford with whisky, and also denied ever having carried a bottle in his coat pocket while on duty behind the Coulson House bar.

In the morning these three detectives again gave evidence, when they averred that the accused had supplied them with liquor from a bottle which he had concealed in his coat. H. G. Tucker, counsel for the accused, examined the detectives as to their past careers, and asked Gifford if it were not the case that he had been a horse thief while in Montana, and had had to leave that place in a hurry, as he stood in danger of being strung up. Gifford denied the allegation.

Accused gave evidence in his own behalf and repeated his former testimony.

In his address to the jury Mr. Tucker stigmatized the spotters as snakes and said that they had gone about with lies in their mouths. The judge summed up slightly in favor of the accused.

The jury were absent for over two hours, and returned with a verdict of not guilty.

Sensational evidence is expected today during the testimony of George Pumple, the C.P.R. driver, accused by Detective Stewart of having bribed Pownall and himself to leave the town.

REED GIVES UP.

Brakeman to Blame For Sandbank Disaster Is Ready For His Trial.

Toronto, Dec. 10.—Brakeman W. P. Reed, who opened the switch which caused the Sandbank collision, with the loss of several lives, is back in Toronto. Yesterday he communicated with his lawyer, J. G. O'Donoghue, that he was prepared to voluntarily give himself up. Mr. O'Donoghue immediately notified Crown Attorney Kew at Cobourg that he would produce Reed whenever his presence is required.

Reed's explanation is that he was so appalled at the loss of life his mistake had caused that he fled. Afterwards he realized that it was his duty to return and face the consequences. His plea is that he thought the main line was clear when he turned on the switch, as his train was to be sidetracked for the purpose of letting the one following it pass. He had no knowledge that another train was due from the opposite direction and returned to the forward caboose shortly before the on-coming train engine telescoped that to which he belonged.

Said Jury Could Walk.

Hamilton, Dec. 10.—Yesterday afternoon a deputation of grand jurors waited upon the statesmen of the Wentworth County Council and requested that the council should authorize the hiring of cabs to take the grand jurors to the asylum. The council turned down the request, though some of the councillors were willing to go to the extent of paying the jurors' car fare to the top of the mountain. The councillors refused to sanction the expense because they think the asylum is inspected by grand jurors more frequent than necessary.

Son Finds Mother Dead.

Sarnia, Dec. 10.—Two highly respected citizens, Mr. and Mrs. John Paul, of this place, were found dead in bed yesterday morning, being asphyxiated by gas. The discovery was made by their son, W. B. Paul, who was passing the house on his way to work and seeing no move about the place, went in to investigate. Going into the bedroom he found his parents both lifeless. Four sons and two daughters survive.

Burned to Death.

Keewatin, Ont., Dec. 10.—Fire which started yesterday morning in Allan Bros.' bakeshop about seven o'clock caused the death of Andrew Allan, aged 18, whose body was charred beyond recognition, and had spread to the adjoining buildings.

Robert Allan, brother of the dead man, was drowned just six months ago and of three brothers who opened the shop three months ago, only John is left.

War With Germany Sure.

Mexico, Dec. 10.—The following statement is made by Frederick F. C. Rhodes, cousin of Cecil Rhodes, who is in this city in the interest of the large mine owners:

"While in England I talked to some of the best versed men in public, navy and military affairs, and I found the opinion unanimous that war with Germany was inevitable."

Don't Want Winter Carnival.

Montreal, Dec. 10.—The Montreal Board of Trade, at a meeting yesterday, adopted a resolution against the holding of a winter carnival, on the ground that such a carnival would be a bad advertisement for Canada. The promoters of the carnival have already raised $16,000, and are going ahead with the undertaking.

SHARP, SECOND MESSIAH, AT LARGE

LIEUTENANT WAS WOUNDED

Sharp Escaped After Fight and Decided to Give Up But Changed His Mind—Shaved His Beard Off—Surviving Women Will Be Put on Trial on Charges of Murder—Pratt Expected to Live.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 10.—Efforts of the police yesterday to find James Sharp, hailed by his ten fanatical followers as a second Messiah, failed to reveal his movements after Tuesday's bloody fight with the police. It was thought at first that the man taken to the hospital mortally wounded was Sharp, but it was learned afterwards that this was Louis Pratt, one of the fanatic's followers, and father of the girl who was killed. Pratt is lying in the hospital at present with his right leg amputated at the knee and a bullet in his brain. He persists that he is divinely guided, and is very bitter in his denunciation of the police. He is not going to die, he says, but will live to kill more policemen.

Policeman Michael Mullane, the most seriously hurt of the officers, rallied slightly yesterday and physicians say he has an even chance for recovery. Sergt. Patrick Clark and A. J. Selzea, a bystander who was shot through the lungs, are both slightly improved.

It is known that Sharp has had his hair trimmed and his long beard shaved off, but the police have no clue as to his whereabouts.

Shortly after the shooting Tuesday he walked into a saloon and laid down his revolver with the remark, "I am satisfied, I give up." There were no policemen present, and as nobody present seemed anxious to take him into custody Sharp waited a moment, then picked up the weapon, reloaded it, and walked out.

Mrs. Pratt and her four surviving children are detained at police headquarters. Mrs. Sharp is in jail. None of them exhibit any emotion when speaking of the death of Lulu Pratt, but calmly assert it was God's will. The police say the two women and the two eldest girls, Mary and Lena, will be charged with murder. Five residents of a mission in the north end frequented by Sharp's followers are being held for examination.

THAT QUEEN'S ROW.

Students Are Sorry and Will Pay For Damage Done.

Kingston, Dec. 10.—A fairly attended mass meeting of the students of Queen's University was held to consider what action should be taken in view of the events of Saturday night.

A resolution was passed expressing complete disapproval of the disorderly conduct and sincere regret for the part in it for which the students were responsible. The students' committee ask space for the following statement:

"Much indignation was expressed at the exaggerated reports of the affair appearing in the outside press. Not more than fifty students were directly concerned. No stones were used, nor were revolvers displayed by either police or students. The conflict was of short duration; personal injuries received were slight and the damage to property was inconsiderable. For this damage the students are making full restitution. Kingston citizens offered bail for the students arrested. The magistrate was willing to accept, but was overruled by Mayor Ross and the students were forced to remain in the cells till Sunday morning.

"It is not thought that this occurrence will in any way permanently interfere with the good feeling which has always existed between Kingston citizens and students."

Croziers Get Less.

Milton, Dec. 10.—Thomas W. Crozier of Toronto pleaded guilty yesterday on the charge of counterfeiting paper money, before Justice Teetzel, and was sentenced to seven years in Kingston penitentiary.

His son, Milton, also pleaded guilty and received a sentence of one year in the Central Prison.

Crozier, Sr.'s sentence is thus two years less than it was on the first conviction, which was quashed, and the son's term is reduced by 364 days.

PETERBOROUGH BOWLERS ARE INVITED TO MADISON SQUARE

An idea of the wonderful popularity of ten pins in the United States may be gleaned from the fact that fifty thousand dollars in prizes will be distributed at the next tournament of the National Bowling Association to be held at Madison Square Gardens, New York, starting on May 24th next. A letter was received by J. B. Hay, of the Peterborough Bowling Club, this morning, to this effect from Mr. C. Wyman, secretary of the tournament. Mr. Wyman, in asking for Peterborough entries, says that twenty-four alleys will be laid in the Garden of the same class as those in use at the P.B.C. The tournament will last for three weeks, and will be "one of the most stupendous and inspiring sporting events ever held."

The prize fund of fifty thousand dollars will be distributed among the winners in the five-men, two-men and individual events, and the winning five-man team is guaranteed at least one thousand dollars. The conditions will be so broad that every competitor will have a chance.

"Bowling," says Mr. Wyman, in conclusion, "is now the national winter pastime of the American people, and is second only in importance to our great American game of baseball. The growth and development of the ancient and historical game of bowls in the last ten years to its present standing and importance as a national game with world-wide leanings is simply marvelous; and merit alone is the foundation of its progress. Its popularity is due to the physical, mental and recreative benefits which it confers upon devotees of the sport rather than to any adventitious booming the game has had."

Several teams from Toronto, Hamilton, London, Vancouver, Winnipeg and other Canadian points have already signified their intention of attending and there will also be a team from far off Alaska.

At a meeting of the curlers held last night the rinks were selected for the coming season. There are 33 rinks and 20 unattached players in the club this year and there will likely be several more members added. EXCITING GAME IN BOWLING LEAGUE; HAMS AND LOCKWORKS TEAM WERE TIED

There was a most unusual occurrence in the ten pin league series at the P.B.C. last night, when Bruce Hutchison's team and Lock Works ended up a hard-fought game in the opening event of the evening by tying with a score of 373. And it might be said right here that the Lock Works were very fortunate to break even, the proverbial bowlers luck being all against Hutchison. The finish was most exciting, the deadlock occurring when Hay, the last man to bowl got nine on his last spare though he put down what looked like a perfect strike ball. Previous to this the same player dumped a ball into the gutter on a spare in his eighth frame and wound up with the small total of 142.

In the second game the Hams bowled better together, while the Lock Works showed very little improvement, Hutchison emerging from the melee with a nice comfortable margin to his credit.

In the last game the order of things was completely reversed, the Lock Works in this contest giving the best exhibition of the evening. LaPlante had the high score after getting away to a splendid start. Lacheur, however, gave him a strong run for it at the close finishing up with five straight strikes, though even this sensational performance left him still a few pins behind his team-mate at the finish.

In the play off of the tie game one frame each was rolled and the Lock Works captured the odd contest.

To-night Martin and the strengthened Grays will meet. The Grays will be represented by McFadden, Perry and Sullivan, and they should give the Indians something to worry about.

Lock Works

RUGBY

Indoor Rugby is the latest game to be invented. Already it has been introduced into the Central Y.M.C.A.

Two teams have been formed, one composed wholly of wrestlers, and the other from the Rugby Club. These teams will line up next Saturday night on the gym. floor for their first game.

Ten men form a team, and the line up consists of seven wings, one quarter and two halves. The ball will be regulation size, but it will be stuffed, not blown, so that it can't be kicked far. Points will be scored on tries, kicks to the dead line, and touch in goal, rouges and safeties. The distances to be gained (three downs has been cut down to 8 yards instead of ten. The boys will wear their regular Rugby togs.—Toronto News.

G. A. C. ELECT THEIR OFFICERS FOR THE SEASON

The annual meeting of the G.A.C. was held in their club rooms, George street, on Tuesday night, when there was an enthusiastic gathering of the members. The following officers were elected for the season:

Hon. Pres.—R A Morrow.
President—Harry Latimer.
Vice-Pres.—T Reilly.
Sec-Treas.—H L Beale.
Manager—H L Staunton.
Captain—Fred Haskill.
Trainer—Corney Burns.
Committee—Jack Seymour, S Wade and C Stewart.

The club intends to have a hockey team this season, and will, if possible, have a team in the Mercantile League. It is also the intention of the members to go in for wrestling and boxing during the winter with a view to entering representatives in the spring tournament in Toronto. Some good material is available and there seems no reason why the G. A. C. should not have a most successful season. The club has new rooms comfortably fitted out and nicely decorated. They are situated over the Peterborough Light and Power Company's office and are admirably suited for the purposes required.

BIG HOCKEY MEETING IS TO BE HELD TO-MORROW

The attention of all those interested in hockey is called to the big meeting which will be held to-morrow night for the purpose of organizing the O.H.A. teams for the season. A cordial invitation is extended to all hockey enthusiasts to be present to do what they can to boom the movement. The meeting will be held in the Oriental Hotel at eight o'clock sharp and a big crowd of fans is expected. It is hoped that the people of this city will appreciate the movement by turning out in large numbers to the organization meeting. An invitation has been sent to the officers of the Chieftain Hockey Club to be present and to discuss the new scheme.

FRED DOHERTY SIGNS WITH THE GUELPH PRO TEAM

Fred Doherty, the star rover of last year's Norwood City League team, has signed with Guelph, according to the following despatch:—

Guelph, Dec. 9 (Special). — Manager Cockman of the local pro. hockey team has signed two new men in Ed. Powers of Elora and Fred Doherty of Norwood. Powers is a lacrosse and hockey player, lately back from Calgary, where he was on the hockey line-up last winter, and several managers were after him for their defence. Doherty is reported as a new pro. man and of the same class as Mercer.

NED FITZPATRICK LEFT THIS MORNING FOR CINCINNATI

Mr. W. ("Ned") Fitzpatrick left this morning for Cincinnati where he has secured a position and by his going the city loses a clever athlete and a good fellow. Since his return to Peterborough from Spencerport, N.Y., in August last, he has been prominently in the athletic lime light, and he will be much missed. During the Rugby season he did sterling work on the wing line of the T.A.S. Athletic Club's senior O.R.F.U. team and was of much assistance to that organization. He has been one of the mainstays of the Brownie Basketball team of the local Y.M.C.A., and his aggressive work at centre did much to win the Creasman Trophy for that team. His going will leave a vacancy on the Brownie's line up that will be hard to fill. In addition Fits. was a clever wrestler and the lovers of the mat game are not likely to soon forget his strenuous battle with Harry Burridge in the roller rink recently.

SLATS REILLY TO PLAY SEMI-PRO HOCKEY IN COBALT

Another Lindsay hockey player intends doffing his amateur status and joining pro ranks.

George (Slats) Reilly leaves Friday for Cobalt to play with the semi-professional team of that town.

Reilly has played in Lindsay for years and figures prominently in many hard games. He is a defence man but has played a wing too.

Yesterday Slats received a letter from Tom Hare, of Cobalt, offering him a good thing to trandle a puck in the Silver City this winter. Reilly says he is going to Cobalt Friday.—Lindsay Warder.

A MERCANTILE LEAGUE TO BE ORGANIZED TO-NIGHT

A meeting to organize a Mercantile Hockey League in the city will be held this evening at 7.30 o'clock in the G.T.R. freight office, Charlotte street. It is now almost certain that this league will be formed as several clubs are anxious to participate. Among them are the G.T.R., Quakers, Auburns, C.G.E., Ackermans, and Creasmans. It, therefore, there are a sufficient number of teams represented to-night, officers to control the league will be elected.

RAOUL DEROUEN HAS NEW OPPONENT TO MEET

Raoul de Rouen, the big French wrestler, will have the best Graeco-Roman wrestler in the Western States pitted against him at Sohmer Park next Friday night, when he meets Mort Henderson, the best two falls out of three.

Henderson is a big, husky fellow, who has been making his way to the top at the Graeco-Roman style, and as he is one of the hardest propositions de Rouen can take, the latter will have to show better form than in his last two matches if he wants to pull out ahead of the Westerner. Henderson would like a victory over the Frenchman as this would enhance his value as a wrestling attraction throughout the continent, and he will do everything possible to win out.

De Rouen, on the other hand, is particularly anxious to make a good showing against a man equally proficient in the game with himself, and as he is gradually getting in to better condition, the match on Friday night should be a big improvement over his previous efforts.

Montreal Star.

CURLING.

A Montreal paper makes the sensational announcement that the Canadian curlers to tour Scotland will wear 'Tam O' Shanters and Norfolk jackets but doesn't say a word about trou——Well, well, perhaps the curlers are going to wear kilts—so what does it matter anyway?

It is quite probable that a number of changes will be made in the above when the rinks and skips are revised.

A big bonspiel commencing January 18th was the scheme decided upon by the members of the Peterborough Curling Club at the meeting of the skips held last night. It will be in the nature of a house-warming for the new rink and will tend to widely advertise the new structure, as invitations will be sent to many outside curlers. It is prophesied that the event will be the biggest of its kind ever held in this city, and the local knights of the broom will spare no effort in endeavouring to make the affair a success.

When the bonspiel was first proposed it was thought by some of the curlers that the expense would be too great in view of the cost of building the new rink. However, a canvass of the members showed that the majority were in favour of the proposition and the skips last night were decidedly enthusiastic. They will set at work at once to prepare for the event which they desire to make a brilliant success. There is no doubt that a large number of outside curlers will avail themselves of the invitation as Peterborough curlers have always had the name of being capital hosts.

HOCKEY

The Toronto Globe is a little out in its dope in the following—

"Miller, of Peterborough, is announced as on the Brantford line-up, but he is now in Edmonton, and will play on the Edmonton Stanley Cup team, which will probably disband as soon as the cup games are played, December 28 and 29."

• • • •

It is said that Arthur Bently, of Cobourg, has received several offers to play with professional clubs. Jimmy Cockman, of Guelph, is very anxious to secure his services, but Bently prefers to play with the amateurs.

Obstinate coughs yield to its grateful soothing action, and in the racking, persistent cough, often present in Consumptive cases, it gives prompt and sure relief. In Asthma and Bronchitis it is a successful remedy, rendering breathing easy and natural, enabling the sufferer to enjoy refreshing sleep and often affecting a permanent cure.
Mrs. Henry Smallpiece, Brudenell, Ont., writes:—"I was always subject to a cough and could get nothing to relieve me until I saw an advertisement of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thought I would try a bottle, and when I had taken a few doses I found I was getting relief, and when I had finished it I was cured. I procured a bottle for my baby, who had a cough, and a few doses cured him. I would advise anyone having a cough, to give Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a trial and I am sure they will never be without it."

BRAKEMAN REED GIVES HIMSELF UP

Ready to Face Trial for His Carelessness in Causing Wreck.

Brakeman W. P. Reed, who opened the switch which caused the Sandbank collision, with the loss of several lives, is back in Toronto. Yesterday he communicated with his lawyer there, J. G. O'Donoghue, that he was prepared to voluntarily give himself up. Mr. O'Donoghue immediately notified Crown Attorney Kerr at Cobourg that he would produce Reed whenever his presence is required.

Reed's explanation is that he was so appalled at the loss of life his mistake had caused that he fled. Afterwards he realized that it was his duty to return and face the consequences. His plea is that he thought the main line was clear when turned on the switch, as his train was to be sidetracked for the purpose of letting the one following it pass. He had no knowledge that another train was due from the opposite direction and returned to the forward caboose shortly before the on-coming train engine telescoped that to which he belonged.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS IN SMITH

Mr. William Graham Has Spent a Life-Time on the Farm—Reminiscences of Former Days.

ONE OF THE PIONEERS

One of the oldest residents of the township of Smith, is Mr. William Graham, who is known throughout the entire county as one of its pioneers. He was brought to this country by his parents when only 15 months old. He is now in his 78th year, and the three-quarters of a century which he has spent within the confines of his township have worn well on him, for he is enjoying good health, is hale and hearty and the land in which he placed his dependence to provide him with the necessaries of life did not disappoint him.

To an Examiner reporter he said that his parents had made a clearance when they first settled here and each year it was gradually broadened. Logging "bees" were held when all the neighbours would gather to assist one another. By this co-operation the township gradually was brought under cultivation. Mr Graham states that he well remembers when the farmers used to shoulder a sack of grain and walk to Port Hope to have it ground, and the tramp to Peterborough for necessities was quite commonplace. Among other interesting recollections of those early times, he stated that when a boy he saw the soldiers entrained in Peterborough at the time of the Mackenzie rebellion when the whole country side was aroused by anticipated strife.

IT MIGHT SURPRISE YOU to know how every year many a thoughtful son or daughter brings father or mother to us that we may provide a beautiful pair of Glasses as a Christmas Gift.

YEARS OF PLEASURE—That lady now enjoys clear, comfortable vision, for both distance and reading, and fully appreciates the beauty and value of Glasses and her son's thoughtfulness to provide so suitable and useful a Christmas present.

TALK WITH US—If you like to entrust the matter to us we will do our best to suit your friends far and near, and make your gift a real lasting pleasure.

SWAYNE CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

Thinks He Can Take Hindus to British Honduras.

HINDUS TO TRY FARMING

Tija Singh, Leader of Those Opposed to Deportation Has Purchased Farm Near Vancouver and Will Plant Market Garden Colony—Governor Swayne, However is Assured of Success.

Winnipeg, Dec. 11.—Brigadier-General Swayne, Governor of British Honduras, is en route to British Columbia to negotiate with the Hindus for their removal to Honduras. He is delighted with the prospect of getting Sikhs for his colony, which is in great need of labor; indeed, so great has the problem become that Gen. Swayne has just been in England discussing it with the Government. Removal of the Sikhs was one of the remedies suggested, and he is now on his way west to lay the project before them. His plans were outlined yesterday when he said:

"All matters in connection with the transportation of the Sikhs to British Honduras have been settled, and it is now only a question whether they will accept the terms which are offered to them. I may say that it will be entirely a voluntary matter with the Sikhs; it is between them and myself. If they will come to us in Honduras I will guarantee them oversight and care. I will establish them in villages with their headmen over them, as they were at home in India. All the customs of their country can be preserved to them. They will be placed on the best of land, the returns from which amount to $20 per acre. Owing to my 16 years' experience in India, I know the Sighs very well and sympathise with them. Many of them served under me for years in India."

Hindus as Gardeners.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 11.—Teja Singh, who is leading the Hindus against the Federal Government's plan of sending them to Honduras, has completed a deal for the purchase of 150 acres of land at North Vancouver, where he will instal a large number of Hindus as market gardeners.

Ottawa Salary Increases.

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—The present indications are that it will be some time before the civil service is classified under the provisions of the act passed at the last session of Parliament.

It is said that the treasury board, which is a sub-committee of the Cabinet council, has abandoned its efforts to bring about some measure of uniformity in the classifications of the various Departments as made by the various deputies, and has referred the whole matter back to the council. The upshot will probably be that the Civil Service Commission will probably be asked to undertake the task.

It is said that it would take the commissioners nearly a year to do the work and in the meantime the matter of salary will probably have to stand in abeyance.

Jury Frees Davies.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 11.—The jury in the case of Charles E. Davis, charged with the murder of Dr. Frederick T. Rustin, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Davis is the brother of the vice-president and uncle of the president, cashier and other officials of the First National Bank, and is related to men prominent in financial affairs in New York City.

It was alleged that he had been leading a double life, and that Davis, a drug fiend, had been induced by the physician to kill him, so that his life insurance would not be voided. A suicide compact with a notorious woman was claimed.

After Piano Factory.

Kingston, Dec. 11.—Deseronto is making a bid for the Wormwith Piano Works, and has offered a building.

A HELPFUL TALK TO SHEEP MEN

AWARDS IN OAT CONTEST

Five Prize-Winners Chosen With Difficulty Out of 76 Entries — Toronto Speakers Declare That Tax on Woollens Would Enable Canadian Mills to Use Entire Output — Farmers Get More.

Guelph, Dec. 11.—All day yesterday the interest in the winter fair was maintained and although the live stock was finished, the seed exhibit, the lectures on sheep, swine and cattle were of a high order, productive of much practical benefit.

The dressed carcasses were on exhibition and Mr. Featherston of Yorkshire fame from Streetsville won out in the bacon hog class.

Profs. Klinck and J. Buchanan completed their awards in the grain crop competition and in the 76 entires in white oats, the five prizes were awarded after much difficulty in deciding the valuable qualities of each. The results are valuable. The following awards were made:

First, Thomas McMurchy of Loree, Collingwood, on "New Sensation"; 2, James McLean of Richmond Hill, on "Irish White"; 3, John McLeod of Lucknow, on "White Danish"; 4, J. Cockburn of Aberfoyle, on "Lincoln"; 5, James Baird of Lucknow, on "Sensation."

Thus it will be seen that the banner oat was not mentioned here.

Cattle men were instructed in the art of diagnosing and remedying the diseases of cattle by Dr. H. G. Reed and Messrs. Robt. Miller and W. F. Stephen. The principal diseases were milk fever, contagious abortion and indigestion.

But it remained for the interjection of the woollen manufacturers and dealers into the sheep discussion to stir up a warm time. T. D. Wardlaw of Toronto in his paper touched on the prices and qualities of Canadian wools. Soon the vexed question of woollen tariffs and closed woollen mills stirred the meeting into a turmoil.

Discussion became general and Messrs. E. B. Biggar and H. V. Andrews of Toronto claimed that the imposition of a tax on woollen goods would enable Canadian mills to employ all the Canadian output. Farmers, they contend, would receive 5 to 10 cents a pound more for their wool. Col. McCrae, John Campbell and R. E. Gunn took part in the discussion.

Prof. Day in an excellent address on swine counseled the farmers to go on raising the bacon hog, and not quit because the packers are proving hard at times. He resented strongly the imputation that he was purchaseable by certain interests to act thus on his advice. His one aim was to give a true service to the people of Ontario and he would not curry favor by knocking the packer.

POULTRY IS EXEMPT.

Government Releases Christmas Trade From Meat Inspection Act.

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—The provisions of the Dominion Meat Inspection Act in so far as they apply to the shipments of poultry during the Christmas season, have been withdrawn by the Department of Agriculture.

The law provides for inspection of shipments from one province to another. Many merchants, not thinking the law applied to poultry, in anticipation of Christmas trade had laid in large stocks of poultry, but when they commenced to ship they found that the railways refused to carry their goods on account of the law. Shipments of dressed poultry are so large and so numerous that it was found impossible to apply the law to them. The removal of the rule will greatly facilitate Christmas poultry trade.

Engine a Menace.

Fort William, Dec. 11.—The jury empanelled to enquire into the death of E. R. Noble, engineer, who with his fireman, R. Horsley, was killed in the C.P.R. yards here, returned a verdict declaring: "We are of opinion that engine No. 2166, of which the deceased was in charge, was in a defective condition and unfit for service."

A number of reports were put in, one signed by the dead engineer in which he said:

"Dec. 6.—See report of Dec. 5, 'engine is menace to life and property in present condition.'"

Freight Rates Go Up.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Transcontinental freight tariffs, beginning Jan. 1 next, will be advanced on all eastbound traffic, both by rail and water. The class rates on westbound traffic will remain as they are now. The commodity rate on westbound traffic from Atlantic seaboard points to Pacific coast terminals will be increased approximately ten per cent.

This announcement was made yesterday by the interstate commerce commission.

Must Disinfect Boots.

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—To guard against the introduction of foot and mouth disease into Canada the Government officials at Niagara Falls have made regulations requiring foot passengers crossing the international bridges to have their boots disinfected before entering Canada.

It developed that the disease was carried to a herd of cattle on Grand Island by sectionmen, who had been in the Buffalo stock yard.

GERMANY SAID TO BE SUFFERING

Tariff War With Canada is Damaging Its Trade.

JOURNAL FAVORS TREATY

Hersen Courier Declares That Lack of Commercial Agreement is Not Doing Either Country Any Good and Urges Immediate Negotiations Toward Securing a Trade Treaty With Dominion.

Berlin, Dec. 11.—The Horsen Courier, the leading Stock Exchange organ, considers it the duty of the German press to draw the attention of the public from time to time to the fact that a tariff war between Germany and Canada is still proceeding and that the war, far from benefiting either party, is doing serious damage to German trade.

It welcomes the recent information of the German Economic Association for the furtherance of commercial relations between the countries as an excellent basis for a renewal of efforts to secure a satisfactory commercial treaty.

This association, it continues, could not have been established at a more favorable moment, for the elections have just given the Liberals a considerable Parliamentary majority, which will keep Laurier's Government firmly in the saddle for the next five years.

If efforts to renew the negotiations for the conclusion of a commercial treaty are not pushed forward energetically now all hope may be buried.

The Courier points out the value of Germany's exports to Canada, which from 35,800,000 marks in 1903 to 21,800,000 marks in 1905, and increased in the following years to 24,800,000 marks and 29,600,000 marks respectively. The value of Germany's exports from Canada has averaged during the five years ending 1907, a little more than $2,250,000. Were German goods not taxed as heavily as English goods and about a third higher than produce countries, Germany would now occupy a very different position in the Canadian market. In consequence of the rapid development of the country, Canada, The Courier adds, required an enormous amount of industrial products which cannot be supplied at home. As matters stand Germany can hope to participate to only a very modest extent in supplying these growing needs. "It is a matter of urgent necessity that every obstacle in the way of a conclusion of the German-Canadian commercial treaty should be overcome as soon as possible."

TWO MORE ARE DEAD.

Deaths In Kansas City Shooting Now Number Four.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 11.—Louis Pratt, one of the leaders of the band of fanatics that fought a bloody battle in front of the city hall here on Tuesday last with a squad of policemen, died at the hospital yesterday of his wounds. Almost at the same time Policeman Michael Mallane, who was shot during the riot, died, making the total number of deaths four.

James Sharp, the leader of the onslaught against the police has not been captured, but the police declare they will have him under arrest today.

Mrs. Pratt, who with her children is being held at police headquarters, now states she knows Sharp was a fake prophet, and wishes she had remained in "the good old Baptist Church."

Holy Rollers Ordered Out.

Sandusky, Ohio, Dec. 11.—The Holy Roller organization at Martin Heights, about 200 strong, was ordered to disband by irate townspeople yesterday, and the organizers, Jacob Hoppinger and J. C. Deeken of Buffalo, N.Y., were served with notice to leave the community. This action was prompted, it is said, by fear of trouble, due to the Kansas City affair. The Holy Rollers threaten resistance.

FOUND IN THE WOODS.

By GRANT PACKARD.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Overnight the street corner had blossomed out with unpainted pine chestnut stands, topped by the roaster, which sent out the fragrance of the mealy nuts.

A crisp tang in the air sent the endless procession of workers along at a smarter pace. Only an occasional derelict sauntered along at a laggard's gait. Overhead a thin haze veiled the sky, changing the blue of the cloudless firmament to a softer tint, and through this a yellow sun burned dully.

Paul Westford as he hurried toward the office sniffed the odor of the roasting chestnuts and smiled reminiscently. Of course chestnuts roasted in a pan over a charcoal fire could not be as good as when they were gathered in the wood and roasted in a fire shovel.

It took two to roast chestnuts properly, two in a cozy parlor, with an open fire for the only illustration.

He knew all about roasting chestnuts. It was while they were roasting chestnuts that Carol Ryder had promised to be his wife. Ever since that night the perfume of the chestnut stands had reminded him of the girl he had loved and lost.

The course of true love had run with its customry irregularity, so it befell that during one of their misunderstandings John Ryder, Carol's father, had fallen upon evil times. His investments were threatened for lack of ready money. Another man had come to Ryder's aid and had claimed Carol as his reward.

The girl had married him in the mistaken belief that she owed it to her father to obey his wishes, and when Paul sought reconciliation he had found that it was too late.

He had come to the city that he might not be reminded daily of his loss and had prospered greatly. He had found engrossment if not forgetfulness in business.

Yet always the smell of roasting chestnuts brought back to him that night in the Ryder parlor, and he could feel again that thrill of joy when he heard the whispered "Yes."

Today it came back to him more strongly than ever, and on the pages of the letters he opened he could see the picture of the woods about Carrisville, rioting with color under the autumn sun.

He had never gone back to the town since his first departure. He had never wanted to see the place. But today he heard the country call him, and the call was not to be denied. He arranged with his chief clerk to look after affairs for a few days, and that night he left on the sleeper for Carrisville.

He found the town was sadly changed. Paul arrived in the early hours, when few were stirring, and as a sleepy hackman drove a sleepier horse through the silent street Paul felt a lump rise in his throat as when one greets an old friend and finds him that friend no longer, but even more foreign than an actual stranger.

The old brick schoolhouse had grown into a stone structure several stories in height. There was a new Methodist church, and many of the old houses had been replaced by more imposing structures, while in the business section the store fronts had been altered to present a metropolitan aspect.

It was not until after lunch and Paul had started out into the country that he began to feel at home. He had looked up none of his old friends, fearing to find them as sadly changed as the village itself.

There was a trolley now to take him to the outskirts of the town, but he dropped off when the canal bridge came in sight and the trolley turned on the road to the river. The bridge was not changed.

It was the same low, white structure from which he had dropped many a time to the deck of some passing canalboat to ride down to the lock and beg a ride back.

Beyond the bridge, too, the road looked the same. The trend of progress had been along the line of the trolley, and on this side of the canal the farmhouses were unchanged.

They had not even mended the break in the fence where he formerly slipped through for the short cut to the marsh. Here the largest frogs were always to be caught, and Paul was tempted to push through just to see if he still was slender enough.

It was a sharp climb up the hill, and Paul was glad to pause and rest for a moment when he gained the crest. Below, the canal wound its way between grassy banks, the towpath, dotted with toiling mules, showing white against the green.

Farther yet the river flowed placidly on to the churning foam of the rapids below, and between lay the level acres now yellow with stubble. In the valley, the autumn tints were not yet pronounced, but at his back, on the heights, the woods were glorious with red and gold.

Paul started out at a brisk pace for the chestnut grove where the nuts were always biggest and best. On the Saturday holiday the woods would be dotted with the nutpickers, but today he had the place to himself. He was on familiar ground now, and he headed straight for the grove.

There were few nuts on the ground, but Paul was not content with these, and, slipping off his coat and vest, he swung up into the biggest tree to shake some down.

He felt an odd sense of elation as he found that he could climb as well as ever, in spite of city life and elevators, and he determined to climb to the very top of the tree. It was from this same tree that he had had many a fall in his knickerbocker days, and he wanted to show his mastery of his old enemy.

The pride that goeth before a fall was his, and the inevitable tumble came. He was nearly back to the bottom limb when, with an ominous crackle, one of the yellow branches by which he was steadying himself gave way, he lost his balance and fell heavily to the ground.

For a moment he lay, half stunned, then a burning pain in his ankle roused him. Dragging himself to a sitting posture, he cut the laces of the boot and with his handkerchief bound the sprained ankle as tightly as he could. Then, by slow degrees, he made his way to his coat and slipped it on to prevent a cold.

Holding to the trunk of the tree he sought to rise, but he sank to the ground again and rested for a moment until the sharp pain ceased.

There was no stick in sight that could be used as a cane, and without such an aid there was small chance of being able to make his way to the edge of the wood, where he might be able to attract the attention of some pedestrian, on the road below. Yet he would crawl on his hands and knees rather than pass the night in the open.

He was still considering the situation when he spied a flash of brown and scarlet between the trees, and a girl came slowly toward him. As she came more clearly into view Paul gasped and rubbed his eyes.

Coming toward him was Carol Ryder, not as he expected to find her with the weight of added years, but as young and girlish as on that day when they two had gathered chestnuts and taken them home to roast.

It seemed that it must be some vision, for he had seen a late picture of Carol, and the girlishness had given place to a matronly dignity that sat oddly on her young face. This was the girl of the olden day—his Carol—and as she approached he struggled to rise and fell. She came hurrying toward him.

"You have hurt your ankle," she asked in a voice that surely must be Carol's. "I will try and find a stick for you to use as a cane. Don't try to rise until I bring you one."

She hurried away and presently reappeared with a stout branch.

"You will have to trim it down a little with your knife," she explained. "It was the best I could find. Is it Paul Westford?" she added as, for the first time, she studied his face.

"It's Paul Westford," he assented, "but you cannot be Carol?"

"I'm her sister Edith," she explained with a light laugh. "I was just at the awkward age when you left, and, anyhow, you never had eyes for any one but Carol."

"You look very like her," he said quietly as he rose by aid of the cane.

"So every one tells me," was the girl's careless comment. "You had better take my arm too. It will be safer. Do you think you can manage it?"

"Easily," he agreed as he accepted her suggestion and rested his free hand lightly upon her arm.

Slowly they made their way to the clearing, and not until they left the woods behind did Edith stop with a little cry of dismay.

"You never got the nuts," she cried, "and you came all the way from town to get them!"

"I came in search of old memories," said Paul softly as he looked down into the eager face upturned to his. "I thought they were dead memories, and I find that they still live."

The color flooded the girl's face as she turned it aside, but not till eyes had spoken to eyes, and Paul knew that he had found his mate.

ALEXANDRA AT HOME.

Simple Everyday Life of the Queen of England—A Great Letter Writer.

Few people can realize the comparative simplicity of the everyday life of Queen Alexandra, especially when in Scotland or at Sandringham. While in Norfolk the queen spends much of her time in the open air, walking, driving and doing short expeditions in her motor car.

After breakfast she and one or more of the several ladies who may be staying in the house make an expedition to kennels, stables and poultry yard to feed and interview the favorite dogs, horses and poultry of the establishment. In the afternoon a drive is arranged, and the evenings pass cheerily with music, cards and conversation. Dinner at Sandringham is always at 8:45.

It may be mentioned, says Town and Country, that the royal servants' liveries have a quaint old world appearance and are different in cut to those seen elsewhere. The coats are scarlet, made in the swallowtail style, with dark blue waistcoats edged by narrow gold braid. The men wear no collars, but have gold stocks, and white satin breeches and white silk stockings complete their stately costume. All the royal menservants are over six feet in height.

The queen is an indefatigable letter writer. She has been known to write as many as forty letters in one day with her own hand, and Miss Knollys, her lady in waiting, often would get through a hundred, all written under the queen's personal supervision. Queen Alexandra's note paper is cream colored and rather rough, with the royal crown and address in dark blue and of the simplest design.

During the shooting season the queen sends a great deal of game to her own particular friends, and the hampers are labeled "With the queen's compliments." At Christmas time she often presents her intimates with a signed photograph of herself in a silver frame. Queen Alexandra is a keen photographer and has transferred some of her photographs on to china.

CLEANING GRAY HAIR.

Much Care Necessary to Keep It in Good Condition.

The woman who has gray hair may be very proud of it because of its artistic beauty and the fact that it is the height of fashion.

Her problem in these days is how to keep it clean. For the first time she envies the woman who has the kind of hair that can be washed in anything and remain clear and keep its color.

Every speck of dust and soil streaks white hair with gray and yellow. The latter is a sign that the hair needs cleansing. It is not always easy to do this away from home, and it is not always successful when done by any one else. It is said by an expert that one of the best ways to clean it during the summer months, when perspiration takes away all the polish from it, is to wash it once every three or four weeks with the raw white of an egg mixed with castile soap.

The use of bicarbonate of soda is not good for any one with gray hair. Borax and ammonia should also be avoided.

One woman whose hair is inclined to be harsh under frequent washings always keeps it clean and sweet smelling by dusting it two or three times a week with finely powdered orris root and good talcum.

She rubs this in the hair, lets it remain for a day, then shakes it out and brushes it in small divisions so the bristles can draw out every particle of powder.

This takes the dust with it, whitens the hair and removes every trace of perspiration and oiliness.

Women and Morals.

We hope that women who claim their rights will use them soberly and well. It is of ill omen that most of the novels that throw morality to the winds and picture vicious living in seductive colors as an exercise of freedom and self realization are written by women. Women are the natural custodians of a high moral standard, and if they lower the standard they will fall themselves and drag men down with them.

No Private Interview.

"Could I have a few minutes' private conversation with you?" he asked as he stood at the open door of a lawyer's office.

"Can't you speak right out from where you are?" asked the lawyer in reply after looking the man over.

"I'd rather make a private matter of it."

"What is the nature of your business?"

"Confidential—strictly private and confidential, sir."

"Well, I have no time to grant you a private interview. If you have anything to say, you can let her go right here. Now, what is it?"

"I—I wanted the loan of a quarter, sir," stammered the man.

"Oh, you did! And you wanted a private interview to ask me that?"

"Yes, sir. I knew that would hurt both our feelings if I were refused in public—yours because you couldn't afford to loan me the money and mine because I couldn't get it. Can you grant my request, sir?"

"No, sir."

"And does it hurt you feelings?"

"Not a bit. You are mistaken on that point."

"And my feelings are the only ones hurt?"

"Yours alone."

"Just so," said the man as he bowed and backed out. "I beg your pardon. I was mistaken. You have the money and no feelings, and I have the feelings and no money. Impassable chasm; no use in trying to bridge. Good day!" —Washington Post.

CHAPPED HANDS

ARE your hands chapped, cracked, or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, and if it is the hands—wear a pair of old gloves overnight. Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will quickly heal.

READ Mrs. YELLEN'S EXPERIENCE!

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says:—"I consider it only my duty to tell you of the great benefit I have derived from Zam-Buk. My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I tried to do so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and the balm succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation and in a very short time healed my hands completely. I would strongly recommend it to anyone suffering from chapped or cracked hands. It is a wonderful healer and should be in every home."

ZAM-BUK ON CANADIAN FARMS.

Every farm should have its box of Zam-Buk always kept handy. Writing from Ochre River (Man.), Mr. C D McArthur states:—"I cannot praise Zam-Buk too highly. It is the only thing that has done my hands any good. They crack and bleed in the cold weather, but Zam Buk has soothed and healed them in fine style. I have a brother who suffers in the same way, and he also has found Zam Buk of great value as a balm for cuts, burns, and skin injuries of all kinds so frequently sustained in farming. Zam-Buk is in our estimation without any equal."

FATHER AND DAUGHTER BOTH CURED.

Miss Hattie Bertrand, Galesburg, Ont., writes:—"Zam-Buk is the best balm we have ever used. Every year I am troubled with chapped hands and arms, and nothing ever seemed able to heal them until I tried Zam-Buk. It is surprising how quickly this balm has healed up the sores and cracks! My father has used it for several ailments and injuries, and thinks there is nothing to equal it."

Zam-Buk is Soothing and Smoothing.

Making Sure of Having Good Eggs

Sir Gilbert Parker, the novelist M.P. in the British Commons, who has traveled extensively and acquired a great knowledge of the ways of the world, tells many good stories of his experiences. One relates to an English officer and himself. At a small post in Egypt they lived practically on eggs and tinned meat, and, as there was nothing else to be had, the eggs were a very important item of the dietary. Day after day the eggs, like those of the oft-quoted curate, were "very good in parts," but one morning they were frankly bad. The officer, who had the power of life and death in those parts, determined that the eggs should be fresh in future, so the egg merchant was brought before him. "Open your mouth," said the officer, and the wretched man, standing between two sentries, obeyed, trembling. Slowly and solemnly an evil-smelling egg was poured in. Again the command was given, and again a potential rooster was gulped down. A third followed the other two. After that, whoever else may have had bad eggs palmed off on them, Sir Gilbert Parker and the officer were well served.

One Thing Was Certain.

When Carol was nearly four years old her parents had occasion to move into another part of town, and one morning when a strange little girl wandered into the yard Carol, who is an only child, was delighted with the idea of a playfellow.

"Good morning, little girl," she called out brightly. "Did you tome to play wiv me?"

The little girl, who was older and larger than Carol, stared and was dumb.

"What's your name, little girl?" Carol proceeded.

No answer.

"Are you five?"

Still no answer.

"Are you six?"

The child fidgeted and grinned, but remained silent, with her finger in her mouth.

Carol surveyed her calmly a moment and then remarked emphatically, "Well, I don't know your name and I don't know how old you are, but I do know you aren't very smart for your age!"—Delineator.

His Lost Opportunities.

"Of all the masterpieces of art and nature there is just one that my infirmity prevents my studying critically," said the shortsighted man. "I never get a really satisfactory look at a pretty woman. When my attention is directed to an especially fine picture, a piece of statuary, a fine building or a beautiful landscape I am at liberty to come as near as I like, adjust the strongest magnifying glasses I can get hold of and study that object of art to my heart's content. But when somebody says, 'By George, there's a handsome woman,' I am denied that privilege. Conventionality, consideration for the lady's sensibilities, forbid that I should study her at close range through a magnifying glass. Consequently I am struggling through life with my curiosity in regard to feminine pulchritude only half satisfied."—New York Press.

Dodged.

"I got my wife through advertising."

"Then you'll admit that advertising pays?"

"I'll admit that it brings results," was the cautious reply.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NO WOMAN

CAN BE STRONG AND HEALTHY UNLESS THE KIDNEYS ARE WELL.

When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to filter out of the blood are left in the system. Then how important it must be to see to it that this system of sewerage be not clogged up. Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble know not the misery and suffering which those afflicted undergo.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles. They begin by healing the delicate membranes of the kidneys and thus make their action regular and natural.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and all the urinary passages.

Let Doan's Kidney Pills do for you what they have done for thousands of others, that is, cure you.

Mrs. M. Bryanton, Spring Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for two years. They were so bad at times I could not cross the floor for the pain. I tried a doctor but he did me no good at all. I sent to my nearest druggist and got four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am glad to say that after taking them I have had no more trouble for nearly three years now."

Price 50 cts. per box, or 3 for $1.25, all dealers or The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

STORIES OF THE BANK

STRANGE THINGS HAVE BEFALLEN TREASURE HOUSE.

Sudden Demand For Cash In Exchange For Notes Nearly Broke the Bank of England Once, But Clever Ruse Saved the Day—"Old Patch" the King of the Forgers Withstood Arrest For a Long Time.

There is no institution that has more romance attached to it than the Bank of England. It has been nearly ruined on several occasions, it has been beset with thieves — one gang robbed it of over $500,000 thirty years ago—forgery and frauds have been practiced upon it by the most accomplished criminals in history, and yet "safe as the Bank of England" is a saying which, in spite of the institution's many ups and downs, is true to the letter.

One morning, just after the bank opened, an angry and excited crowd thronged the street demanding cash for notes. There was actually double the money in notes in the hands of that mob to what there was gold in the bank, and the outlook was a bad one. Gold had to be got to pay off every claimant, but that took time. So the directors sent men with notes into the crowd, whose claims they attended to first, and paid each claim in sixpences and shillings. Some men walked away sacks of shillings over their backs, but the time gained by this method of payment saved the bank, and every claim was paid.

After this the bank decided to reassure its depositors by displaying in the bank windows and near the cashiers' desks sacks overflowing with sovereigns, but the public did not know that the sacks were full of coal with only a layer of sovereigns on top.

The man who gave the bank the most trouble was one named Charles Price, and he was given the nickname of "Old Patch" because he often wore a black patch over his right eye for no reason save as a disguise. He was one of the finest engravers in the world, beating even the bank engravers. He put forged notes into circulation with surprising skill, and a battle royal began between him and the bank.

Had he not been a master of disguise, he would have been caught long before he was, but he managed to swindle the bank out of more than $300,000 before he slipped into the hands of the law in a curious manner. He used to dress in a long, black cloak which generally covered the lower part of his face, and, although he employed more than a dozen agents, none had ever seen him out of his disguise.

It was one of these agents who turned upon him. Realizing that the man was making a fortune, he lay in wait for him and slunk into the corner of a doorway when the muffled figure drew near. Then leaping upon him he tore away his disguise and threatened to betray him to the police unless he acceded to certain preposterous terms. Price refused, so his agent carried out his word, and two months later the arch-criminal was convicted and hanged.

Only one man has succeeded in breaking into the bank, and this happened about thirty years ago. One day the directors received a letter from an anonymous person saying that he would meet any person the bank liked to appoint in the bullion rooms at midnight on a date fixed, but that the person keeping the appointment must not be armed. At first it was thought to be a hoax, but as a precaution detectives searched the bullion vaults thoroughly, and were quite satisfied that under no circumstances could a man enter those rooms; but they waited all through the night, and beyond hearing a peculiar scraping noise which they attributed to rats they heard and saw nothing.

A week later the bank directors were staggered at receiving a box in which lay several securities from the bank vaults, and enclosed was a note saying that if the directors would send a man to the vaults at midnight on the same day the writer would meet him there after having broken in from outside.

Accordingly three men went down into the vaults with lanterns at midnight and waited. Presently they heard a scraping noise, and a light appeared at one end of the vaults, which vanished, however, on their approach. Then a man's voice coming, it seemed, from right under their feet, told them to put out their own lanterns and he would appear. They did so with some trepidation, and carrying a dark lantern a man came on the scene. He explained that he was a sewer cleaner, and had discovered a disused drain which he found ran right into the bank vaults. He had stolen nothing, so the bank gave him a reward, which, it was whispered, ran into thousands, for his honesty.

The most successful thief the bank ever had to deal with was Bidwell, an American, who arrived with his gang in 1873. He distributed his agents all over the country, buying up genuine bills that could be manipulated, and then paid into the bank a bona fide bill of Rothschild's for $28,500, saying that he was going to start making Pullman cars in England. Following this he paid in forged bills to the value of over $510,000, and paid the amounts to himself under the name of Warren at the Continental Bank. This great fraud might have gone on longer than it did had the delinquents not forgotten to put the dates on two of the bills, whereupon they were returned to Messrs. Rothschild for rectification. Then the fraud was discovered, and the thieves caught just as they were starting for the continent with their spoil.

When you enter the bank by any door four pairs of eyes watch you though you are unaware of this fact. Situated close to the doors are hiding-places in which are four guardians of the bank. You cannot see them, but they can watch you with the aid of reflecting mirrors in which they can see your entrance and exit, and every movement from the time you enter the portals of wealth to the moment you leave them.

PETTING A HORSE.

If You Want to Please Him Rub Him Between the Ears.

"Not many people know how to pet a horse, from the horse's standpoint, at any rate," said a trainer. "Every nice looking horse comes in for a good deal of petting. Hitch a fine horse close to the curb and you'll find that half the men, women and children who go by will stop for a minute, say 'Nice horsy' and give him an affectionate pat or two.

"The trouble is they don't pat him in the right place. If you want to make a horse think he is going straight to heaven hitched to a New York cab or delivery wagon, rub his eyelids. Next to that form of endearment a horse likes to be rubbed right up between the ears. In petting horses most people slight those nerve centers. They stroke the horse's nose. While a well behaved horse will accept the nasal caress complacently, he would much prefer that nice, soothing touch applied to the eyelids. Once in awhile a person comes along who really does know how to pet a horse. Nine times out of ten that man was brought up in the country among horses and learned when a boy their peculiar ways."—New York Globe.

Queer Old Book Titles.

"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay For God's Saints to Smell At."

"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, carefully conserved for the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion breathed out of a Hole In the Wall of an Earthly Vessel known Among Men by the name of Samuel Fish."

"Eggs of Charity Layed For the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled with the Water of Divine Love. Take ye out and Eat."

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot to make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion."

The Sailor's Prayer Book.

"This is what you call the sailor's prayer book," a seaman said bitterly as he kicked a holystone out of the way. "Why is it called that? Well, in the first place, it is called that because in using it, in holystoning the deck, the sailor has to kneel down, and, in the second place, because all holystoning is done on Sunday. Don't you know the chantey—

"Six days shalt thou work and do all that thou art able
And on the seventh holystone the decks and scrape the cable.

"The stone is called holystone because the first holystones were bits of tombs stolen from cemeteries. It's got a pious, religious sound—holy and prayer book and Sunday and all that—but it is when he is using this stone that the seaman is most profane."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

It Happened Before.

A self made, self satisfied and self assertive itinerant preacher was expatiating to a college graduate on his own eloquence.

"Colleges," he declared, "ain't necessary when a preacher's got a genuine call to the ministry. I'm thankful to say the Lord opened my mouth without education."

"That's interesting," returned his hearer. "Come to think of it, something like that happened several thousand years ago in connection with Balaam, wasn't it?"—Circle Magazine.

In a Nutshell.

"Big talker," declared the Indian who had been listening to a local candidate. "Heap scrap."

"And what if he is not elected?"

"Scrap heap."—Kansas City Journal.

A Peculiar Bird.

"A Naturalist in Africa," Mr. P. B. Shaw, gives some interesting details of a bird which is very common on the Umtata river, in the Kambe forest district of Zululand, but which it is found somewhat difficult to classify. In its general appearance, color, and deportment it is apparently nothing more remarkable than our old friend the crow. But its habits are very different. It is a fish-eater, and swims the river like a duck, dives like a diver bird, and has the power of staying quite a remarkable time under water. In repose, its neck is like that of a crow, but when fish-catching or diving the neck stretches out to nearly three times its normal apparent length; while its bill, on close examination, is found to be flattened at the ends.

To Suffer From Headaches Makes Life Miserable.

It takes a person that has had or is subject to headaches to describe the suffering which attends them.

The majority of cases are caused by constipation and dyspepsia. The dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on, purely indicates that there is something the matter with the stomach or bowels. To the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches every part of the system is due its success in relieving and permanently curing headache. It has proven a specific for the malady in all its forms.

CONSTIPATION AND HEADACHES.

Mrs. Allison E. Brown, Summerfield, N.B., writes:—"I have been troubled with Constipation and Headaches for a long time. After trying different doctors to no effect, a friend asked me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I find I am completely cured after taking three bottles. I can safely recommend it to all."

PILES

It is stated by prominent Medical men that 9 out of every 10 people you meet on the street are suffering from Piles. Rich and poor are alike afflicted with this torturing and aggravating complaint, and being a delicate subject they often suffer in silence. This appl es more especially to women. Piles are of two kinds, Blind and Bleeding. The pain is often so intense that the sufferer can neither walk or lie, and are utterly unable to work or think while the pain lasts. Why men and wom n should suffer is a mystery when Curol will relieve the pain immediately and effect a cure.

We ask you to test our statement. We have proved that the people are the best judges as to the merits or otherwise of a preparation, and to this end we are asking every MAN, WOMAN and CHILD suffering from Piles or any skin disease to write us about it, and receive in return a sample of CUROL free of cost. All we ask you to do is to make your need known by sending us Free Trial Coupon.

In long standing cases Curol goes to the root of the difficulty with a determination which is simply marvellous. This healing done by Curol is well done, for it positively will not heal until the wound is clean and free from impurities. Not so with salves containing Zinc, Mercury, Lead, etc. These poisonous salves may heal quickly, but do a great deal of damage by driving the impurities into the body, often causing very serious consequences. You should shun such and use only a salve free from these harmful minerals. Such a salve is Curol.

There is a total absence in CUROL of rancid, fatty substances, as often found in cheap ointments, and does not cake, clog, or become hard. It is immediately absorbed by the skin, and thus penetrates to the seat of the disease. This fact alone makes CUROL popular. It is pure, and we have no hesitation in saying the best 25 cent salve on the market. We ask you to prove this statement by sending coupon for a free sample. All druggists and stores sell at 25 cents a box, or postpaid from CUROL SALVE CO., Spadina Avenue, Toronto. 6 boxes $1.25.

ARCTIC TEMPERATURES.

Zero Weather Is Regarded as Mild and Agreeable.

According to eminent arctic explorers, physical sensations are relative, and the mere enumeration of so many degrees of heat or cold gives no idea of their effect upon the system.

One explorer states that he should have frozen at home in England in a temperature that he found very comfortable indeed in Lapland, with his solid diet of meat and butter and his garments of reindeer.

Fifteen degrees above zero—unpleasantly warm.

Twenty degrees below zero—sharp, but not severely cold. One must keep one's fingers and toes in motion and rub one's nose occasionally.

Thirty degrees below zero—very cold. Particular care must be taken of the nose and extremities. Plenty of the fattest food must be eaten.

Forty degrees below zero—intensely cold. One must keep awake at all hazards, muffle up to the eyes and test the circulation frequently, that it may not stop somewhere before one knows it.

Drank and Remembered.

A porter in a big New York warehouse in Greenwich street was recently discharged for getting drunk and losing a valuable parcel. The discharge sobered him instantly, coming as a sudden hard shock. He said he would take the oath never to touch liquor again, but his pleadings for reinstatement were unheeded. He searched everywhere for the parcel, but could not recollect what disposition he had made of it. Of his honesty there had never been a question in twenty years. Overcome by the loss of his place, he got violently drunk and while in this condition recollected where he had left the parcel and went and recovered it.—New York Times.

Where Willie Was.

The professor (at the dinner table)—Oh, by the way, Mrs. Chopsticks, have you seen your little boy Willie lately? Mrs. Chopsticks—No, professor, I have not seen him since 10 o'clock, and I can't imagine what has become of him. In fact, I am very much worried about him. Professor—Well, seeing Martha pour me out that glass of water just now reminded me of something that I had on my mind to tell you some time ago, but which unfortunately escaped my memory. It was just about 10 o'clock, I think, that I saw little Willie fall down the well.—Atlanta Constitution.

LAND OF THE CROSSBOW.

The Deadly Poisoned Arrows of the Lissoo Sharpshooters.

On the wild frontier between China and British Burma is a barbarous tribe which has no civilized supervision. George Forrest, an English traveler, thus describes the chief weapon of these people: "If I had to suggest a title for a book on the upper Salwin I should call it 'The Land of the Crossbow,' which is the characteristic weapon of the country and the Lissoo tribe. Every Lissoo with any pretensions to chic possesses at least two of these weapons—one for everyday use in hunting, the other for war. The little children play with miniature crossbows. The men never leave their huts for any purpose whatever without their crossbows. When they go to sleep the 'nukung' is hung over their heads, and when they die it is hung over their graves. The largest crossbows have a span of fully five feet and require a pull of fully thirty-five pounds to string them. The bow is made of a species of wild mulberry of great toughness and flexibility. The stock, some four feet long in the war bows, is usually of wild plum wood. The string is of plaited hemp and the trigger of bone. The arrow, of sixteen to eighteen inches, is of split bamboo about four times the thickness of an ordinary knitting needle, hardened and pointed. The actual point is bare for a quarter to one-third of an inch, then for fully an inch the arrow is stripped to half its thickness, and on this portion poison is placed.

"The poison is invariably a decoction expressed from the tubers of a species of aconitum which grows on those ranges at an altitude of 8,000 to 10,000 feet. The poison is mixed with resin or some vegetable gum to the consistency of putty and is then smeared on the notched point. The 'feather' is supplied by a strip of bamboo leaf folded into a triangular form and tied in a notch at the end of the arrow, with the point of the angle outward. The reduction in thickness of the arrow where the poison is placed causes the point to break off in the body of any one whom it strikes, and, as each carries enough poison to kill a cart horse, a wound is invariably fatal. Free and immediate incision is the usual remedy when wounded on a limb or fleshy part of the body, but at Chengka the uncle of the Laowo chief showed us a preparation which resembled opium dross and which he said was an effective antidote.

"With few exceptions the Lissoo seemed to us to be arrant cowards, but the crossbow and poisoned arrow are certainly most diabolical weapons. An arrow from a war bow will pierce a deal board an inch thick at seventy or eighty yards. Some of the Tsekou natives were so expert that they could hit a mark four inches in diameter repeatedly at sixty to eighty yards. As no one goes anywhere without his crossbow and his bearskin quiver full of poisoned arrows and as every village is at feud with every other village mutual suspicion is inevitable. In open fight the Lissoo are usually careful to keep at a respectful distance from each other and behind oxhide shields which protect the whole of the body. But if battle is rare, murder and sudden death by ambush in the jungle are common."

Reward of Gallantry.

Charles Chatwin, a Coventry, England, boy, who has rescued four children from the canal at different times, has received from the deputy-mayor, Ald. A. H. Drinkwater, the Life-Saving Society's bronze medal in recognition of his bravery.

A Bona-fide Pun.

This is how Sir Francis Burnand, in a recent article, described one attributed to Charles Mathews. It was made on the name of a well-known comedian, named Howe. Mathews was alone on the stage, puzzling over the best way of dealing with a difficulty. His soliloquy finished by his saying to himself and the audience, with a puzzled expression of countenance, "Yes, that's what I ought to do, and it is what I will do. But how?" At that very moment Howe appeared at the back. In a second Mathews, pouncing with his thumb to the character who had just entered, said to the audience, in a tremendously confidential whisper, audible all over the house, "That's Howe." The pun was said off-hand at a rehearsal and repeated every night. It took immensely, the audience being convulsed with laughter.

THE OPSONIC TEST.

What It Showed the Man Who Smoked a Great Deal.

His friends knew that he would rather miss half an hour of a play than cut short his after dinner cigar, and they were astonished when he announced that he had quit smoking.

"What's the trouble?" he was asked.

"Opsonic test," he replied gloomily.

"What in the world is that?"

"I've been run down of late and feeling pretty blue. As there is consumption in my family, I consulted a specialist. He said I didn't have the disease yet, but he would tell me what my chances were of getting it. We are constantly breathing tuberculosis germs, he explained, but healthy blood has the power to destroy them. So he took a drop of my blood and inoculated it with a certain number of germs. In half an hour he examined it under the microscope and found that only half as many germs had been killed as should have been the case. Normal, healthy blood is said to have an opsonic test of 100, so my test was only 50/ He advised me to build up my strength by sanitary living—lots of fresh air day and night, plenty of sleep, wholesome food and moderation in work and pleasure."

"Where does smoking come in?"

"He said that tobacco had an extraordinary effect in decreasing the power of the blood to destroy germs. Some men who smoke a great deal have an opsonic test of zero—that is, their blood has no effect whatever on germs. I am fond of my cigar, but when a specialist levels an opsonic test all cocked and primed at your head and says, 'Tobacco or your life,' what are you going to do but throw up your hands?'—New York Tribune.

DESOLATION ISLAND.

Kerguelen Land Is a Region of Perpetual Storms.

Of all places on earth outside the arctic and antarctic regions Kerguelen Land, in the Indian ocean, is the most isolated and inhospitable. Indeed, it is generally known to mariners not by its official title, but as Desolation island.

Most nations have owned it by turns, but it has been sooner or later abandoned by them all as worthless, and this although it covers an area variously estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000 square miles. At present France is in nominal possession of it, she having annexed it in 1893.

The soil is utterly barren. Practically the whole of the interior is covered with snow fields of unknown depth, whence glaciers flow down to the sea. Where there are no snow fields there are morasses and hidden, treacherous mudholes.

The climate is probably the worst in the world. Terrific tempests follow one another practically without ceasing and are accompanied by torrents of ice cold rain, hail, sleet and snow. The Challenger expedition spent a month there, during which time there were only three fine days. And this was in December-January, when it is midsummer in those latitudes.

Its discoverer, M. Kerguelen Tremarec, although at first he professed to be enraptured with it, lived to confess that it was unfit for human habitation. "Not even Eskimos," he exclaimed, "could exist there."—Pearson's.

Too Cheap.

The class at kirk had been reading the story of Joseph and his brethren, and it came to the turn of the visiting minister to examine the boys.

The replies to all of his questions had been quick, intelligent and correct, such as:

"What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?"

"They sold their brother Joseph."

"Quite correct. And for how much?"

"Twenty pieces of silver."

"And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these bad brothers?"

A pause.

"What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?"

Then a bright little fellow stretched out an eager hand.

"Well, my man?"

"Please, sir, they selt him ower cheap."

Very Nearly Trouble.

"Horace, you don't love me as you used to."

"Not altogether, my dear. When we were first married I loved you for your beauty. Now I love you for your real worth, your many excellencies of mind and heart and for your"—

"So, Horace Higgsworthy! You think I've got entirely over my good looks, do you? Let me tell you, sir"—

"And for your unfailing sweetness of disposition, my dear."

Uncertain whether to go ahead and scold him just the same or to indulge in a good cry, she compromised by doing neither and fell to darning his socks with renewed energy.

A Conundrum.

Little Flora—Mamma, you ain't a girl, are you? Mamma—Certainly not, my dear. I'm a woman. Little Flora—But you were a little girl, weren't you? Mamma—Oh, yes, years ago. Little Flora—Well, where is the little girl now that you used to be?—Chicago News.

Steam.

"Can you tell me what steam is?" asked the examiner.

"Why, sure, sir," replied Patrick confidently. "Steam is—why—er—it's wather that's gone crazy wid the heat."—Everybody's.

TRIBAL CUSTOMS.

Missionary Has Made Interesting Discoveries Regarding Papuans.

A Methodist missionary in British New Guinea—now known as Papua—Rev. W. E. Brownlow, has added to the world's knowledge of the curious and little known races of the great North Pacific island by the discovery and partial taming of a new tribe.

The race in question consists of about 20,000 blacks, living at a place called Dobu. The customs of the race are most curious. The immigration policy is more drastic than that of "White Australia," for all strangers have either to become full members of the tribe or be eaten. When dealing with Mr. Brownlow, however, the difficulty was got over by making him a father of the tribe.

Women have great influence in the affairs of the tribe, and their duties are quite distinct from those of the men. The men clear the bush and dig the ground, then the women prepare it and plant yams, the crop being theirs. If a man wanted any yams he had to ask for them. The banana patch, however, was his own property. Wives were obtained by purchase. If a man paid well for his wife he could thrash her occasionally, but she could leave him if she did not like it, and go back to her own village, where she still had a home.

In the religion of the people, continued Mr. Brownlow, there was something of ancestral worship. A deceased relative was regarded as sacred, and his name must not be mentioned on pain of death. An exception was made in the case of anyone being ill, and given up by the medicine man. The invalid might then call upon the name of an ancestor, invoking him to bring back the spirit of the dying man. Their heaven was a place where the healthy, strong and good-looking went. All the others went to hell. They believe in a being who created them, but left them alone afterward.

FROM FACTORY TO PULPIT.

British Passive-Resister Is Still a Youngster at Seventy-Two.

Dr. John Clifford, who recently celebrated his seventy-second birthday and his jubilee as a Baptist minister in England, worked as a boy in a lace factory. In spite of the long hours he studied at night in order to educate himself for the ministry—for before he had reached his teens he had made up his mind to be a preacher. There are few more popular preachers to-day, and even those whom he fought over Mr. Balfour's Education Bill by Passive Resistance methods have paid tribute to his sterling sincerity and courage. One anecdote may be told about the Passive-Resistance movement which reveals the character of the man, who was then in his seventieth year. He received at 2 a.m. an urgent message to attend the first Passive-Resistance sale to be held at a small Derbyshire village. At 4 a.m. he was at St. Pancras for the newspaper train, and after a drive of seven miles across the Derbyshire hills reached the place of sale in time to address his co-religionists.

In spite of his age, Dr. Clifford still keeps a merry heart, and is often full of boisterous fun. He leaps gates and jumps hedges with the youngest, and keeps a whole party in good spirits with his witty remarks. On one occasion he and his "boys"—as he calls his young men—were having a summer outing and traveled in a compartment labelled "Engaged." There were one or two vacant places, however, and a young lady, not of the institute party, anxiously seeking a seat, came to the door of the carriage and asked if she might enter. "By all means," replied the doctor, with a twinkle in his eye, "if you don't mind being engaged."

"As Dead as Queen Anne."

Mr. P. F. W. Ryan, the author of "Queen Anne and Her Court," just published, offers a curious and plausible explanation of the old saying, "Dead as Queen Anne." During the closing years of the reign of Anne Her Majesty lived much in retirement at Windsor, while her brother, the pretender, resided in Lorraine, awaiting an opportunity to strike a blow for the possession of his sister's throne. The Queen's health was precarious, and, living much in seclusion, it was not surprising that rumors of her death constantly alarmed London. The citizens expected that on the death of the Queen the Pretender would appear in the capital at the head of a French army.

Constant rumors of this kind, which were as constantly shown to be lies, produced in the public mind a state of scepticism concerning all news as to the Queen's health. When the end did come the people were naturally incredulous, and only the official proclamation some hours after her death convinced them that the Queen was really dead. On that subject no further lies could be told to harm honest Londoners. Hence the saying "Dead as Queen Anne," came to be the most emphatic possible way of asserting that somebody or something was gone beyond all hope of life or resurrection.

The Palms of Trinidad.

Of the many beautiful plants, flowers and trees in the West Indies, none are more captivating to the eye than the Moriche Palms of Trinidad. Sixty feet aloft, reared on smooth, slender columns, their great fan-like leaves form a splendid groined roof. Round the bole of each leaf is a growth like ostrich plumes, packed close round the brown stems, and showing such tracery, carving, and painting as nature only can devise. The native-dweller in the Moriche wood is in keeping with its majestic beauty—a wild brown man, who feeds his hogs on Moriche fruit and Mombin plums, and whose only work in life is collecting for sale ant-eater skins.

OLD TIME FORCEPS.

When the Thing Was Turned Something Had to Give Way.

And speaking of teeth reminds me that the country doctor had to draw them when they ached. The dentist's artistry had not attained the elevated plane it occupies today, when everybody's mouth shines like the inside of a communion cup. I honestly believe the modern dentist has more different kinds of tools than even a sanitary plumber, and that's a whole lot when you come to count them up. The modern dentist hates the worst way to draw a tooth. Nevertheless if the modern dentist must draw the tooth he has a particular forceps for a particular tooth, and a cruel hearted and cold looking thing it is too. It puts you so in mind of a successful financier. When you brace yourself in the iron chair and take a tight grip on the arms of it and make up your mind you'll try to stand it and he gets that forceps well under the gum and—wait a minute; I feel so kind o' faint! Laws! Why didn't I mind my mother when she told me not to crack hickory nuts with my teeth? Well, anyway, you know he'll get the tooth out without doing more than take the whole top of your head off, and that only in a figurative sense.

Uncle Doc had one implement that did for every tooth, big and little, front and back. It wasn't a forceps; it was a turnkey. The real old folks know what that is and will say so with the cold chills running over them. But you've never seen one, and many a man that you would call old has never seen one. It's something like a canthook. The loosely riveted piece that curves slips over the tooth and catches on the inside; the solid cam bears on the outside gum; the operator turns the handle. Let's not talk about it. Something has got to give. Maybe the tooth will come out; maybe it will break off; maybe the jaw will fracture. All those are details. The main point is that if the operator twists the handle something has got to give, and that's all there is about it.—Eugene Wood in Success Magazine.

A GENTLE REPROACH.

Telling Retort of the Lamblike, Violet Eyed Beauty.

There is a certain young woman who is beautiful, with that childish, wistful, innocent looking, violet eyed beauty which reduces one-half the feminine world to tears, the other half to utterly helpless rage. We all know the type, but it is seldom given us to see it in such perfection. We usually associate it with a lamblike, appealing mentality that permits itself to be ridden upon—as soon expect a wood violet to turn and rend you.

A short time ago she was asked to a woman's luncheon and got herself up for the occasion in a way that made the result of her efforts a thing not easily forgotten. She arrived looking so lovely that there was little said among the guests for a few moments after her entry into the room. Perhaps she felt the silence. At all events, she turned to the woman standing nearest her and said in a childish voice, with ever such a little lisp and pretty southern accent:

"How well yo' are lookin' today!"

It was a well meant civility from a young woman to an older one, who seemingly was unable to accept it as such and put up her lorgnette, sweeping the speaker from top to toe. What she saw was enough to disconcert a younger and prettier woman than herself, but even so one finds it difficult to justify her next move.

"Wish I could say the same for you," she returned, closing her lorgnette with a snap.

One or two of the guests were friends of the pretty woman and almost stopped breathing in order not to miss what they felt sure would come—and it came. The pretty one raised her eyebrows slightly, then said, with an air of gentle reproach:

"Why don't yo' lie like a lady, like I do?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

What He Needed.

A sovereign would tempt many men, and when Plimkins, making a few purchases at the stores, saw one lying on the floor just by the counter he quivered with excitement.

Glancing around to reassure himself that none was looking, he quite accidentally dropped one of his kid gloves neatly on the coin and then dived. He got the glove all right, but still the sovereign remained.

A shopwalker approached him.

"Good morning, sir," said the man, rubbing his hands together in the approved style, "and may I show you a bottle of our celebrated liquid glue, which sticks"—

The Cellar Stairs.

A man who once had a bad fall when going down his cellar stairs now has a broad strip of white painted on the floor at the end of the last step. This is easily seen, even if the cellar be dark, and many a nasty accident is avoided. If the house is rented and you do not like to paint the boards a piece of white oilcloth can be tacked to the floor at the foot of the stairs. See that the tacking is securely done or a worse fall may follow than from a misgauged step.—Philadelphia Press.

HOUSEWIFE SUGGESTIONS.

Sweet apples will cook better and have a more delicious flavor if a little lemon juice or pure cider vinegar is added.

If lettuce is kept for several hours it should be laid on a wet towel and placed on the cellar floor or in the refrigerator.

Unpainted wood will remain whiter if scrubbed with cold water and soap. Hot water and strong alkali will make the wood yellow.

When washing pongee silk never wring it at all. Simply hang it on the line and let the water drip out. Iron with a warm iron when dry.

If the sink pipe is clogged remove the strainer and insert the hose into it and turn the water on full force. In almost all cases it cleans the pipe.

If porcelain vessels are placed directly over the gas flame they will clean much better by rubbing lard over the outside of the pan before putting it over the flame.

For "orange jelly in ambush" a well known cook directs one to cut oranges in half, remove the pulp and juice and with the juice prepare enough orange jelly to fill half the number of orange "cups." Then fill the remaining pieces with a charlotte russe mixture. When both are firm put them together in pairs and tie together with white baby ribbon.

TO RESTORE "VICTORY."

Nelson's Flagship Will Be Again Refitted as She Was at Trafalgar.

After careful consideration, the British Admiralty have decided that Nelson's flagship Victory, almost the last relic of the great naval wars, is to be re-rigged, re-painted, and as nearly as possible restored to the condition in which she gloriously led the port column of the British fleet into battle at Trafalgar.

At present she is fitted with masts which belonged to the old rigged iron cruiser Shah. These will be removed, and masts like those which she carried under Nelson will be placed in the ship, with spars and rigging of the ancient pattern, which is to be copied as faithfully as possible down to the smallest detail.

The nettings along the side are to be cut down and the hull of the ship, thus restored to its old proportions, will be painted in alternate black and yellow bands, with vermilion on the gun-ports. At present the Victory is painted in alternate bands of black and white. The unsightly structures which for the last few years have disfigured her upper deck are to be removed.

While Sir John Fisher was commander-in-chief at Portsmouth he cleared the cockpit of the Victory, and had it fitted up just as it was at Nelson's death. Now the process is to be carried out through the whole ship, and it will greatly increase her historic interest. Unfortunately, only a few of the guns which she actually carried at Trafalgar remain on board her, but every effort will be made to find the others and to put them back.

On Trafalgar Day, just celebrated the world over, there was an interesting feature. For the first time in recent years Nelson's deathless signal was hoisted in the Victory in the exact flags with which he made it.

This will not be the first reconstruction which the noble old Victory has undergone. Built in 1765, she was reconstructed in 1802, shortly before Nelson hoisted his flag in her. The vermilion painting of the lids of the gun-ports and the interior of the ship is said to have been originally adopted to hide the traces of blood. It goes back to a very remote past in British naval history.

The modern masts in the Victory do not fit the ship, and are lower than the ancient ones, while the poop differs altogether from that which marked her in Nelson's time.

Bush Vendetta.

A young Kanaka, of about eighteen years, was recently brought from an adjoining island, but it was found necessary to send him away to another station. It appears that some years ago the tribe from which the boy was taken had murdered a man belonging to a bush tribe near the station. How the natives got to know the boy was there is a mystery, but, nevertheless, it became known. One day a native, who had not been near the mission station for a year, suddenly made his appearance. The boy was carefully watched, and at night slept in a room occupied by a missionary, but he became so terrified that it was necessary to send him elsewhere. Miss Young says that the authorities are doing all they can to prevent the importation of rifles and ammunition, but for all that the bushmen become possessed of rifles. Some of the firearms are of a very old pattern. They are certainly not supplied by white traders, who are too much concerned about their own safety to supply the natives with weapons of destruction. It is alleged that some of the boys ship to New Guinea, and while there buy rifles and ammunition. It has happened that some of the boys when searched have had ammunition in their possession.

A Spectacled Skipper.

Dr. H. M. Moran, the captain of the Wallabies, the traveling Australian football team, soon to come to Canada, one would never set down as a footballer, for, wearing spectacles as he always does, save when on the field, and being a very pale-faced, thin-looking individual, one at first glance puts him down as a bookworm who regularly burns the midnight oil. He also mourns a snake! He happened to be staying at a station upcountry in Australia, and while sitting smoking in the verandah he was startled by seeing the head of a huge snake thrust out through the creepers. Slowly the huge monster—there were some seven feet of him—uncoiled and advanced. Springing up, the dauntless doctor seized a stick, fell upon the reptile, and slew it. On looking round, he found the ladies of the party mopping tears of merriment from their eyes, while in the middle distance stood his host, speechless with fury. Ultimately it was explained to the Wallaby captain that he had done to death a pet snake kept about the house for the express purpose of abolishing the rats which abounded on the premises!

NANCY'S PROXY.

By EPES W. SARGENT.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Nancy, it's awful to go to school."

Nancy Hartman nodded a solemn assent to the statement, for she always agreed with what Bobby Seaton said.

In this instance her own views were reflected, albeit those views were somewhat prejudiced at the moment by the fact that she had been kept in after school, and Bobby had had to sit on the curb and wait for her. He had done his best, too, to be kept in, and so share her punishment.

"I'll be glad when I'm married and don't have to go to school," he continued solemnly. "Married people don't have to go to school."

"Mr. Scarritt did," reminded Nancy.

"He was a minister," explained Bobby, as though that made a difference. "Besides he was married when he was in college. College is different from a school."

Nancy nodded wisely. She could not grasp any distinction, but since Bobby said so, there must be a difference.

"School's horrid," she complained. "I just fired one teenty little spit ball, and Miss Magnus made me stay in."

"She's got to stay to correct the exercises," explained Bobby, "and she's 'fraid to stay alone. That's why she always makes some one stay in."

"'Tain't fair," insisted Nancy, "and we were going after nuts too."

"I tell you what," exclaimed Bobby. "Let's get married, and then she can't make us go to school."

"Right now?" demanded Nancy, with a glance at her soiled dress.

"That little ink stain don't matter," assured Bobby. "We'll go to Mr. Scarritt. He got married when he was in school, so he'll understand."

"But he went to school after he got married," reminded Nancy.

"That's because he wanted to," explained Bobby. "If he didn't want to go he didn't have to. We won't want to go."

He started to his feet, and Nancy obediently followed. Had Bobby proposed a stroll to the north pole she would have followed with the same content, for was not Bobby wise with the wisdom of full eight years, while she boasted a scant six?

It was a short walk to the minister's home, and presently Bobby, brave but a trifle weak in the knees and with a higher color on his face, was explaining to the minister his desire to wed.

The Rev. Scarritt, grave and studious, was shocked at the suggestion and with gentle reproof at their sacrilege turned them from his study. The reproof was lost on a determined mind, and when the door had closed Bobby shook his tiny fist in the air.

"Just 'cause he's married he don't care 'bout no one else," he said vindictively. "He's not the only marrier in town. Huh!"

There was a world of scorn in the exclamation, and Bobby's wrath was hot. He had not understood what the minister was saying, but he had gathered that he was being scolded for even thinking of marriage, and this under the very eyes of his beloved.

There were three other ministers in town, but none of them was at home, and Bobby turned toward the tired Nancy.

"It's no use," he said, with a tightening of the quivering lip. "We've got to go to Riverside."

Nancy blinked back the tears and put her hand in his.

"It's dreadful hard getting married," she said. "Do all people have trouble like this?"

"When they elope," explained Bobby calmly. "You don't have time to fix it with the minister."

"I don't think that 'loping's much fun," ventured Nancy, but Bobby's look silenced her. Together they trudged along in silence until the houses were passed and the road to Riverside lay bare and lonely before them.

The shadows were closing in, and there were clumps of trees that made patches of dark, just the sort that bears love to hide in.

For the benefit of his lady Bobby kept up a brave front, but his clasp on the tired, dirty little hand that lay within his own tightened when the dark places came, and the sturdy little legs were urged to greater speed until the danger point was passed.

The dark was closing in now, and Nancy's plump little legs were not as strong as Bobby's, and, though she bravely sought to hold the pace, she lagged behind.

At last, in spite of her fortitude, she had to give in and sank with a little sob on the grass beside the roadway.

"I just can't go any more, Bobby," she wailed. "It seems like we 'most walked round the earth."

"It's only a little way now," urged Bobby, "an' maybe the minister will ask us to stay for supper."

The mention of food was the last straw. Fatigue had prevented the thought of hunger, but now Nancy knew that she was famished.

A school lunch is not calculated to last until 7 o'clock, and Nancy remembered that there was to be jelly cake for supper.

At the sound of the sobs that shook her tiny frame Bobby knelt beside her and sought to check the flow of tears, but not until she had cried herself to sleep on Bobby's shoulder did silence come.

Bobby himself felt very much like crying, but that would never do, and he held back the tears while he stared bravely into the dark, his arm protectingly about the sleeping Nancy.

It seemed to him ages passed as he sat there in the silence and the dark. No wagons came along, though once an automobile shot past at a speed that rendered his cry unavailing.

The passing of the car only served to make the loneliness the more pro-

[illegible] and when two more great yellow eyes shone far down the road Bobby gently lowered the golden head from his shoulder to the grassy bank and sprang to his feet. Perhaps if he waved his arms they would see and stop.

Nearer and nearer came the lights, and he stood directly in the yellow patch the lamps made in the white dust of the road. To his great relief the car slowed down, and from behind the curtain of light that half blinded the tired eyes came the welcome sound of a familiar voice. Bobby sprang forward to throw himself into the strong arms of his big brother.

"You're a fine pair of runaways," cried Howard. "We have been searching the roads for nearly two hours."

"Is Nancy with you?" demanded an anxious voice from the car, and Bobby knew that Nancy's sister was there too.

She gave a little cry when Howard brought the girl to her and covered the tear stained face with kisses. Howard made up a bed in the tonneau for the children and ran on to where the road permitted a turn toward home. Bobby was not sleepy now, and he stood leaning over the back of the front seat watching the car eat up the road.

"We was eloping lovely," he said plaintively, "until Nancy got tired. Now I s'pose this spoils it all."

"I guess it does, old man," was the laughing comment. "Suppose that you give me your proxy."

"What's proxy?" demanded Bobby curiously.

"It's this way," explained Howard as he let the car slow down. "If you want to do something, but don't have time or for some other reason you can't, you appoint a proxy to act for you. I appreciate highly your endeavors to unite the Hartman and Seaton families, but, since your scholastic duties prevent the consummation of your laudable intentions, I propose that you constitute me your proxy in the premises. I might add that in consideration of this demonstration of your confidence in my integrity I prepared to reciprocate with the donation of one bright silver half dollar in the coin of the realm."

Bobby regarded his brother suspiciously. He never could tell just what Howard was up to when he used the big words, but the proffer of a half dollar was a business proposition, and he stretched out his hand.

The exchange was made and Howard turned to the girl.

"Etta," he said gently, "it would be a shame to frustrate the plans of these two innocents. Don't you think, dear, that you might act for Nancy and make this marriage by proxy an assured fact?"

For a moment the girl hesitated, then she half turned in the seat.

"It would be a shame—to spoil their plans," she said gently. "I think—I should like—to act as Nancy's proxy, dear."

A Natural Result.

Willowby had a good shoemaker, Hiram Pool by name. Nobody knew the trade of making, mending and tapping, resoling and patching shoes better than he. His conversation took on local color from his shop, no matter what the subject might be. One evening an astronomer, sojourning in Willowby, gave a "talk" at the town hall, and Hiram went to hear him.

"What did you make of all he said about the cause o' wet weather when he'd spoken so light of the moon having all to do with it?" somebody asked Hiram the next day.

Mr. Pool held up the boot he was mending and squinted at the sole of it.

"His talk needed waxing," said the shoemaker dryly when his inspection of the boot was finished. "But what I made out of it was that he considered the wet weather usu'lly comes when the clouds are so old and rotten they won't hold the patches."—Youth's Companion.

Encouraged to Hope.

When the Empress Frederick, eldest daughter of Queen Victoria, was a little girl, her disposition, to the great grief of the queen, was haughty and arrogant. Once, when about to embark on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, she was lifted across to the deck of the boat by one of the sailors, who, as he was putting her down gently, said, "There you are, my little lady."

"I am not a 'little lady;' I am a princess!" was the prompt and indignant reply. The queen, who had overheard the conversation, detained the man with a gesture and, turning to her spoiled little daughter, said:

"Tell the kind sailor that you are much indebted to him for his civility and that, although you are not a 'little lady' yet, you confidently hope to merit the title before long."

An Air With Real Air.

During one of the political tours of Mr. Cleveland, in which he was accompanied by Secretary Olney, he arrived during a severe storm at a town in which he was to speak. As he entered the carriage with his friends and was driven from the station the rain changed to hail, and immense stones battered and rattled against the vehicle. A brass band, rather demoralized by the storm, stuck bravely to its post and played.

"That is the most realistic music I have ever heard," remarked the president.

"What are they playing?" asked the secretary of state.

"'Hail to the Chief,' with real hail!" rejoined Mr. Cleveland.

HOW HE SLEPT.

His Experience With a Noisy and Persistent Cuckoo Clock.

Werts recently was presented with an old fashioned clock. That evening he hung it on his bedroom wall, wound it up and after admiring it awhile went to sleep. He was drifting into very pleasant dreams when he was startled.

"Coo-coo, coo-coo!"

Werts sat up with a start, but in an instant recovered his wits and listened to eight more coo-coos with a foolish grin. Then he lay back and went to sleep again.

He had got into a fine doze by the time the thing went off again. This time he didn't grin.

Werts is a light sleeper, and, though he tried to get used to the thing, he gave up after the cuckoo had announced 2 o'clock and got up and stopped the clock.

Next evening Werts junior, who had not seen the clock, went to look at it.

"Why, it's stopped," he said. "What is wrong?"

Werts senior stroked his chin.

"Maybe I didn't wind it this morning," he replied. "Fred," he continued generously, "if you will promise to wind that clock every morning I'll let you have it for your room."

Werts junior was delighted, and the transfer was made.

At the breakfast table next morning the heir of the house of Werts looked tired and somewhat sheepish, but offered no explanation. After considerable general conversation his father said:

"You look tired. How did you sleep last night?"

Werts junior yawned.

"By the hour," he answered.—Kansas City Times.

SAVED THE GIRL.

An Old Time Adventure With Solomon Island Cannibals.

One day on a Solomon beach a little girl ran to me and, before I was aware of it, placed my foot on her neck. One knows what this means well enough. In hot war it means that if a chief allows his foot to rest on the defeated one's neck the man's life is safe, but he is a slave forever, rescue or no rescue. I was puzzled at the child's action. It was soon explained. Shortly afterward down came a lot of villagers and insisted on taking the youngster. I told them what she had done. They said they did not care. Her mother was being cooked in the town, and the child should go to the ovens with her.

"Never!" I said. "What! We, who have eaten betel nut together many times, to quarrel for a mere child to whom I have granted life in your own way!" I swore they should kill me first. They replied:

"Oh, that is an easy thing to do."

A bold front was the only thing now. Luckily I had my sixteen shooter. Springing back and putting a mark on the sand with my foot, I swore I would shoot the first man who crossed it. They knew I could answer for a dozen of them or so, and, although clubs were up and bows bent, they hesitated, as well they might, and I knew I had mastered them. Then one proposed I should buy the child fairly. They cared not to fight a friend. To this I at once agreed, and a muss was thus avoided, and a mission ax worth tenpence made me a slave owner.—"Among the Man Eaters," by John Caggin.

The Century Plant.

The century plant, so named because of the popular idea that it blooms but once in a hundred years, in one sense makes good its name, for it blooms only once, then dies. In the genial climate of southern California it reaches maturity and blooms in fifteen or twenty years, while in colder climates the period may range from forty to fifty years. There are many species of the agave family native to northern Mexico, where it is called the maguey. The plant furnishes "pulque," the national drink of Mexico. At the time of blooming the plant throws up a single stock of rapid growth to the height of twelve to twenty feet, from which the tassel-like flowers sprout forth. This great flower stalk draws all the sap and vigor from the body of the plant, which soon withers and dies.

Apt Pupil.

Captain Jones (giving a short lecture to the recruits of his company on their demeanor in public)—If a civilian should make offensive remarks in a public house and try to induce a quarrel the well conducted soldier should drink up his beer and go quietly away."

After his address Captain Jones questioned his audience to ascertain if they had comprehended his remarks.

"Now, Private Jenkins, what should you do if you were at an inn and a civilian wanted to quarrel with you?"

"I should drink up his beer, sir, and 'ook it."—London Pick-Me-Up.

A Worthy Desire.

An ambitious young Chicagoan called upon a publisher of novels in that city, to whom he imparted confidentially the information that he had decided to "write a book" and that he would be pleased to afford the publisher the chance to bring it out.

"May I venture to inquire as to the nature of the book you propose to write?" asked the publisher very politely.

"Oh," came in an offhand way from the aspirant for fame, "I think of doing something on the line of 'Les Miserables,' only livelier, you know."—Lippincott's.

STAGE SCENERY.

Modern Settings Tax the Ingenuity of the Builders.

The big scenic artists do little actual painting beyond making the model, unless they have a panoramic effect. That they do themselves, standing on the paint bridge, many feet from the floor, while the canvas is raised or lowered. The panoramic effects are hard to handle. One difficulty is to avoid fluttering when a draft sweeps across the stage. Mountains that tremble hazily are not conducive to illusion.

With the elaborate productions of late years the importance of the builder of scenery has increased, says Everybody's Magazine. Formerly, when the scenery consisted merely of canvas stretched over a wooden frame, it was simple enough. But the struggle for realism and sensational effects has developed difficult problems for the builder of stage scenery to solve. Every piece of scenery must be made so that it can be folded into strips five feet nine inches wide, because the doors of the baggage cars in which it is transported are only six feet in breadth. Also every piece must be light and so constructed that one scene can be removed and another put in place within ten minutes. It may take thirty hours of continuous work to get the scenery "set up," to use a technical expression, after it is brought into the theater. After that the work of changing a scene is comparatively easy.

A DOGS' CLUB.

London's Luxurious Resort For Aristocratic Canine Pets.

London is the only city in the world boasting a dogs' club. The club is in a pleasant suit of rooms near the Trocadero and close to Regent street. Handsome rugs cover the floors, the windows are veiled in lace and silk, and luxurious sofas are ranged against the walls, while a profusion of soft pillows are scattered about for the comfort of aristocratic dogs who prefer the floor for a nap. Dainty satin lined wicker baskets are provided for the smaller pets. The membership fee is half a sovereign, but this does not include meals, baths or tips to the attendants.

Ladies going shopping or to the theater leave their pugs and poodles at the club and give the attendant in charge at the time a few shillings for looking after it, but if the dog is fed half a crown is charged. This pays for a mutton chop and milk. A whole crown provides the little animal with minced chicken. For a half sovereign Fido is bathed, brushed and perfumed, and if he is a French poodle his hair is carefully curled. A veterinary is attached to the club to see that only dogs in perfect health are admitted, all sick members being quarantined in a separate room. Blankets, boots, collars, harness, soaps and brushes and all the accessories of a fashionable dog's toilet as well as dog medicines are sold at the club.—New York Press.

A Candid Critic.

"A criticism that has helped me a great deal in my work came from a man to whom I took a picture to be framed," said a young woman who spends much of her time copying in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "As the picture progressed my friends told me it was fine. Some of the other copyists said it had value, character, good coloring and all those things, and even one of the guards in the gallery got real friendly one day and remarked that it was the best copy of that picture he had seen. I began to think that maybe, after all, my several years of study were beginning to bear fruit. At the framer's I picked out a nice frame, and the framer began to figure on the cost.

"'I'll tell you, miss,' he said, 'that frame will come to $3.98. If I were you I'd get something cheaper for that picture.'"—New York Sun.

"Setting the River on Fire."

In old English times, when each family was obliged to sift its own flour, it sometimes happened that an energetic man would turn his sieve so rapidly as to cause it to catch fire. The style of sieve used in those days was called a "temse," and it became a customary saying that a lazy man would never set the temse on fire. Now, it happens that the name of the river Thames is pronounced like the name of this old flour sieve, and after many years, when the old fashioned temse was forgotten, it was thought that setting the temse on fire meant setting the river on fire, and that is why today we say that a stupid person will never set the river on fire.

"When I first started out hunting apartments I went through a long, polite dissertation," said the woman with a haunted look and weary feet. "Now I go in and say to the elevator man or janitor: 'Apartments?' 'Rooms?' 'Price?' 'Keep 'em.' I get along just as well, and it saves lots of time. Try it."—New York Times.

A Busy Family.

"Say, bub," said the book agent as he drew up at the gate of a house in a country town on which was swinging a barefooted boy, "is your pa around?"

"Nope. Pa's out breakin' in a colt," was the reply.

"Could I see your ma?"

"Nope. Ma's jest took a walk to break in a new pair of shoes."

"Is your big sister at home?"

"Nope. Pete Lawson fell over town an' busted his leg, an' she's gone over to break the news to his ma."

"Maybe I could see another one of your sisters."

"Nope. The other's gone to town to break a ten dollar bill."

"Well, I guess I'll have to talk to your big brother, then. Will you call him, please?"

"Can't. He's breakin' stone up at the county jail."

"Your folks seem to be pretty well occupied," smiled the book agent. "Maybe I could interest you in a big book bargain."

"Not me, mister," replied the boy. "That feller comin' over the hill called me squint eyed yesterday, an' I'll soon be so busy breakin' his head that I won't have no time to talk to you."—Judge's Library.

No Wonder She Didn't Know.

Before he had been in the car three minutes most of the women passengers and some of the men were explaining to their neighbors what they would do with the little imp if he belonged to them. Spanking was the popular remedy, and if that boy had received then and there all the paddlings that his critics were aching to administer he surely would have been well blistered.

To the general babel of advice and fault finding, however, there was one woman who contributed nothing. She was a gentle, gray haired body who remained unruffled in the midst of the small tempest raging.

"If that child was mine," said the determined woman beside her, "I'd make him mind if I had to half kill him. Wouldn't you?"

"I don't know," said the little woman mildly, "what I'd do.'

"You don't?" said the determined woman. "Well, I know. But maybe you are not used to children? Maybe you never had any of your own?"

"Oh, yes," said the little woman. "I brought up thirteen. That is why I don't know what I would do."

Tolstoy's Sense of Fun.

At one music party at Count Tolstoy's a lady's singing displeased the count's boys, and they adjourned to another room and made a noise. Their father lost patience and went after them, and a characteristic admonition ensued.

"Are you making a noise on purpose?" he asked.

After some hesitation came an answer in the affirmative, "Y-y-yes."

"Does not her singing please you?"

"Well, no. Why does she howl?" declared one of the boys, with vexation.

"So you wish to protest against her singing?" asked Lyeff Nikolaevitch in a serious tone.

"Yes."

"Then go out and say so or stand in the middle of the room and tell every one present. That would be rude, but upright and honest. But you have got together and are squealing like grasshoppers in a corner. I will not endure [illegible]

FOUGHT FOR DEER.

Nephew of Roblin In Duel With Indians Over Quarry.

Winnipeg, Dec. 11.—A serious shooting affray occurred at Rose Isle, Manitoba, on Tuesday. A nephew of Premier Roblin, Alfred Demill, had shot a deer and was bleeding it when an Indian stepped forward and claimed the quarry. Young Demill refused to resign the deer, whereupon the Indian cocked his rifle. Both promptly took cover, Demill behind a tree and the Indian behind the deer's carcase.

Demill fired at the Indian's rifle, hoping to destroy the weapon, but struck the Indian in the arm and hand. Two other Indians arriving, drew knives and further trouble seemed imminent. Demill warned them they must take the consequences if they approached him, and finally the Indians, thinking discretion the better part of valor, loaded the venison in a sleigh, with the carcases of seven other deer, and drove off in the direction of Rathwell.

Alleged Chinese Smugglers Caught.

Welland, Dec. 11.—William Riley and Edward Barts of Buffalo were arrested in Fort Erie yesterday, and the police believe these are the men who were smuggling Chinamen over the river to Buffalo on the morning of Nov. 12, when four of the party of 11 were drowned and three others were dashed to pieces on the breakwater.

Appearing before Magistrate Burgas, a remand was made until Dec. 17, though it is probable a hearing will be given to-day. The charge against them is manslaughter, and they announced that they will fight extradition. Both men are married. Riley is 26 years of age and Barts is 40.

This company and the Yukon Gold Basin Co., headed by former Governor Ogilvie, will install a joint power plant to drive 30 dredges.

London, Dec. 11.—(C. A. P.)—Lord Carrington, president of the Board of Agriculture, has refused the request made on behalf of the Scotch Chambers of Agriculture to close the ports against the importation of live cattle from the United States and Canada. He said it was not wholesome to have only the dead meat trade.

CHURCH UNION FAR OFF.

Another Conference Is Passing Without Any Result.

Toronto, Dec. 11—The fourth church union conference at the Metropolitan Church will adjourn without bringing organic union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches within measurable distance. Last night it appeared to be fading away further than ever from accomplishment, owing to the impossibility of the doctrinal committee to reconcile the Calvanistic dogma of the Westminster confession of faith with the Armenian principles of free will as contained in the Wesley sermons. Rev. G. Burwash is chairman of the committee on doctrine. It is admitted that his committee has the hardest task of any. Rev. Dr. Sparling of Winnipeg said, however, "If we do not accomplish union for fifty years what we are now doing is worth the time and effort."

As in former cases the clauses upon which the committee on doctrine can agree will be announced to the public, and not the motions in committee which fail to carry.

One estimate is that within the next ten years the benevolent funds of the denominations will be federated, but no representative will hazard a guess as to the union of the Methodist and Presbyterians. There are said to be some indications that the Congregationalists and Methodists will eventually unite as a result of the annual church union conferences.

The conference is expected to adjourn to-night.

Owen Sound's Campaign.

Owen Sound, Dec. 11.—J. M. Davis, who headed the councillors in January, has come out for the mayoralty against Mayor Kennedy or anyone else. The mayor has decided not to run and Councillor F. W. Harrison will probably oppose Mr. Davis. Both are against local option. The local optionists will not run a candidate.

A newspaper, The Citizen, will be started on Saturday by the anti-local option party here, and will be issued thereafter every Wednesday during the campaign.

Tip From Rockefeller.

New Brunswick, Dec. 11.—Jno. D. Rockefeller gave the waiter who served him at luncheon here Wednesday, Rudolph Osterwald, five cents for a tip, and advised him to put it in the savings bank.

"That's what I did with my spare cash when I was your age," said Mr. Rockefeller, "and it earned money for me. Never waste your money."

ASLEEP ON THE TRACK

Ops Farmer's Team Wanders on to Crossing While Occupant of Sleigh is in Slumberland---Saved by a Foot.

THE SLEEPER AROUSED IN TIME

A farmer residing near Lindsay had a narrow escape from a terrible death on Wednesday evening, and the fact that he is alive to-day is due to the presence of mind and promptitude of a well known resident of South Ops.

The farmer was in Lindsay during the afternoon and started for home early in the evening. When near Ops station he apparently fell asleep as the team wandered on to the track. The South Ops resident had occasion to visit the station to meet a friend who was coming on the train and who intended getting off at this point. He was surprised to see the sleigh across the track and he at once hurried to the spot and roused the sleeping occupant.

The train had already whistled for the station and was fast bearing down upon them. Just as the end of the sleigh cleared the track the local came tearing by.

MERCURY HAS BEEN TRAVELLING SINCE THURSDAY EVENING

The mercury has been working over-hours, to use a street expression, and during the last twenty-four hours has been particularly industrious. Thursday night it started on the downward trip as it the bottom had fallen out of the glass, or like a stock that is being heavily "beared." The lowest figure reached was 19 degrees below, and after resting on its oars for a short time it started, like Baker's speech, to climb again. It did not stop at freezing point, but went past it several points. The total distance traversed from the lowest to the highest point was 54 degrees. The weather as a quick change artist, stands in a class all by itself.

CONSIDER HOW TO ADVANCE LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT HERE

A meeting of the committee that was in charge of the Laymen's banquet will meet in the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow night at eight o'clock for the purpose of settling up accounts and for considering the advancement of the movement and what steps are to be taken by the Peterborough Laymen.

BOARD OF TRADE RECOMMENDS MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP OF ELECTRIC POWER AND STRONGLY FAVOURS MORE AGGRESSIVENESS IN ADVERTISING THE CITY

Resolutions Passed

Moved by Mr. Wm. Langford, and seconded by Mr. F. W. Dean, —That it is greatly to the interests of city to immediately acquire power to sell to manufacturers desirous of locating here. —Carried.

Moved by Mr. Wm. Langford, and seconded by Mr. W. Might, —That this Board of Trade appoint a committee composed of the President, Vice-President, Messrs. J. H. Larmonth and W. H. Moore to interview the City Council with the object of having all available sites suitable for manufacturing enterprises tabulated, and of establishing a Publicity Department in connection with their Manufacturers' Committee, to advertise the advantages of the City of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre, and, when this department should consider it advisable in the interests of the city, to send some business men to personally interview intending manufacturers with the object of inducing them to locate here.—Carried.

Two important questions were dealt with last night by the Board of Trade. One was the procuring of municipal power and the other was the advertising of the facilities and advantages for the purpose of inducing manufacturers to locate here. The meeting was fairly well attended and the discussion was thoughtful and bearing on the city's best interests One and all were agreed that some energetic method of advertising should be adopted by the City Council and the suggestion was made that a man be appointed whose duty would be to give his sole attention to keeping in touch with the manufacturing houses with a view to getting them to locate branches here. Mr. Wm. Langford was one of the leading speakers endorsing the city's possessing its own power. His idea was that the city should put its money into the developing of power rather than into parks and bridges.

Chairman's Address

Dr. Morrison stated that the meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing ways and means by which Peterborough might benefit by what is considered a certainty—that we are on the eve of a revival of good times. After a slight period of depression the general feeling is that greater activities in industrial and manufacturing lines are at hand. In the near future, he said, the city would be experiencing the onward movement and manufacturing houses would be looking for locations. "Other towns are moving and we feel that Peterborough should move also. We should go after our share and prepare for them. As the spring opens activities that three months ago we did not dream of, will be presenting themselves." It is admitted that Peterborough is a manufacturing city and depends on its industries for its growth. Our location, Dr. Morrison stated, is one ness and suggested the appointment of a man whose duty it would be to keep in touch with manufactures that may be looking for locations. Every week, he said, it is noticed that enquiries are coming from Europe and the United States, for information in this regard. A man appointed to this position might co-operate with manufacturers' committee and organize companies with local capital behind them.

Favoured This Idea

Ald. Bradburn agreed with Mr. of the best in the province. In a few years we will be on the water front for the Government has decided upon a depth of an eight foot canal as far as Peterborough. "If we have not sufficient water power, it is because it is not properly husbanded, or developed."

"In the past we have been inclined to conservatism, and are still somewhat that way. We do not, however, want to stand still. Other cities are spending large sums of money in advertising their facilities and advantages, endeavouring to get manufactures to locate within their boundaries."

Dr Morrison cited several cases where good results had resulted from Larmonth, but stated that it would be better to take it out of the hands of the committee and leave it entirely in the hands of one man.

He did not believe there was much gained by corresponding with manufacturers, for while letters were being interchanged the representative of the city could immediately go directly to the company and with vastly better results. Pay this man a good salary, he said, for it seemed to be a good plan. If it did not prove satisfactory after several years, it might be dropped.

Other Opinions

Messrs. R F McWilliams, W R Morris, Ald. Gillespie and Ald. Johnston, Mr. W C Austin, Mr. A Montgambert and others dealt with the question of Peterborough's facilities, the power problem receiving most attention. All were agreed that a publicity department was in the best interests of the city.

The motions mentioned above were then passed and it was decided to adjourn until Monday, December 21st, when the by-laws that are to be submitted to the people in January will be discussed.

Rev. Dr. Workman Protests He Was Wrongly Condemned And Illegally Dismissed

The personal appeal of Rev. Dr. G. C. Workman against the action of the Board of Governors of the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, in dismissing him from the chair of theology has come before the Methodist Board of Appeal in Toronto. At the outset attention was called to certain newspaper reports of the previous night's proceedings, and it was agreed that no information should be furnished to the press until the court had reached their decision. The proceedings which took place in one of the upper rooms of the Metropolitan church, lasted three and a half hours, a large part of which was occupied by Dr Workman, who made an impassioned appeal to have the decision of the Board of Governors rescinded. He protested that he had been wrongly condemned and illegally dismissed. The board, he argued, had no power of appointment, and therefore no power of dismissal. With regard to the charge upon which the action of the board had been based, he claimed that his doctrinal views and teaching were in strict accordance with the standard of the Church. Dr. Workman declared that as the result of the board's action he had suffered mentally, physically and financially.

Some discussion followed, and at the close Rev. Dr. Carman, who presided, informed the press that the court would meet again to consider their decision.

The chief charge made against Rev. Dr. Workman in the proceedings leading to his dismissal, was that in effect he had denied the virgin birth of Christ.

Halifax Men Walking Around The World Reached City Last Evening; Their Trip Will Last Two Years

Two pedestrians are registered at the Oriental Hotel as A. R. Fletcher and Frank Hines, of Halifax, and who stated that they are on a tour of the world on foot, arrived in the city last night, and set out again on their travels this morning. The pair stated that they left Halifax last spring and have already covered some thousand miles of the 2500 miles which they expect to negotiate in two years. They are expected to finish their tramp in May, 1910. They were at Hastings on Wednesday night and came on to Peterborough yesterday.

LICENSE COMMISSIONERS TELL OF LOCAL OPTION CLASH WITH THE CITY

Examiner Special.

Toronto, Dec. 11.—Dr. Morrison and Messrs. James Kendry and H Lee Brun, Peterborough License Commissioners, this morning told Provincial Secretary Hanna, that a clash between local option districts and the city required further measures towards control. Mr. Hanna promised consideration.

CITIZENS WILL DISCUSS THE BY-LAWS ON WHICH THEY VOTE IN JANUARY

The ratepayers may be interested in the announcement that the Board of Trade will hold a meeting on Monday evening, Dec. 21st, when the bylaws that are to be voted on election day, will be discussed. Since the council decided to place them before the people there has been considerable discussion among the citizens and hence they will have an opportunity of learning the full import of these by-laws and of fully considering them. It was to educate the ratepayers or rather to have them learn exactly what they are called upon to vote on, that the Board of Trade decided to hold this meeting, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance as the time has come, as it is everywhere stated, when the city will advance only by every citizen taking a material interest in its welfare.

MILK VENDORS MUST GET LICENSES OR APPEAR BEFORE THE MAGISTRATE

There are nine milk vendors in the city who have not taken out their licenses for the year, and Chief Rossel vouchsafed the information this morning that if the nine didn't get busy and secure the necessary bits of cardboard at once, a similar number would find themselves before the Magistrate. There is a penalty of a fine not to exceed $50, so that it behooves the tardy dairymen to bestir themselves. The licenses are due on December 1, but Chief Rossel will give the erring ones until Tuesday next, December 15, to set themselves right. Informations will be laid against all those who have not done so by that time.

PETERBOROUGH COUNCIL TO APPROACH THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC COMMISSION

It is expected that Peterborough will shortly approach the Hydro-electric Power Commission with regard to power. It is proposed to obtain this if possible from sources about twenty miles north of the city, and have practically the same plan worked out as at Ottawa, Fall-ing in this, however, the commission may be asked to bring Niagara power to the city. It is thought that perhaps 8,000 horsepower may be used annually.

COWS CAME HOME AFTER SALE AND FELL INTO LAKE

A story comes from Enniskorry where a few days ago two cows that Mr. Jas. Gregg had sold with the rest of his stock, returned to their old home and wandered out onto Chemong Lake, where they went through the ice, with the result that at that time it was thought one of them would not live. They wandered away from the farmer who had purchased them, and with unerring instinct found their way back to the old barnyard.

MR. R. C. BRAUND THINKS CITY CAN SAVE MONEY IN BUYING FAIR GROUNDS

At the coming municipal election a bylaw will be voted upon by the ratepayers of the city of Peterborough which it carried permits the purchasing by the City of the Exhibition Grounds at a cost of $30,000, to be used as the Peterborough Industrial Fair Grounds.

Mr R C Braund, general merchant, in speaking to the Examiner last night from the standpoint of a ratepayer considered that the people, who are affected by such a bylaw should it pass, ought to know more about its nature. But from what he understood about the matter he believed the city could do much better by expending $10,000 upon a site and $20,000 on a display building.

"The present Exhibition Grounds are located about a mile from the centre of the city and I believe enough land can be purchased no farther away than they and just as handy to the street cars for the $10,000. Then the remainder of the $30,000 might be used for erecting suitable buildings."

Snow From George St. Roof Top Fell On Young Lady Pedestrian

This morning a young lady was walking down George street, between Simcoe and Charlotte streets, when without any warning a small pile of snow fell from the roof upon her. Although she was practically unhurt, her hat was rudely misplaced and slightly damaged and she was somewhat frightened. Owing to the smallness of the mass of snow there were no injuries, but there were other quantities falling which fortunately struck no one. It was remarked by a few of those who saw the affair that this snow should not be left to fall whenever it may, as is the case throughout the winter.

INTERESTING ADDRESSES GIVEN AT LAST MEETING OF THE CAMERA CLUB

The most enthusiastic meeting so far, was held last Tuesday evening, at the Tate-Taylor Optical Rooms, and the many questions brought forward showed that the organization of a camera club was the filling of a long-felt want. The question of the coming exhibit in the Y.W.C.A. building was discussed and it was decided that the entries and exhibits must be in by Monday, Dec. 14th, before 9 p.m., at the club's headquarters, the Tate-Taylor Optical Company's office, Y.W.C.A., or the secretary's address, 191 King street. The Hanging Committee will begin their work on Wednesday evening. The Secretary will supply each exhibitor with a number, for identification of photos.

It was also decided that the prizes secured by the club be open only to members of the club. There are other prizes which are open to any exhibitor who may wish to compete. Any person may make as many entries as he or she desires in any of the following classes;—Landscape, portraiture, interiors, architecture, figure studies, aquatic or marine, groups, lantern slides, set of 12 photo cards, mechanical or machinery, statuary and stereoptical. Not more than one prize can be secured by the same exhibitors.

An exhibit of photo novelties will also be there, to show what can be done with the camera to beautify the home.

Mrs. McCarthy and Misses Rose McCarthy and Moore are the hanging committee.

Mr F. Russell gave the club a very interesting lecture on the composition of Sodium Salts, and Mrs. McCarthy's paper on the "Art of Negative Making," was also eulogized.

The next meeting will be a social one and will be held at Mrs. McCarthy's on Dec. 22nd, at 7.45 p. m. Rev. Dr. D. B. Marsh will give a lantern slide exhibition on "A Trip to the West Indies."

TO ASSIST IN BUILDING OF ST. JAMES' CHURCH

At a joint meeting of the Board of the George street Methodist church it was decided to have a "St. James' Sunday," instead of the usual anniversary services. Next Sunday, therefore, Rev. D. O. Crossly, Whitby, will be in Peterborough to preach at both services, and an effort will be made to raise as much money as possible for St. James' new church.

FAVOUR A NEW SCHOOL

Board of Arbitrators Decide on Non-Union School Section to Northeast of Lakefield in Douro.

LONG CONTROVERSY NOW ENDED

Some time ago arbitrators were appointed by the municipalities interested to consider an application for the alteration or dissolution of the Union School section composed of the Village of Lakefield and certain portions of the township of Douro. The arbitrators by their award, dated July 18, 1908, decided that no change should be made in respect of the limits of such school section. An appeal was made by a number of ratepayers interested, to the County Council, and on September 29th, arbitrators were appointed to deal with the matters in question upon such appeal.

The Board of Arbitrators were Messrs. John M. McIntosh, William McIlmoyle and Wm. Nelson. In effect they decided that the continuance of the Union School Section with its present boundaries, is unsatisfactory, by reason of the fact that many children resident in that section, owing to their distance from the school house, find it difficult to attend the school.

They also awarded that there be removed from the school section all that portion of the township of Douro which is now included in the section except all that part of the township now in the section which lies in the seventh and eight concessions, and south of the line between lots seventeen and eighteen in that concession, and that the land last mentioned with the village of Lakefield shall continue to form a Union School section.

INSPECTOR WAS PLEASED WITH NEW INSTITUTE

The Board of Education had a meeting in the new Collegiate Institute when Provincial Inspector Wetherill had a conference with the members. It was the first visit of the inspector to the new building and he had many kind things to say to the board about the rooms and equipment. He also informed the board that he would be able to report the building first grade in nearly every particular, and expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the structure. The inspector made several suggestions to the board along minor lines that will likely be adopted. Among other things the question of drill for the boys was discussed, and temporary arrangements will be made until such time as the new armouries will be available for this purpose.

BROCK ST. RINK OPEN FOR SEASON WITH BAND TO-NIGHT

The Brock street rink will be opened for the season to-night, and no doubt there will be a big crowd on hand for the opening of this popular winter resort. Caretaker Jack Thornbeck has been working faithfully to get good ice for the occasion, and skaters will find little to complain of in the excellent sheet which he has prepared. The thaw to-day has had little effect upon the ice and it will be in splendid condition. The 57th Band will render a choice programme and there promise to be many skaters to-night when the doors are thrown open to the public.

DISTRICT MEETING OF ODDFELLOWS HELD LAST NIGHT

The semi-annual District meeting of the Independent Order of Oddfellows for Peterborough district was the raison d'etre of a very enjoyable evening in the I.O.O.F. Hall last night, when some 150 visiting and local brethren were present. There were about thirty visitors from Lakefield, who drove down for the evening, and who, apparently, had a pleasant visit. The three degrees were conferred upon six Lakefield members: Messrs. Kenneth McGinnis, Chas. Bickell, Wes. Hurl, Dr. Graham, Wm. Leggott and Norman Moore by a joint degree team from Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges. The exemplification of the degrees was put on in excellent shape, the work of the team being all that could be desired. Afterwards light refreshments were partaken of and a pleasant social hour spent.

CHRISTMAS BUYING.

Why do you buy the Christmas present? It is in recognition of the spirit of love or affection, though you may not be conscious of it, made patent in Him Who made the glorious law that we should do unto others as we would have others do unto us. Will you fail "to keep this law" in making your Christmas gift purchases? Will you put yourself in the place of the sales girl in a shop, or the man or boy who drives the delivery van or has to trudge on foot through snow and cold to promptly deliver belated parcels whose purchase or postponement has been delayed to the eleventh hour? Would you like to be treated that way, especially when by a little considerate thought, the selecting, buying, selling and delivery might have been conducted under circumstances comfortable, convenient and profitable to all concerned. The last-hour Christmas rush in the shops, is not necessary, but it will be inevitable so long as you and others forget your duty to yourself and others.

It he that gives quickly gives twice, he or she that buys Christmas gifts promptly gives double pleasure—to himself and others.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

The newspaper is coming into its own. Recent decisions and judgments in cases of libel show the trend of the judicial mind to be averse to encouraging vexatious and frivolous suits to recover damage for alleged libel or similar offence. Another case in point developed on Wednesday at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. Chancellor Boyd has dismissed the application by Major Knowles to commit to custody William Robertson, editor of the Dundas Banner, for contempt of court in publishing articles in the issues of his paper of the 22nd and 29th of October during the heat of the last Dominion election contest in Wentworth county when Lieut.-Col. W. H. Ptolemy was the Conservative, and Mr. W. O. Sealey, the Liberal candidate. The articles in question commented upon a charge made by Knowles against Guest, who sued for slander. The Chancellor accepts the editor's declaration in his affidavit that he had no thought of committing a contempt of court or interfering in any way with the course of justice or of prejudicing the defendant at the trial.

If the utterances of members in Parliament, and of lawyers in court are privileged why should not a larger measure of protection be thrown around the utterances of newspapers. A member of Parliament represents, at most, a limited constituency, a newspaper represents as a rule, a much larger constituency and rests under a larger responsibility. A journalist has charge of all the interests of his constituency, and is likely to watch them with more regard for just dealing, because, with the betterment of his constituency, his personal and material interests are correspondingly advanced. His duty is to enlighten the public in regard to matters of which it is their interest and privilege to be well informed. If a member of Parliament can slander, traduce and vilify a private citizen outside of Parliament and without scath; if a lawyer in court can, without reproof or penalty, browbeat, abuse, scandalize and charge a witness in the most offensive manner and words with lying and perjury, surely a moderate discussion of a matter of public interest in a newspaper, dealt with in temperate language, should not come under the penalty of frivilous and vexatious suits, involving in any case expensive litigation and sometimes heavy mulct in damages to reputations in a state of repair beyond the possibility of damage, even by telling the truth. If it is held, as is done as matter of fact, that such treatment of a witness, is not an "interference with the course of justice" or prejudicing one of the parties to a suit, when committed with these express objects in the immediate presence of judge and jury, face to face, on what grounds of consistency can it be claimed that the casual comment of a, possibly, obscure newspaper, which ten to one, the judge and jury may never see or even hear of, be made a star chamber matter. No doubt liberty of the press should be restrained from degenerating into license at the same time the freedom of the press with all its large importance, should not be subjected to vexatious or malicious interference on frivilous grounds.

In respect of utterances in the heat of an election contest especially should encouragement of vexatious charges of libel be witheld. A man that enters a political fight expects to submit to rather vigorous criticism, and he will feel hurt if his importance is ignored in the form of weak criticism, which he would regard as the antithetical equivalent of being damned with faint praise. It is questionable whether a political candidate can be libelled or slandered at all in the heat of feeling engendered in an election fight. No matter what is said against him it is certain that his political opponents, will not be impressed by it. They will be confirmed in their position by the reflection that the half has not been told; as for his friends no matter if the most blighting charges, with confirmation strong as proof of holy writ are made, they will not believe them, so that on the part of friend and foe scandal rolls off him like a drop of water rolls in globular dustiness off the covers of a family Bible.

Seriously, however, newspapers with all their faults, with all their errors of judgment, with all their rare outbreaks of mild malice, if given much freer rein, would give far less cause for real offence, would do far less damage, than would be inflicted upon the public and public interests, upon the progress of the country and upon the development of the best in our civilization, by a too rigorous curtailment of the right to free criticism of actions and actors in matters where the interests of the public are essentially involved.

It is hoped that it will not be contempt of court to regard the petition against the election of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as vexatious.

SHEER HYPOCRISY.

With a simplicity only parallelled by its hypocrisy the Toronto News says:

It is easy for governments in Canada to raise huge corruption funds. It is difficult for Oppositions to raise as much money as is necessary for legitimate expenses. In the old days of Opposition at Ottawa the Liberal party had to be contented with an election fund of from $50,000 to $100,000. Since 1896 the election fund of the Ottawa Government has run from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. It is safe to say, if the accounts published in the United States fully cover the expenditures of the Republican party in the Presidential contest, that an equal, if not greater, sum was used by the Canadian Government in the election of October 26th. There are between eighty and ninety millions of people in the United States. There are between six and six and a half millions of people in Canada.

These statements of alleged fact are mere statement, unsupported by an iota of evidence and a denial of their correctness should be as credible as the assertion, and more so, because it would be in the line of reason and common sense. The assertion that "it is difficult for an Opposition to raise money," is disproved by the size of the Opposition campaign fund available for the use of the Conservatives in the late general election. There is reason to believe that a plentiful share of it came into West and East Peterborough. Of course, no one outside the inner circle knows the amount of the Conservative corruption fund—except perhaps the great corporations contributing. But there is just as much warrant for asserting that it was one or two million dollars as the News has for asserting that the Liberal election fund was the absurd amount it declares it was. Of course, both parties had election funds, which are necessary. But where the attitude of the News becomes the cynicism of hypocrisy is when it assumes that that of the Liberals was a huge corruption fund and that of the Conservatives hardly enough to pay for the printing.

An open and avowed sinner may be credited with courage; but a hypocrite is—a hypocrite.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

New Brunswick Conservatives Abandon All Protests—Railway Commission Taking Active and Energetic Measures — Ottawa Tories to Import a Quebec Candidate—Important Order in the Interests of the Farmers.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—News comes from St. John, N.B., that a Conservative caucus has decided to drop all protests. They feel, like A F McLaren, the ex-member for North Perth, who had the dignity to accept defeat gracefully and to bow to the popular will where it was unmistakeably registered. Mr. McLaren, when asked to protest his election recently said, "I am no protester," and in consequence he stands higher in the public regard than the mongrel pack of sore-heads, who seek to defeat the will of the people by methods of legal chicanery.

The Railway Commission is taking vigorous measures to promote the safety of travel re the railway lines of Canada. One of the new orders just put into effect provides for a daily inspection of electric bells at all highway crossings, and another stipulates that where freight cars are used on the main line passenger trains, they must be equipped with air brakes, steel tires and metal trucks, designed for passenger service. Where these requirements are not complied with, on account of exceptional circumstances, the trains must not be run at more than 35 miles per hour.

Ottawa Liberals are preparing a cross petition against Dr. Chabot, the Conservative candidate against Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The "Tories" are making an effort to induce J H G Bergeron, ex-M.P. for Beauharnois, to contest the Ottawa division in the bye-election, which is anticipated, not from any possibility of a protest against the Premier's election prevailing, but from the fact that Sir Wilfrid will sit for East Quebec, for which he was also elected.

An important order, of special interest to Peterborough, has just been issued, effecting a change in the supervision of meat transportation between the provinces under the Dominion Meat Inspection Act. Up to now the railways have been compelled to refuse any shipment of meat or poultry consigned from one Province to another unless it bore the stamp of a Government inspector. While this was not a serious handicap in connection with the larger establishments, it proved practically prohibitive to the country storekeeper, for he found it difficult to secure the services of a meat inspector. For some time past hundreds of shipments of poultry destined for the Christmas trade have been refused by the railways at various country stations. Much inconvenience and money loss was entailed thereby to the farmers, but the railways under the circumstances had no recourse, for to accept the shipments would have meant liability to the penalty provided by the act. An order in Council just passed permits all shipments of poultry hitherto refused as above to be transported in future.

HOLD FIREMEN'S CONCERT

Examiner Special.

Hastings, Dec. 8.—The Edmonds' Amusement Company, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Quinn, vaudeville artists, have completed a series of concerts in the town hall, which commenced Nov. 26, and following evenings. The entertainment was fairly well patronized.

Rain is very much needed in this locality. Many of the wells in the country are dry, and the farmers have to drive their cattle long distances to water. Fortunately for the people of this town the waters of the Trent are at their disposal, and they have little need to fear from scarcity from that source, although some wells which were never before known to fail, have almost completely dried up.

Some of our citizens are complaining of the excessive taxation for the present year, and are considering the plan of moving for a complete revision of the assessment of the village for the coming year.

A pretty November wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Cuffe, Percy township, when their daughter, Miss Mabel Selina, became the wife of Mr. John B Grant, of Warkworth. The bride looked very pretty in a handsome gown of cream gloria silk trimmed with white chiffon, all-over lace, white applique and satin ribbon, and was given away by her father. The bridesmaid was Miss Eva Cuffe, while Mr. Arthur Robertson supported the groom. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the ceremony being performed within a bower surrounded by a large wedding bell. After the customary congratulations were over the company repaired to the dining room where a bountiful wedding "dejeuner" was served, after which a number of toasts were proposed and heartily responded to by those present.

Miss Lila Drummond, of Keene, has been spending some time visiting in Hastings and vicinity, the guest of Miss Della Humphreys.

Mr. and Mrs. John Beavis spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Jas Stevenson, Jr.

Mrs. Geo. Hormel and son, James, are visiting in Port Hope, the guests at the home of Mrs. Hormel's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Frost, of Peterborough, have moved to Hastings, and are living on Front street.

The special song service in connection with the Methodist church on Sunday evening, was very largely attended. The music by the choir was most highly appreciated. Especially the rendering "Angels of Jesus." The congregation was also favoured by a solo from Mr. Wm. McQuinn, entitled the Holy City." This gentleman proved himself to be a baritone singer of no mean ability. At the service Rev. W. Barrett discussed the subject of the "Modern Dane"

Mr. Louis Kelly visited his parents at Dartford, on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Elmhirst visited at the home of Mr. B. Crowley recently.

Mr. Robinson, of Warkworth, spent Sunday with Mr. Thos. McKee.

Mr. John Pulfer is home after spending some time in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Forsythe are rejoicing over the birth of a son.

Messrs. Hess and Huycke have shipped up-to-date enough fowl to aggregate 10,000 pounds. No doubt the good prices have been an inducement to the farmers to dispose of the birds.

A November wedding of unusual interest was solemnized at the home of Mr. Cardwell, of Asphodel, the principals being Miss Maye Cardwell and Mr. Alexander Leitch. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Frost, of Westwood, pastor of the Methodist church. Mr. and Mrs. Leitch have a large number of friends who wish them "bon voyage" through life.

It is stated that work is likely to commence on this section of the canal early in the new year. The contractor, Mr. McDonald, has been paying the town a visit.

The men who are engaged in taking out logs in Mr. Andrew McGee's woods report that flying squirrels have been seen there of late and have been killed by dogs. These little animals are very scarce in these parts and it was quite a novelty to have one captured.

Miss Carney, of Rochester, has been spending a few days with friends in town.

Mrs. W. H. Purdy, of Huntsville, is home on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dodd. She expects to spend Christmas at her old home.

Miss Kate Hawkins spent two weeks with friends in Burnley.

Mr. and Mrs. Heffernan were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. English, on Sunday.

Mr. W Stevenson, of Harwood, was in town on Tuesday.

The local engineering staff of the Trent Canal, have returned from Burleigh, where they spent the past two months.

Some men in connection with the foundry, have been in Toronto lately installing some new machinery in Johnsons' tannery. This speaks well for Hastings foundry.

Everybody is expecting that some time in the near future the boys of the Fire Brigade will give us a good entertainment. They purpose beginning at once to practice.

At the annual meeting in connection with the cheese factory on Tuesday evening the old officers were again elected for the coming year. Following is the statement for 1908:

JIMMY GRAHAM IS A STARTER IN SIX DAY GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE RACE AT DETROIT

Our old friend Jimmy Graham, of Buffalo, who will be remembered as the comedian of the six day walking match held last spring, is one of the starters in the six day go as you please contest, and was in seventh position at the end of the first day's grind. Bill Davis, the Hamilton Indian, who discovered Tom Longboat, was sixth, and Hoagland's old friend Klubertanz, who has given the Auburn crack some hard heel and toe contests was third. Tom Loeslein, of Erie, Pa., who has challenged Hoagland to a matched race, was ninth. Hoagland could pretty near have walked as far as the leader in the first twelve hours.

The Detroit News say :

Dineen, the eastern runner, who is leading the long-distance men at the armoury in the six days go-as-you-please contest, took 123,806 steps in twelve hours yesterday.

There are 16 laps to each mile, and Dineen covered 75 miles and 2 laps, or a total of 1,202 laps. In five laps he averaged 103 steps to the lap, which brings his total steps up to 123,806.

Dineen is a short man, well built, with a touch of gray in his hair. He has participated in many walking contests, long-distance running matches, and events where endurance pays the biggest part. His pace is steady and his steps seem of equal length every minute of the time he is at work.

The pace he set in the grind at the armoury yesterday was a killing one, and if he can continue that steady gait all week, no one stands a chance at giving him a race.

Prouty, Klubertanz and Feeney and Davis, an Indian runner, stand a good chance of finishing near the top, and it promises to be a pretty contest between them.

Runner.	Miles.	Laps.
Dineen	75	2
Prouty	71	2
Klubertanz	67	15
Feeney	67	2
Collister	65	12
Davis	65	...
Graham	58	8
Ownby	55	4
Loeskein	53	4
Shelton	53	2
Day	52	6
Teagle	51	3
Breckels	46	3
Hegelman	41	5
Hawn	22	3
Harris	18	21

Young and McDonald were the only starters to abandon the race.

TEAM WITH MOST MONEY AND PULL WINS THE STANLEY CUP, SAYS A CRITIC

A recent decision by Trustee Foran, in which he gave a challenging team practically unlimited power in collecting a team to battle for the Stanley Cup, virtually means the relegation of the once famous trophy to the scrap heap. It is no longer a question of local pride and ambition, but a matter of the club that has the most money and the best pull in putting a team on the ice. The Edmonton challenge is a case in point.

Scouts were sent out, offers made to hockey men all over Canada, and the result is the Edmonton team that will contend for the Earl of Derby's famous trophy is almost entirely a new outfit.

This is not written in a spirit of censure so far as the Edmonton club is concerned. It is merely taking advantage of circumstances and in fact is entitled to commendation for its efforts to bring the pewter west, but the conditions are certainly rotten, and the historic old cup now really represents nothing. What a farce would be the world's championship baseball series were such a shifting of players possible. None but bona fide members of the champion teams are permitted to play for the highest honours in the baseball world, and some rule along that line will have to be adopted if the Stanley Cup is to regain its lost prestige. For one thing there should be no hold-over challenges. In this connection the Manitoba Hockey League took a step in the right direction when it arranged a shortened schedule so that its champion team would have opportunity to go after the cup. Another suggestion is that instead of the team holding the cup having to defend it against all comers that champion series be arranged east and west and that the winning teams meet for the Canadian championship and of course the battered old mug.—Manitoba Free Press.

CITY MERCANTILE LEAGUE FORMED WITH FIVE TEAMS

Last night another hockey organization was perfected and it will be known as the Mercantile League. The meeting was held at the G. T. R. freight office on Charlotte street, and was well attended and most enthusiastic. Representatives from the Quakers, B F Ackermans, G.T.R., Auburns and the C.G.E. were present and teams from each of these will be found in the newly-formed Mercantile League.

After the organization was decided upon the following officers were elected, with E V Morphet in the chair:

Hon. Pres.—Hon. J R Stratton.
President—W O Ackerman.
Vice-Pres.—W Hartley.
Sec.-Treas.—E V Morphett.
Executive Committee—T J Carson, C.G.E.; C. Ackerman, of B F Ackerman's; W Shaw, Auburns; F J Heaslip, Quakers; B A Rose, G.T.R.

The Brock street rink has been secured for one night a week and one game will be played each week. The schedule will be drawn up at the next meeting in a few days time.

All City League players of this year are barred.

C.G.E. team is confined to the office only.

All players are eligible to play who are employed by the firm a week preceding the following game.

THE IROQUOIS BRAVES TAKE THREE GAMES FROM THE GRAYS

As was the case with Hutch's team on the previous evening, the reorganized Grays showed marked improvement in their ten pin league fixture at the P. B. C. last night, and though they met with three straight reverses the tail enders were fighting all the way, and with an even break of luck would easily have broken their losing streak in the first game, which the Iroquois eventually won by the small margin of 10 pins. A spare at a critical juncture towards the close would have given the losers the game, but misfortune pursued them and they failed to make the necessary mark.

In the second game, too, they started off like winners, but Sullivan ran into the most miserable luck and again the Indians emerged from the fray with a few pins to the good. In the final game it was Iroquois all the way.

Martin had high single and high total for the evening, while for the losers Perry held high aggregate honours, the high single going to McFadden.

To-night the Midgets and Belmonts will be the opposing teams and a grand struggle should ensue when the teams come together as both their standings in the league depend largely upon the outcome of these games. If the Midgets lose two they will drop out of second place while if they drop the series to the Belmonts the latter will be tied with Iroquois and Pacifics for the position which the Midgets will vacate. A new face may be seen on the Belmonts but the Midgets will have their old line up and they fully anticipate a victory.

The result of last night's games follow:

IROQUOIS:

Adams	136	130	160—426
Stroud	157	125	140—422
Martin	133	170	167—470
	426	425	467—1280

GRAYS:

McFadden	109	157	121—387
Sullivan	146	128	121—366
Perry	142	140	141—423
	396	397	383—1176

IMPORTANT HOCKEY MEETING TO BE HELD TO-NIGHT IN THE ORIENTAL

Much depends upon to-night's hockey meeting at the Oriental Hotel in regard to what Peterborough hockey fans are to expect this season. If there is a large attendance, showing that the citizens want an intermediate team and are willing to support one, the scheme will be gone ahead with; otherwise the outlook will not be very brilliant. It is therefore up to the citizens to turn out in large numbers at to-night's gathering. Nothing yet has been definitely decided and the campaign for the winter will be decided to-night, so that a big attendance is imperative if anything is to be done to provide Peterborough with O.H.A. hockey this season. The meeting is called for eight o'clock sharp. Turn out and help the move along.

THE LEAGUE AVERAGES IN THE BOWLING TOURNAMENT

Secretary Herb. Martin reports that Wareham still leads in the individual averages with 178 for six games, while Pollard, also of the Belmonts, is a good second with 172. Of the players who have taken part in nine games Martin is in the lead, with Ford, of the Bankers, a good second. The figures for the first seven players are as follows:

The Bowling League at the Y.M.C.A. was opened by two games, the Leaders taking two from the M.A.S. and dropping one. The Staff trimmed the Methodists in two out of three games, getting the highest total of the evening. Collings rolled up the highest score of the night, having 420 for three games, his best single being 178. Shirley, Staunton and Pratt also made a fair showing. These games are creating a lot of interest among the "Y's." The scores were as follows:

WRESTLING.

Chicago, Dec. 10 — Fred Beell defeated Charles ("Kid") Cutler in straight falls at the Empire Theatre last evening, taking the first in 12.15 with an arm lock and leg hold and the second in 8.15 with a half-Nelson and leg hold. Americus, as Gus Schoenlein is known, appeared in the preliminary with Charles Posti. He easily defeated Posti, throwing him in straight falls in 5.30 and 7.35.

A big Turk, wearing the national costume of turban, embroidered vest, and baggy pantaloons, created a bit of a sensation on the downtown streets to-day. It was Hassan Abdallah, the Oriental grappler, who meets Cyclone Burns, the English champion. He was accompanied by W. B. Naylor, his manager. The Turk is confident of victory. He certainly looks big enough to break Burns in half, but Englishmen in town wink and say: "You Burns is a mustard pot—a hot 'un."

Burns last night took on a 200-lb. coloured man, who is some wrestler, and flopped him in 50 seconds. He showed unusual speed.—Toronto Star.

* * *

The public will be glad to learn that Peterborough's famous wrestler is making good progress in his practices. It has just been learned that last night he threw one of our local druggists, an eminent wrestler, in 28 minutes. The struggle was intense, but the druggist succumbed at last to a scissors and a half Nelson hold.

STRIKES AND SPARES

By a margin of 175 pins, Joe West and Bill Karrys of London defeated Eddie Sutherland and George Capps of Toronto, on the Brunswick alleys Wednesday night, in a ten-game match for $100 a side, the London boys winning seven out of the ten games and running one, two in the averages, with Bill Karrys leading.

Bill Karrys was the star performer of the night, pulling off some especially hard splits, namely the 4 and 9 and the 4 and 10. Eddie Sutherland also pulled off the 5 and 7 and hung up the high game for the night with 247.

Karrys, with 188 2-5 of an average, had 39 strikes, 47 spares, 12 splits and 7 errors. West averaged 181 2-5 and had 36 strikes, 54 spares, 7 splits and 8 errors, while E. Sutherland averaged 178 1-2, having 39 strikes, 41 spares, 14 splits and 10 errors. George Capps averaged 177 1-5, having 39 strikes, 40 spares, 15 splits and 9 errors.

* * *

Harry Cheetham, who played third base for the Peterborough Baseball team last year and part of this season, is evidently some bowler. On Wednesday, rolling for the Royal Oaks, he hung up a new record for Class C of the Toronto League. The News says: The feature of the night was the rolling of Harry Cheetham, who put in a new record for the league with a 626 count.

SNOWSHOE CLUB MAY BE FORMED IN PETERBORO

With the advent of winter in reality as the past couple of days indicates, the young folk are beginning to talk about skiing, snowshoeing and tobogganing. Snowshoeing has become exceedingly popular during the past few years and it is time now, a local Snowshoe Club was organized. No winter exercise can be any better. It is not too violent, there is little danger of accidents and pure air is always inhaled.

A sociable club, therefore, to promote the popularity of the sport is apparently needed so that no difficulty will be experienced in obtaining company to tramp across the country fields.

* * * *

It is understood that the question of forming a Peterborough Snowshoe Club is being discussed by a number of local young people, and will likely be gone ahead with. Snowshoeing is an ideal pastime for the winter months, and Peterborough offers many advantages in the way of picturesque routes for the tramps. What little snowshoeing has been done has been accomplished by a few little groups of people, but nothing has been done on a large scale and the experiment should prove highly successful. A meeting will likely be held next week to talk over the proposition.

HOCKEY

With Junior and Senior O.H.A. teams a Junior and Senior City League, a Mercantile League and a Church League, did somebody remark that Peterborough wasn't going to have any hockey this season?

If you want to boost hockey in Peterborough, turn out at to-night's organization meeting.

* * * *

Edmonton, Dec. 10 — The Edmonton hockey team will leave for the East to prepare for their games with the Montreal Wanderers for the Stanley Cup at 9 o'clock on December 16th. They will go by Canadian Northern via the Burlington Route, branching south through St. Paul and Chicago at Winnipeg.

Steve Vair is not showing up as well as expected, and if Joe Hall is secured he will be carried as spare man.

* * *

Brantford Expositor: Taking everything into consideration the team looks pretty good all round. A lot depends on Miller this year. He is expected to return here a developed player. He showed big improvement last year, and that is the reason he has been secured again. Marks, Ward and MacDonald speak for themselves. There are no better in the game.

* * *

Lindsay, Peterborough, Cobourg and Belleville will probably form a district in the intermediate series of the O.H.A. The hockey enthusiasts can bank on seeing some interesting games the coming season. According to the Intelligencer, Belleville is going to be strong this year, and the Examiner states that many of the old timers who helped to win glory and renown for the electric city will turn out this year and will figure on the intermediate team. —Lindsay Post.

* * * *

Galt Bankers have elected these officers: Pres., H. W. D. Browne; Vice-Pres., H. McKean; Sec.-Treas., C. F. Bourne; Manager, W. C. Glennie; Captain, W. L. Gilliland. The team will play independent hockey.

* * *

Jack Eames, of Niagara Falls, has received the appointment of coach of the Hanover County, Virginia, hockey team.

* * *

* * *

The Cornwall Hockey Club are hopeful that a decent league will be organized in this end of the province ere long. They are very much disappointed over their throw-down by the E. C. H. A., and Montreal's return to the amateur camp. The club's annual meeting will be held on Friday, December 11th.

* * *

The first hockey practice of the season took place last night at Stratford. Only three men were out on the ice, Ramsay Rankin, Jim Preston and "Sky" Easson. The ice was good, although a little rough in spots.

* * * *

It is not improbable Jack Williams, the Rugby half-back, will be seen at cover-point for Cliffsides in the Interprovincial League. It was first given out Jack would play with Ottawa II.'s, but later word has him in a Cliffside uniform.

* * * *

* * * *

Stratford Beacon: Easson and Rankin in particular did some good, hard work last night. A naughty little bird whispered that Ramsay is swinging into shape for a position on the 'Varsity team after Christmas in the event of his going to college. We need him here worse than the 'Varsity club, and it is to be hoped that the big fellow will be seen on the local line-up again this year.

* * * *

Kingston Whig: It is understood that there may be another junior team from the city in the O.H.A. series, besides the 14th team. St. George's club have been considering the proposition of again entering a team. Last season the St. George's did good work, winning out this section. If the church boys do enter a team, it will take a number of good players away from the 14th bunch.

* * * *

When asked whether Westmount was contemplating joining any such league, as suggested from Brockville, H H M Andrews, president of the club, stated emphatically that so far as this club was concerned there was nothing in the story.

RUNNING.

New York, Dec. 10 — Longboat's defeat by Percy Smallwood in Philadelphia has caused much comment here, and there is a suspicion that he is "pulling" his races to get big odds in the betting. Smallwood is a "small potato" beside Dorando and Shrubb, who are on the list for races with the Indian.

Not only was Longboat beaten, but the time of the ten mile race was ridiculously slow. When Hayes and Dorando ran at Madison Square Garden they averaged better than six minutes to the mile for the first ten miles of the race, and they had sixteen miles more to cover. As a matter of fact, Longboat's performance was so poor compared with the other running feats that it looks fishy.

TERCENTENARY OF JOHN MILTON

Three Hundredth Anniversary of England's Blind Poet Celebrated.

London, Dec. 11 — Wednesday was the three hundredth anniversary of John Milton's birth. The celebration commenced with a notable gathering in the Theatre of the British Academy. Those who assembled include men most prominent in art, science and literature and the learned professions.

The features of the evening were the reciting of a poem of homage, specially written by George Meredith, the novelist and an oration by Dr. A W. Ward, of Cambridge, who presided. Among the other notable contributions to this event is the ode read at the memorial service. It was written by Lawrence Binyon, beginning:

Soul of England, dost thou sleep,
Lulled or dulled, thy mighty youth forgotten?
Of the world's wine hast thou drunk too deep?
Hast thou sown more than thy hands can reap?
Turn again thine ear
To that song severe,
In thine hour of storm and war begotten!

Here in towered London's throng,
In her streets, with Time's new murmur seething,
Milton pacing mused his haughty song.
Here he sleeps out feud and fret and wrong.
Nay, that spirit august
Tramples death's low dust,
Still for us is kindled, burning, breathing.

LAY ON, MACDUFF

I have a hen, she hath a name—
Macduff;
She's both prolific, musical and tough.
The Yanks have fixed, she heard the neighbours say,
Two hundred eggs a year as smallest of her lay.
"I'll lay no more," she cackled in a huff,
Until the rooster roared: "Lay on!
Macduff."
Robert the Bruce he knew not where to turn—
His triumph came at bloody Bannockburn.
Eat wheat, O hen! and oyster shell and bone,
And be a credit to the Northern zone.
Be patriotic! Show them you're the stuff;
See, yonder is the stack— Lay on!
Macduff.
Great Britain, by, for all your produce begs;
Perhaps the King himself may eat your eggs.
Stick to your colours like a little hen,
We'll stand the racket if the Yankees ken.
"Hence to the stack," he cried, "lay on! Macduff;
And cursed be he who first shall cry enough."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The senior members of the Y. M. C. A. are requested to be present at the gym. on Monday evening when a track team will be organised. Mr. Collings is looking after the members in the athletic department and a fine class is the result. All kinds of track sports will be taken up, and a fast team should be developed in the course of time.

The Social Committee of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a reception this evening for the various church organizations

CURLING.

The Peterborough Curling Bonspiel will be held on Jan 12th. It was at first decided to hold it on Jan. 18th, but this date was found to conflict with Kingston and hence the change.

HURTUBISE TO MEET CYCLONE BURNS TO-NIGHT

Gene Hurtubise will be Cyclone Burns' opponent in the match at the Riverdale Rink in Toronto to-night instead of Hassan Abdallah. The Turk, while walking to the station in Montreal the other night to leave for Toronto, slipped and fell on the icy pavement, injuring his shoulder so severely that the doctors called in advised him to remain out of the game until he recovers somewhat from his injuries. The Toronto management decided to ask Hurtubise to take his place and the local grappler accepted the offer and will go on to-night against Burns. The latter is said to be some wrestler, but Gene should hold his own with him.

TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY LEAGUE ORGANIZED

The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League was held in Havelock a few days ago. A silver cup has been donated for the champions of the league.

The following officers were then elected for the coming season:

Hon Vice-President—Jas. Thompson, Havelock.

President—R. Fulcher, Marmora.

Secy-Treasurer — T. E. Dineen, Havelock.

Executive Committee—T. Pearce, Norwood; S. M. Quackenbush, Warkworth; Coughlan, Hastings; B. Connors, Madoc; H. Andrews, Havelock; H. C. Wiggins, Marmora; W. Whitty Stirling, and a representative to be supplied from Keene.

The application of the Rough Riders, of Peterborough, for admission to the league was thrown out.

BASKET-BALL.

On Tuesday evening, December 15th, the local Y.M.C.A. intermediate basketball team will run up against a team from Peterborough Y.M.C.A. in the local gymnasium. A good game should result as the Lindsay boys are no slouches at the game. They are practicing faithfully and if they don't trim the fast Peterborough team when they meet it will not be their fault. The seating capacity is limited to sixty, so all wishing to see the game should get their tickets at once before they are all gone.—Lindsay Post.

* * *

The Peterborough Y.M.C.A. have a couple of men on the sick list, and will not be able to send their team to Toronto on Tuesday, Dec. 15th. The management of West End, however, will have the London team down instead, and as they are one of Canada's fastest teams, it will be a fast game.
—Toronto Star.

RUGBY

Twenty dollars in the "hole."

It isn't very nice to be in that shape.

But the Lindsay Rugby team, junior champions of the O.H.A., are twenty bucks to the bad, and where the money is to come from is the question now confronting the management.

All season the team has been running under a big expense and money coming but slowly, and now it looks as if the over-worked management would have to dig into their own little hoards to save the rep. of the club.

Too bad, isn't it?

APPRECIATION OF THEIR SYMPATHY

Rev. W. M. MacKay and Mrs. Hall, of Harriston, Thank Local Citizens.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir: Kindly permit me through your valuable paper to express to the kind people of Peterborough the sincere thanks of Mrs Hall and myself for the tender sympathy so generously expressed to us both in our dark midnight hours of gloom. Plunged so suddenly and so unexpectedly into the deep valley of bereavement we can but feebly express our appreciation of the many messages of sympathy which have come to us from all over Canada. The childlike nature, the innate kindly disposition, the love of the beautiful, the good and the true which combined to endear our loved one to her many friends in Peterborough, had also won the hearts of the people of Harriston and her sudden death has plunged our town and neighbourhood into bitter mourning, and has left two aching hearts which eternity alone can heal. Let me assure all our kind Peterborough friends of her sincere love and respect for them, and while all that is mortal remains by our side as the desire of her fond mother, may her friends everywhere remember that her esteem for them all was always sincere and abiding.

Yours very sincerely,
W. M. MACKAY,

The Farmer's Wife Should Not Be Placed In Position Of A Dependent

From The Canadian Dairyman.

Were I to point to a weak spot in our farm life it would be, "lack of business methods in our farm economy." Many farmers can drive a sharp bargain, are close buyers and sell their products at top prices, but are sadly amiss in observing business methods, and none more so than in relation to the wife's apportionment for funds for her private purse.

Is she not worthy of some consideration in this matter? She, who so ably and unselfishly helps her husband to lift the mortgage, perhaps assists to build and furnish the new home or make other necessary improvements from the funds, perchance she may have brought with her from her father's home. These are handed over without reserve, it may be, with no arrangement for her future spending money but the good will of her husband. This arrangement, if we can call it such, may be very satisfactory where the true position of the married relation is taken into consideration,—that of a life-partnership, —willing to share equally in its joys and sorrows and the pocketbook open to each.

Now, while this often satisfactorily prevails, yet the tendency of the husband will be to control the funds and if so the wife must take the humiliating position of asking for funds, even should the husband be considerate or even indulgent. This places her in a secondary position when, by rights, she is the equal, if not the superior, (I use the word advisedly), to the man. There may be call for this attitude, but, generally speaking, the wife is as much a part of the farm economy as the man, and should be given her true position.

TWO GOOD PLANS TO FOLLOW

Every farmer's wife should have her own spending money for household and personal uses, and there are two sources from whence this income may be derived. Firstly, by allowance. All the receipts from sales of farm produce, should go into one common account, and the wife draw an allowance, in keeping with the circumstances, weekly or monthly, as necessity and conditions warrant; or, secondly, she should have all the proceeds derived from sales of poultry, eggs, small fruit and butter (made at the season when the milk does not go to the creamery or cheesery.) I must confess that I like the latter system the best and when rightly managed it should give a good return. I am conversant with homes where this system is carried out very successfully and the wife always has a few dimes, yes, and dollars, too, to lend to her husband when his wallet becomes empty.

I am also aware of several cases where the women of the farm house have the returns from a good sized orchard for their spending money. As far as I have been able to learn, the "allowance" custom prevails among business men, but where all household supplies have to be purchased, and where there is no source of revenue for the women folks, it no doubt is the best system. The conditions of farm life are so different that it is impossible to lay down any one system that may be suited to all its phases and conditions. Such being the case, the farmer and his wife must be a law unto themselves in matters pertaining to finance. In closing, I would say, let every true husband see that his wife, yea, and daughter, too, are in some measure provided with funds they may call their own, having feeling to use them without feeling that they are "dependents," (to use this word in its mildest sense.)

In nine cases out of ten these funds will be well expended, possibly some of it will go for papers, magazines, books, music, etc.; home will be made more attractive and cheery, farm life will be elevated and our boys and girls will be loth to leave the fireside of the "old home," consequently more will stay with us on the farm rather than go to eke out an existence in the cities on a miserable pittance of a salary. Then farm life and Canadian agriculture will receive an uplift that will be marked in the annals of history.

The Keeping Of Poultry In Winter; December Most Important Month

From The Canadian Dairyman.

December is the most important month in many respects to the poultry-keeper. If eggs are to be expected in January and throughout the winter, regular and intelligent care must be given to the fowl from now on and, in fact, those who began a month ago to give their hens proper conditions for laying, are most likely to get the best egg harvest. Proper conditions include the whole situation, which may be divided into three parts: viz., the poultry house, the fowl, and feeding.

The house should be in thorough order in every respect. The windows should be sound and scrupulously clean. This is very necessary. The days are now very short. At the earliest, the fowl cannot see to eat before seven a.m. and after four p.m. at the latest. This means a period of fifteen hours between the last meal of the day and the first of the next, which shows the need of all the light that can possibly be given. In cities and towns this long gap between supper and breakfast is shortened by giving a fourth meal between eight and nine o'clock at night by electric light, and, in some cases, the result has been very encouraging and successful. This can be done by lamp light but it takes from half to three-quarters of an hour each night, which may not be considered worth while unless large flocks are kept.

The fowls should be healthy, in good condition, and the pullets mature. There is a wide difference of opinion about the number of layers that should be kept in each flock or pen. Personally, I think twenty-five or thirty is plenty for each pen. One expert says: "When you think you have room for twenty layers only keep ten." This is good advice. If you have to lessen the number of fowl kept, begin by removing all the spare males, young and old, keeping only those needed for breeding next spring. Next remove all hens over two years of age, except if the breed kept is Leghorn or any of the Mediterranean class, when they may be kept until three years of age. After the old hens, remove the very young pullets. This should leave only serviceable birds that, with proper food, should return eggs in profitable quantities.

The layers should be fed three times a day, twice with grain and once with soft food. Give the soft food whenever most convenient. Many breeders give it the first meal of the day, others at noon and others again, at night. There are arguments in favor of each method, so that, as far as now known, it is best to let convenience decide the point. Wheat and oats make a good grain ration—half of each. To this may be added a small quantity of whole corn, say one part to ten of wheat and oats. If white birds are kept and are used for exhibition do not add corn—it makes the plumage creamy. The soft feed may be made up of five parts bran, four parts whole grain provender and one part corn-meal, but omit the corn-meal if white birds are kept. This covers the main feeding. In addition, there should be in each pen, hoppers or boxes containing grit and oyster shell. Cabbages, mangels, beets, or other green food should be fed in reasonable quantities.

For stimulating the egg supply, green bone may be given three times a week. Feed this very lightly. If it is not convenient to feed green bone, use beef scraps or meat-meal. This may be mixed in the soft food. It is far better to feed too little, say about a tablespoon to each fifteen fowl. It is far better to feed too little of either green bone or meat-meal than too much.

AN OPEN LETTER

Results so Surprising That They Seem Marvelous Are Common to Mi-o-na the One Dependable Stomach Remedy.

Mrs. J. A. Pillow, of North street, Gananoque, Ont., says: "Mi-o-na is worth its weight in gold for quickly and permanently curing dyspepsia. I became so weak that I could not leave my bed. There was a constant burning in my stomach, I would belch up gas every few minutes and could eat but very little, as the food would quickly ferment and make gas that caused a serious depression of the heart. Perspiration would break out all over my body, I would become so weak that I could not stir and would often fall on the floor in a helpless state. The pains in my stomach were terrible. I could find no position in which to sit or lie without suffering, and I was so nervous that the least noise affected me. Headaches were constant. I would become dizzy and spots would appear before my eyes. I had no ambition to get around and everything seemed to tire me. The first box of Mi-o-na gave me more relief than anything I had previously tried. The second box of Mi-o-na cured me. I am well and strong and I have not had an hour's suffering since. I will always feel grateful to Mi-o-na for the cure given me and glad to recommend."

In the face of such evidence it is easy to understand why Wm. Madill feels assured in saying to you, money back if Mi-o-na fails to relieve either trivial or serious stomach trouble.

CHATS ABOUT FAMOUS BOOKS AND THEIR AUTHORS

By F. M. D.

There are many who look upon the teaching of History and Biography, especially, Biography, as altogether unnecessary in the curricula of modern education. They say that there is no good to be obtained from steeping the young idea in the annals of the past, and stoutly deny that such studies imbue beings with loftier ideals, either in morals or patriotism.

The Historian More Useful Than the Poet

To the plain, matter-of-fact man such arguments do not appeal with cogent force, for, whence would our incentive to patriotism or to higher living get its food, were it not from the pabulum obtained from the pages of the past?

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our own sublime,
And departing leave behind us,
Footprints in the sands of time."

The historian, in fact, although he may not possess a tithe of his genius, is a greater benefactor to the world than any poet, for the latter, is the illumiher of hearts alone, whilst the former lights up past centuries for the observation and instruction of all mankind. Poetry will not dissipate error; History undoubtedly will, for by its recital of events mankind will be taught to avoid the mistakes that have caused conflict and confusion in days gone by.

Opponents of History

But one great argument adduced by opponents of the teaching of history, is that it is not to be depended on, as the records of the past are so overlaid with exaggerations and downright falsehoods that it is impossible to gain a credible record of even one reign. We all know that there is a great amount of truth in this contention. One has only to ask two eye witnesses of any event one day old for their account of the occurrence, and they will be pretty sure to err in the recounting of one or two essential or unessential details. If people will differ on events of a day, how much more is it likely that happenings of centuries past which have been subjected to the pruning and picking of this and that historian, will be likely to be distorted? Men for instance, with an imaginative turn of mind, like Macaulay, or a prejudiced one like Hume, no matter how marvelous their erudition, are not trustworthy historians, and are to be read rather for the excellence of their style than for any solid instruction to be obtained from their pages.

But, it would be absurd for anyone to assume that all history is wrong, because certain cock-and-bull stories have been unearthed in the pages of this or that writer, placed there, either through carelessness, or deliberate misrepresentation. Nothing is surer than that we possess honest historians, who in their study of the state archives have taken history as they found it, and have not coloured it to suit their own inclinations.

Biography not Always Correct

Biography is much in the same case as History, and the example of Sir Philip Sidney is a very good instance to bear out what has just been stated. In regard to all the more important points of his career, there is unanimity of opinion. Hume says of him: "This person is described by the writers of that age as the most perfect model of an accomplished gentleman that could be formed even by the wanton imagination of poetry or fiction—virtuous conduct, polite conversation, heroic valour, and elegant erudition, all concurred to render him the ornament and delight of the English court; and as the credit which he possessed with the Queen and the Earl of Leicester was wholly employed in the encouragement of genius and literature, his praises have been transmitted with advantage to posterity. No person was so low as not to become the object of his humanity."

Differences of Statement

Against his fame no historian has used a venomed pen. Amid a galaxy of figures, brilliant in their parts, and magnificent in their courtliness, Sir Philip Sidney stands pre-eminent. Yet, in the minor details of his career there are certain divergences of opinion. Some, for instance, affect to doubt altogether the well-known tale of his gift of water to the dying soldier at Zutphen. Others firmly believe it and compare him with King David, St. Thomas Aquinas and Alexander the Great, who are all credited with deeds of similar magnanimity. One writer states that Elizabeth called him "the jewel of her dominions," another "one of the jewels of my crown." Collier states that he lost his life through lending his armour except his breast plate to an old general, too lightly equipped for battle. Others say that in a spirit of romantic chivalry he cast it away because he saw his commander wore none. It is in minor details such as these that historians generally differ.

Sidney's Career

Sir Philip Sidney was the son of Sir Henry Sidney and Mary Dudley, sister of the Earl of Leicester. Bred in the atmosphere of the court he was sent at the age of 18 on a continental tour, and narrowly escaped being a victim at Paris, in the uprising against the Huguenots. The events of his short life are well told. In his 23rd year he was sent on an embassy to the Emperor Rudolph II. of Germany. Owing to the antagonism of the Cecil family, who looked askance at men of rising talent, it was long before he could gain recognition, but he at last obtained the Government of Flushing. This and the embassage to Germany comprised his public appointments. In the year following his appointment to the Government of Flushing he was killed at Zutphen. Sidney was in his 32nd year at the time of his death. His claims to a place in literature are high. Space does not permit of any extracts from his works, but his "Apologie for Poetrie," and several of his lyrics have been and still are deservedly admired.

INFORMATION COLLECTED BY THE INDIAN AGENT ABOUT LIFE ON LOCAL RESERVES

THE RED MEN'S PROGRESS

The annual report of the Department of Indian Affairs for the year ending March 31, 1908, issued by the Dominion Government gives some interesting statistics regarding the Indians on the Hiawatha and Chemong Reserves. The report was submitted by Mr. Wm. McFarlane, Indian Agent, and is as follows:

Rice Lake Band

The Rice Lake reserve is located on the north shore of Rice lake, in the township of Otonabee, county of Peterborough. It contains about 1,850 acres, of which about 800 is cleared: 130 acres of this is under lease to white tenants, while the locatees cultivate the remainder of said cleared land.

Population.—The total population shown by the present census is 92.

Health and Sanitation.—During the past year there has been very little sickness on the reserve.

Occupations.—A few of the young men work in the lumber camps, while others work their locations and do exceptionally well trapping in the spring, also hunting in the fall and acting as guides for the tourists on the lake. A few gather wild rice also.

Buildings.—All the buildings are of log and frame and very well kept. The church and grounds are very neat.

Stock.—The members of this band have several good horses and milch cows, also hogs and poultry.

Farm Implements.—Those who farm have all the modern machinery.

Education.—They have a very bright, cosy little school-house, where the children attend school with the white children, and I believe are making splendid progress in their studies.

Temperance and Morality.—These Indians are well behaved and law-abiding; some of them will have liquor whenever it can be had, but the majority, I think, are temperate.

Mud Lake Band.

This reserve is located on the shore of Mud lake, in the township of Smith, county of Peterborough. It contains about 2,000 acres, of which a little over 300 acres is cleared.

Population.—The total population shown by the present census is 191.

Health and Sanitation.—Some of the homes are very clean and well kept. They have had very little sickness during the year.

Occupations.—Some engage in farming or as farm help; others work in the lumber camps in winter and spend the summer rowing tourists on the lakes. Some of them do remarkably well trapping and hunting.

Buildings.—The buildings are kept in very good repair. With the exception of the hall and church, they are all of log and frame.

Stock.—These Indians have quite a number of horses and milch cows, also hogs and poultry.

Farm Implements.—Those who farm here have all the modern machinery.

Education.—The children who attend school regularly, are making very fair progress. The teacher, Mr. McCue, takes a very great interest in his pupils.

Temperance and Morality.—There are a few of these Indians who indulge in strong drink whenever it can be had; but the majority of them are very temperate and moral.

PREVENTION OF THE WHITE PLAGUE

The prevention of Consumption and its cure in the early stages is a matter of fresh air and nourishment, but to secure nourishment you must have appetite, and nothing is better known to medical science to stimulate and invigorate the system than the active principles of COD LIVER OIL—the only drawback has been that it has hitherto been impossible to separate the really valuable elements of cods' livers from the nauseous oil or grease, which fact has largely offset the good derived from the alkaloids or active principles contained in the OIL.

"BRICK'S TASTELESS" is a preparation of the valuable alkaloids or active principles separated from the grease and combined with Phosphorous in the form of the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, the nutritious Liquid Extract of Malt, and the Bronchial Tonic and Sedative Fluid Extract of Wild Cherry Bark.

In all cases of wasting diseases or an enervated condition of the system immediate improvement and eventual cure follow its use.

is put up in eight (8) ounce bottles, retail price fifty (50) cents; and in twenty (20) ounce bottles, retail price one (1) dollar.

The pair of rogues did their work well and quietly, so quietly that nothing of it would be known were it not that they quarreled later on over the spoils of this and other transactions, and Mme. Mantis in the witness box at Lille used her memory and her tongue freely. "The plan now was to get rid of the young lady," she said plainly. "Pharos feared her power over my lady and that my lady might leave her all the money. Pharos hated the young lady because she would have nothing to say to him and told him plainly that she thought him a charlatan. She had courage, yes! But if she would have joined in with him—why, then, into the streets with me! I knew that well enough, and Pharos knew I knew it. So I hated her, too, fearing that some day she and he would make up their differences, and I—that for me! Yes, that was how we were, M. le President." Her lucid exposition elicited a polite compliment from M. le President, and we also are obliged to her.

But Sophy was heedless. She showed afterward that she could fight well for what she loved well and that with her an eager heart made a strong hand. Her heart was not in this fight. The revelation of mad Lady Meg's true motive for taking her up may well have damped a gratitude otherwise becoming in Sophy Grouch transmuted to Sophie de Gruche. Yet the gratitude remained. She fought for Lady Meg—for her sanity and some return of sanity in her proceedings. In so fighting she fought against herself, for Lady Meg was very mad now. For herself she did not fight. Her heart and her thoughts were elsewhere. The schemes in the Rue de Grenelle occupied her hardly more than the clash of principles, the efforts of a falling dynasty, the struggles of rising freedom, the stir and seething of the great city and the critical times in which she lived.

They left the two behind sipping beer.

For she was young, and the lord of youth had come to visit her in his shower of golden promise. The days were marked for her no more by the fawning advances or the spiteful insinuations of Pharos than by the heroics of an uneasy emperor or the ingenious experiments in reconciling contradictions wherein his ministers were engaged. For her the days lived or lived not as she met or failed to meet Casimir de Savres. It was the season of her first love. Yet, with all its joy, the shadow of doubt is over it it seems not perfect. The delight is in receiving, not in giving. His letters to her, full of reminiscences of their meetings and talks, are shaded with doubt and eloquent of insecurity. She was no more than a girl in years, but in some ways her mind was precociously developed—her ambition was spreading its still growing wings. Casimir's constant tone of deference, almost of adulation, marks in part the man, in part the convention in which he had been bred, but it marks, too, the suppliant. To the last he is the wooer, not the lover, and at the end of his ecstasy lies the risk of despair. For her part, she often speaks of him afterward and always with the tenderest affection. She never ceased to carry with her wherever she went the bundle of his letters, tied with a scrap of ribbon and inscribed with a date. But there is one reference worthy of note to her innermost sentiments toward him, to the true state of her heart as she came to realise it by and by. "I loved him, but I hadn't grown into my feelings," she says. Brief and almost accidental as the utterance is, it is full of significance, but its light is thrown back. It is the statement of how she came to know how she had been toward him, not of how in those happy days she seemed to herself to be.

He knew about Grouch. He had been told by a copious superfluity of female friendliness, by Lady Meg, cloaking suspicious malignity under specious penitence; by Mme. Mantis with impertinent and intrusive archness; by Marie Zerkovitch in the sheer impossibility of containing within herself any secret which had the bad fortune to be intrusted to her. Sophy's own confession, made with incredible difficulty, she hated the name so, fell flat and was greeted with a laugh of mockery.

It happened at the Calvaire at Fontainebleau, whither they had made a day's and night's excursion under the escort of Marie Zerkovitch and a student friend of hers from the Quartier Latin. These two they had left behind sipping beer at a restaurant facing the chateau. On the eminence which commands the white little town dropped amid the old forest, over against the red roofs of the palace vying in richness with the turning leaves, in sight of a view in its own kind unsurpassed, in its own charm unequaled, Sophy broke the brutal truth which was to end the infatuation of the head of a house old as St. Louis.

"It's bad to pronounce, is it?" asked Casimir, smiling and touching her hand. "Ah, well, good or bad. I couldn't pronounce it, so to me it is nothing."

"They'd all say it was terrible—a mesalliance."

"I fear only one voice on earth saying that."

"And the fraud I am—De Gruche!" She caught his hand tightly. Never before had it occurred to her to defend or to excuse the transparent fiction.

"I know stars fall," he said, with his pretty gravity, not too grave. "I wish that they may rise to their own height again and I rise with them."

He caught her round the waist.

The sun sank behind the horizon. A gentle afterglow of salmon pink rested over the palace and city; the forest turned to a frame of smoky, brownish black. Casimir waved a hand toward it and laughed merrily.

"Before we were it was; after we are it shall be! I sound as old as Scripture! It has seen old masters and great mistresses! Saving the proprieties, weren't you Montespan or Pompadour?"

"De la Valliere?" she laughed. "Or Maintenon?"

"For good or evil, neither! Do I hurt you?"

"No; you make me think, though," answered Sophy. "Why?"

"They niggled at virtue or at vice. You don't niggle! Neither did Montespan nor Pompadour."

"And so I am to be—Marquise de"—

"Higher, higher!" he laughed. "Mme. la Marechale"—

"It is war, then—soon—you think?" She turned to him with a sudden tension.

He pointed a Frenchman's eloquent forefinger to the dark mass of the chateau, whose chimneys rose now like gloomy interrogation marks to an unresponsive, darkened sky. "He is there now—the emperor! Perhaps he walks in his garden by the round pond—thinking, dreaming, balancing."

"Throwing balls in the air, as conjurors do?"

"Yes, my star."

"And if he misses the first?"

"He'll seek applause by the second. And the second, I think, would be war."

"And you would go?"

"To what other end do I love the lady of the red star—alas, I can't see it—save to bring her glory?"

"That's French," said Sophy, with a laugh. "Wouldn't you rather stay with me and be happy?"

"Who speaks to me?" he cried, springing to his feet. "Not you!"

"No, no," she answered. "I have no fear! What is it, Casimir, that drives us on?"

"Drives us on! You! You, too?"

"It's not a woman's part, is it?"

He caught her round the waist, and she allowed his clasp, but she grew pale, yet smiled again softly.

"If all life were an evening at Fontainebleau—a fine evening at Fontainebleau!" she murmured in the low clearness which marked her voice.

"Mightn't it be?"

"With war? And with what drives us on?"

He sighed, and his sigh puzzled her.

"Oh, well," she cried, "at least you know I'm Sophy Grouch, and my father was as mean as the man who opens your lodge gate."

The sky had gone a blue black. A single star somberly announced the coming pageant.

"And his daughter high as the hopes that beckon me to my career!"

"You've a wonderful way of talking," smiled Sophy Grouch—simple Essex in contact with Paris at that instant.

"You'll be my wife, Sophie?"

"I don't think Lady Meg will keep me long. Pharos is working hard, so Marie Zerkovitch declares. I should bring you a dot of 2,500 francs!"

"Do you love me?"

The old question rang clear in the still air. Who has not heard it of women or uttered it of men? Often so easy, sometimes so hard. When all is right save one thing, or when all is wrong save one thing, then it is hard to answer and may have been hard to ask. With Casimir there was no doubt save the doubt of the answer. Sophy stood poised on a hesitation. The present seemed perfect. Only an unknown future cried to her through the falling night.

"I'll win glory for you!" he cried. "The emperor will fight!"

"You're no emperor's man!" she mocked.

"Yes, while he means France. I'm for anybody who means France." For a moment serious, the next he kissed her hand merrily. "Or for anybody who'll give me a wreath, a medal, a toy to bring home to her I love."

"You're very fascinating," Sophy confessed.

It was not the word. Casimir fell from his exaltation. "It's not love, that of yours," he said.

"No—I don't know. You might make it love. Oh, how I talk beyond my rights!"

"Beyond your rights? Impossible! May I go on trying?"

He saw Sophy's smile dimly through the gloom. From it he glanced to the dying gleam of the white houses dropped among the trees, to the dull mass of the ancient home of history and kings. But back he came to the living, elusive, half seen smile.

"Can you stop?" said Sophy.

He raised his hat from his head and stooped to kiss her hand.

"Nor would nor could," said he—"in the warmth of life or the cold hour of death!"

"No, no! If you die, it's gloriously!" The hour carried her away. "Casimir, I wish I were sure!"

The spirit of his race filled his reply. "You want to be dull?"

"No—I—I—I want you to kiss my cheek!"

"May I salute the star?"

"But it's no promise!"

"It's better."

"My dear, I—I'm very fond of you."

"That's all?"

...ough for tonight. What's he thinking of down there?"

"The emperor? I'm not so much as sure he's there really. Somebody said he had started for St. Cloud this morning."

"Pretend he's there!"

"Then, of anything except how many men die for what he wants."

"Or of how many women weep?"

Her reply set a new light to his passion. "You'd weep?" he cried.

"Oh, I suppose so!" The answer was half a laugh, half a sob.

"But not too much! No more than the slightest dimness to the glowing star!"

Sophy laughed in a tremulous key. Her body shook. She laid her hands in his. "No more, no more! Surely Marie and the student are bored? Isn't it supper time? Oh, Casimir, if I were worthy, if I were sure! What's ahead of us? Must we go back? Tonight, up here, it all seems so simple! Does he mean war? He down there? And you'll fight!" She looked at him for an instant. He was close to her. She thrust him away from her. "Don't fight thinking of me," she said.

"How otherwise?" he asked.

She tossed her head impatiently. "I don't know—but—but Pharos makes me afraid. He—he says that things I love die."

The young soldier laughed. "That leaves him pretty safe," said he.

She put her arm through his, and they walked down. It had been a night to be forgotten only when all is. Yet she went from him unpledged.

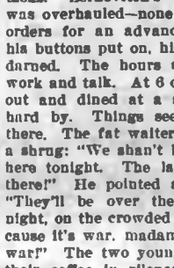
Chapter Eight

THAT feverish month of July—fitting climax to the scorching arid summer of 1870—had run full half its course. Madness had stricken the rulers of France. To avoid danger they rushed on destruction. Gay madness spread through the veins of Paris. Perverse always, Lady Meg Duddington chose this moment for coming back to her senses, or, at least, for abandoning the particular form of insanity to which she had devoted the last five years.

One afternoon she called her witch and her wizard. "You're a pair of quacks, and I've been an old fool," she said composedly, sitting straight up in her high backed chair. She flung a couple of thousand franc notes across the table. "You can go," she ended, with contemptuous brevity. Mantis' evil temper broke out, "She has done this, the malign one!" Pharos was wiser. He had not done badly out of Lady Meg, and madness such as hers is apt to be recurrent. His farewell was gentle, his exit not ungraceful, yet he, too, prayed her to beware of a certain influence. "Stuff! You don't know what you're talking about!" Lady Meg jerked out and pointed with her finger to the door.

Early on the morning of Sunday, the 17th, having received word through Lady Meg's maid that her presence was not commanded in the Rue de Grenelle, Sophy slipped around to the Rue du Bac and broke in on Marie Zerkovitch, radiant with her great news and imploring her friend to celebrate it by a day in the country.

"It means that dear old Lady Meg will be what she used to be to me!" she cried. "We shall go back to England.



"You're a pair of quacks."

I expect, and—I wonder what that will be like!"

Her face grew suddenly thoughtful. Back to England! How would that suit Sophie de Gruche? And what was to happen about Casimir de Savres? The period of her long, sweed indecision was threatened with a forced conclusion.

Marie Zerkovitch was preoccupied against both her friend's joy and her friend's perplexity. Great affairs touched her at home. There would be war, she said, certainly war. Today the senate went to St. Cloud to see the emperor. Zerkovitch had started thither already on the track of news. The news in the near future would certainly be war, and Zerkovitch would follow the armies, still on the track of news. "He went before, in the war of sixty-six," she said, her lips trembling, "and he all but died of fever. That kills the correspondents just as much as the soldiers. Ah, it is so dangerous, Sophie—and so terrible to be left behind alone! I don't know what I shall do! My husband wants me to go home. He doesn't believe the French will win, and he fears trouble for those who stay here." She looked at last at Sophy's clouded face. "Ah, and your Casimir—he will be at the front!"

"Yes, Casimir will be at the front," said Sophy, a ring of excitement hardly suppressed in her voice.

"If he should be killed!" murmured Marie, throwing her arms out in a gesture of lamentation.

"You bird of ill omen! He'll come back covered with glory."

The two spent a quiet day together, Sophy helping Marie in her homely tasks. Zerkovitch's campaigning kit was overhauled—none knew how soon orders for an advance might come—his buttons put on, his thick stockings darned. The hours slipped away in work and talk. At 6 o'clock they went out and dined at a small restaurant hard by. Things seemed very quiet there. The fat waiter told them, with a shrug: "We shan't have much noise here tonight. The lads will be over there!" He pointed across the river. "They'll be over there most of the night, on the crowded boulevards. Because it's war, madame. Oh, yes, it's war!" The two young women sipped their coffee in silence. "As a lad I saw 1830. I was out in the streets in 1851. What shall I see next?" he asked them as he swept his napkin over the marble table top. If he stayed at his post he saw many strange things. Unnatural fires lit his skies, and before his doors brother shed brother's blood.

The friends parted at half past 7. Marie hoped her husband would be returning home soon, and with news. Sophy felt herself due in the Rue de Grenelle. She reached the house there a little before 8. The concierge was not in his room. She went upstairs unseen and passed into the drawing room. The inner door leading to the room Lady Meg occupied stood open. Sophy called softly, but there was no answer. She walked toward the door and was about to look into the room, thinking that perhaps Lady Meg was asleep, when she heard herself addressed. The Frenchwoman who acted as their cook had come in and stood now on the threshold, with a puzzled, distressed look on her face.

Sophy helping Marie in her homely tasks.

"I'm sorry, Mlle. Sophie, to tell you, but my lady has gone."

"Gone! Where to?"

"To England, I believe. This morning after you had gone out she ordered everything to be packed. It was done. She paid us here off, bidding me alone stay till orders reached me from M. le Marquis. Then she went. Only the coachman accompanied her. I think she started for Calais. At least, she is gone."

"She said—said nothing about me?"

"You'll see there's a letter for you on the small table in the window there."

"Oh, yes! Thank you."

"Your room is ready for you tonight."

"I've dined. I shall want nothing. Good night."

Sophy walked over to the little table in the window and for a few moments stood looking at the envelope which lay there, addressed to her in Lady Meg's sprawling hand. The stately room in the Rue de Grenelle seemed filled with a picture which its walls had never seen. Old words re-echoed in Sophy's ears: "If I want you to go I'll put a hundred pound note in an envelope and send it to you, upon which you'll go, and no reasons given! Is it agreed?" As if from a long way off she heard a servant girl answer, "It sounds all right." She saw the old elm trees at Morpingham and heard the wind murmur in their boughs. Pindar chuckled, and Julia Robins' eyes were wet with tears.

THE GOPHER AND HIS WAYS.

Only More Settlers Will Ever Rid the Country of the Pest.

Those whose lines have been cast in places where the Canadian gopher has its haunts bear no tender recollections of this tiny quadruped, which has so strong a predilection for the farmer's wheat. The creature belongs to a family of rodents, the various species of which are scattered all over North America. One branch rejoices in the possession of cheek-pouches, but the Canadian variety has no such adjuncts, and is an offshoot of the Californian family. It is met with all over the vast prairie lands, and attains a length of, perhaps, ten or eleven inches on the average. His hair is of a light brown hue, with white breast. Here and there one may see a gopher with black spots, but this type is by no means so common as the other. The hind-quarters are largely developed, and the little creature is often seen squatting on his haunches, the while he utters a plaintive squeak. The teeth are powerful, especially in front, while a bushy tail swings behind. The gopher is a burrowing animal, and makes its nest of grass or anything soft. They exist in their millions, and are a great nuisance to the settler who grows wheat. By abstracting the sap or juice from the stalks a few score of gophers will soon render useless a tract of wheat land, and one can trace their depredations from the dull, lifeless appearance of the part preyed upon. Poison will kill them, traps will thin their numbers, but progress in that direction is almost inappreciable, owing to their countless array, and they breed very fast. The only way by which they will be exterminated then, as in the case of many other pests, in the filling up of the country with settlers.

Home For Cats.

If all goes well Toronto in the near future will have a home for lost, strayed, and homeless cats. The idea has been growing for some time, and recently received an impetus from a number of cat lovers, who concluded that the universal pet animal is not receiving the credit and care it deserves.

Nearly every home has a feline of some sort or other. It guards the household Penates, as it were, from whatever depredations the numerous flocks of rats and mice might commit. Those who visited the show at the Exhibition saw his and her majesty decked out in regal splendor reclining on cushions of silk and satin.

These animals are well looked after and have homes and loving ones to care for them. But what of the thousands of homeless pussies, who stray outdoors, sleep in alleyways, on fences, or on the roofs of houses? What of those numberless ones who know not where the next meal will come from, unless it be from a friendly milk bottle on a doorstep or a careless sparrow or robin? What of those who become old in service? Is it right that they should be tied in a sack and drowned in the bay, or that some wretched urchin should be given a dime to get rid of them?

These are the questions the Home for Cats will solve. It will be patterned after the London Institution [illegible] for lost and [illegible] Cats which has been solving the perplexing problem since January 22, 1906.

English Trade Loses.

During the last twenty years English trade with Newfoundland has been steadily year by year declining, whilst Canadian and American trade is, on the other hand, annually increasing. Improved communication both with the United States and the Dominion by the Reid railway and steamers has had, of course, its effect. England gives Newfoundland slow steamers once a fortnight; Canada has swift trains and fast steamers every day. Both Canadian and American agents are much more pushing than their English confreres. Canada has a commercial agent in St. John's.

Chinese Wives.

A question as to whether Chinese wives of white men are liable to the $500 head tax on landing in Canada has been raised by the arrival on board the steamer Empress of India recently of two British engineers who have been working on the Canton-Kow Loon Railroad, bringing Chinese wives. They hold that their wives should be considered as taking the husband's nationality, and consequently not be amenable to the tax. The question has been referred to Ottawa.

Died at One Hundred and Five.

Mrs. William Beatty died recently at Maple Hill, Merivale, aged 105. She read without glasses until a year ago and was never ill until last August, when she fell, prostrated with heat, and fractured a limb. She leaves 46 descendants.

A Plate Heater.

For use in the butler's pantry to keep dishes and food not a very convenient little heater has been designed on the order of those seen in hotel restaurants. The only difference is in the size, the family heater being considerably smaller, just large enough to hold a couple of plates or a small platter. The heater is made to attach to either the gas jet or an electric wire, and it can be regulated to any temperature desired. For breakfast this will be found a great help in serving crisp, hot toast or in maintaining the high temperature of coffee and water. No well equipped dining room or serving pantry is complete without at least one of these heaters, and in large houses several are installed to facilitate the serving of large dinners and luncheons.

MET DEATH ON TRAIL.

Englishmen Who Started For Gold Fields Have Disappeared.

The mysterious disappearance and probable death of two young Englishmen bound from Edmonton to the placer gold diggings on the Ingenica river last summer is the essence of another tale which has just reached the outside from the recesses of the lonesome wilderness of the north. Messrs. T. R. Wilson and A. Luffenden, arrivals from Port Essington by the steamer Camosun recently, brought the report.

On March 28, Harry Phipps and Matthew Tummon started from Edmonton for the Ingenica. They had spared no expense in securing a good outfit for the long overland trip, and with four horses loaded down with provisions and camp equipment they expected to make the journey without privation or great hardship.

On June 4, the two men reached Fort Grahame, on the Findlay river. They had made fairly good time considering that they had not pushed their animals which were all in the best of condition. Supplies were rather low and these they replenished while resting at Fort Grahame. They left the Hudson Bay post on June 8, following the banks of the Findlay river in the direction of the new diggings. Sixty miles north of Fort Grahame they made the camp at which they were last seen on June 15. From that date they never returned to their camp.

The four horses were discovered by Indians shortly after the two men were last seen. In the camp were found all the provisions and equipment carried by the missing men. A shotgun was lying in their tent. For several weeks the camp was not touched by the Indians, who took it for granted that the owners were out prospecting and would eventually return, though some wonder was caused by the fact that no provision had been made for the horses to secure feed. Finally the Indians reported the disappearance of the men to Hudson Bay Agent Fox at Fort Grahame.

About this time Messrs. Wilson and Luffenden ran across the camp, and learning the facts of the case they took an inventory of the supplies and took the horses to Fort Grahame. Mr. Fox took charge of the animals and sent out a report of the case to the Government agent at Hazelton.

While the fate of the men is a mystery, it is generally believed they were drowned. It is not believed they could have got lost, as they had the river to guide them even if they had strayed away from their camp. Mr. Fox, at last accounts, was awaiting the arrival of an expert Indian tracker to send him out to search for the bodies of Phipps and Tummon.

NEW LIBRARY SCHEME.

Ontario Government Will Compete With Correspondence Schools.

An important announcement has been made by T. W. H. Leavitt, inspector of public libraries for Ontario.

"The library department," said Mr. Leavitt, "is preparing a series of special libraries for artisans and mechanics in industrial centres such as Berlin and Niagara Falls. One of the libraries will be at Sarnia tunnel.

"The object of these libraries is to give the artisans and mechanics the benefit of a technical education in their trades without their being compelled to join a correspondence school in the United States at a cost of from $50 to $100.

"It is known that more than $200,000 has gone from young fellows in shops and factories, and so forth, in Ontario in the past three years to one correspondence school in the United States. And of this amount $55,000 went out of Waterloo County alone."

Mr. Leavitt predicted that further developments of the plan to get just as good an education in his trade as from the correspondence schools, and at a cost of not more than 25 per cent. of the cost in taking correspondence schools' course.

Canada and the C. P. R.

Some of the most difficult engineering in the history of the Canadian Pacific is now being completed on the section between Hector and Field, in the Rocky Mountains. The result of this will be to reduce the gradient from 4.5 per cent. to 2.2 per cent., and thus to make an enormous reduction in the cost of operating trains. This section plays an interesting part in the history of Canada. Under their contract with the Canadian Government, the syndicate of capitalists who undertook the completion of the transcontinental system reserved the right to build within a gradient of 2.2 per cent. At this particular point the tunnelling necessary to keep within this margin was so heavy that the connection between east and west was in danger of serious delay. British Columbia was already threatening to withdraw from the Dominion owing to previous procrastinations, and rather than suffer such a loss to Canada the Canadian Pacific directors waived their rights and built a temporary line. This temporary line is now to be discarded at the cost of two million dollars for the original route, and heavy freight trains will be able to cross the Rockies at twenty miles an hour instead of six.—Standard of Empire.

Absurd Stage Business.

Theatrical production is full of absurdities in business. A situation is required, a situation is thrown in. It makes not the slightest difference if it be a trolley car crew of song and dance brothers manning a yacht in the desert of Sahara. You have the trolley crew and the yacht, and if the scene happens to be a section of the arid west where typhoons take the place of waterspouts—well, so much the worse for the scene. And if the conductors collect fares from the sailors to carry out the business of the song, "We Are Jolly, Jolly Street Car Men," the audience must be prepared to submit calmly to a sandstorm immediately following, which is necessary to bring on the wind machine and stereopticon. When a comic opera (heaven save the mark!) opened at Madison Square roof with Japanese costumes, Broadway dialogue, a Martian setting and Irish comedy there were absurdities enough to delight a dozen stage directors.—Henry E. Warner in Bohemian Magazine.

He Couldn't See the Joke.

"The mother-in-law joke isn't half as funny to me as it was when I was a bachelor," said a young New Yorker to his old chum. "I've got a pretty good mother-in-law myself, and she's visiting us now. That's all right too. But here's my grouch:

"Whenever we go out in a bunch, as we generally do, ma grabs the baby every time we sit down—subway, elevated, bridge, surface or ferryboat. Just grabs the kid, you know, as if it was her private property; exhibits it in a way to everybody near by, tells the woman next to her all about how to raise children and what she's doing for this particular one; attracts general attention, you see, with my baby as a star performer and my wife and I sitting there without a chance to say a word and looking as if we wanted to apologize for being on earth."

"Don't think that's funny, eh?" said his friend. "How your sense of humor has shrunk!"—New York Globe.

Running For the Car.

If you feel like emulating Sherlock Holmes try your luck occasionally when you see some one run for a street car. It's a good, easy way to determine the previous training and the present occupation of the subject.

You will see one fellow dash easily toward the car with a long, swinging stride that usually means athletics, but no special training in the sprint. The old time college runner can be picked out by the way he throws his knees in front, like a high bred trotter.

Some waddle, and you must relegate them to the general category of "busy business men" whose duty to the desk has robbed them of wind and waist. Others are getting more than their share of avoirdupois, but in spite of that manage to show you that they are not out of it by any means. To that type it is a veritable triumph to overhaul a moving car and to swing on without the assistance of the conductor.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Joys of Life in Africa.

You must never walk barefoot on the floor, no matter how clean it is, or an odious worm called a jigger will enter your foot to raise a numerous family and a painful swelling. On the other hand, be sure when you put on boots or shoes that, however hurried, you turn them upside down and look inside lest a scorpion, a small snake or a perfectly frightful kind of centiped may be lying in ambush. Never throw your clothes carelessly upon the ground, but put them away at once in a tin box and shut it tight or a perfect colony of fierce biting creatures will beset them. And, above all, quinine!—Winston Churchill, M. P., in London Strand.

Self Disgraced.

In Boston, as every one knows, the symphony concerts are viewed in the light of sacred ceremonials. In this connection the story is told of two little girls of a certain family who returned from the music hall "in a state of mind." One of them carried an expression of deep scorn, the other an air of great dejection.

"What is the matter, girls?" asked some member of the household. "Was the concert fine?"

"The concert was all right," responded Eleanor. "The trouble was with Mary. She disgraced herself."

"Disgraced herself?"

"Yes; she sneezed in the middle of the symphony."—Philadelphia Ledger.

How Needles Are Made.

Needles are all made by machinery. The piece of mechanism by which the needle is manufactured takes the rough steel wire, cuts it into proper lengths, files the point, flattens the head, pierces the eye, then sharpens the tiny instrument and gives it that polish familiar to the purchaser. There is also a machine by which needles are counted and placed in the papers in which they are sold, these being afterward folded by the same contrivance.

OFFICIALLY DEAD.

"Hungry Joe's" Only Chance to Lead an Honest Life.

"I'm not the only man who is officially dead," said "Hungry Joe" the other day. He was once about as famous a confidence man as Broadway ever produced. In 1902 he was reported to the police as "dead," and his photograph and description were removed from the rogues' gallery. He was recognized on Broadway the other day by his habit of walking along the edge of the curb. Gold couldn't tempt him to walk close to the wall or to pass the mouth of an alley without detouring into the street, just a trick of caution inherited from the old days.

"I have reformed," said the man who is said to have once been known as "Hungry Joe." "But reformation doesn't go with the average calf headed imbecile on the police force. A crook's a crook to the end of the chapter with him. So when I made up my mind to live straight I went to the then head of the department. I convinced him that I meant business. 'Call off your men,' I begged. 'Tell them to let me alone. I'm a criminal, I admit. But I'm tired of it, and I want to be a man again.'

"The chief said it wasn't possible. 'I might tell the men you were reformed,' said he, 'but they wouldn't believe. They'd pick you up all the quicker, because they would think that you were trying to shelter yourself in this way. The only way out is for you to die.' And die I did, on the records. For six years the cops have thought that I have been under the daisies all the time. Now they have forgotten about me. My photo has been taken out of the records, and I think I'm safe. I work steadily, my record is good, and not half a dozen people in the world know that the one time 'Hungry Joe' is a respectable cigar salesman. But I had to die to do it."—New York Letter to Cincinnati Times-Star.

A Rotary Rudder.

There is on view at the Lepine toy exhibition in Paris the invention of a French engineer which will, its inventor contends, revolutionize marine and aerial navigation. The invention consists of a rotary rudder, said to be capable of turning a vessel in its own length or at any desired angle. All existing steering contrivances are limited in their action to a deflection of 90 degrees to right or left. It is claimed that by the adoption of the new invention sea collision will be prevented and warships will be able to turn in their own length. An aeroplane fitted with the new rudder would be able to leave the ground instantly.

Artificial Black Diamonds.

Carbon in an amorphous fused condition—real black diamond—is produced in a simple manner by a process lately patented in France by M. Bonnet. A vessel of bronze or other metal contains two carbon electrodes, between which is a rod of carbon over a small vessel of carbon bisulphide, and as the first current is passed the liquid is vaporized, generating a high pressure. Under this pressure and the temperature of a high tension current the carbon rod is changed in a few moments to black diamond, the material so prized for drills and as an abrasive.

A New Meat.

"A new meat has appeared," said a Fifth avenue chef to a New York clubman. "It has the rich sweetness of beef and the nutty zest of game. I think it will succeed. This new meat comes from Scotland. It is a cross between beef and buffalo. Near Stirling there is a herd of bison that has been crossed with highland cattle, giving to the world an animal with a new flavor. We import some of the meat, and it figures on our menu as bibeef—bison beef—see? Try a bibeef steak the next time you lunch here. Dear? No. Two dollars a portion is all."

A Zulu Breakfast.

Dinuzulu, the Zulu chief, has burst a blood vessel, says a telegram from Martzburg, and it is said to be only a wonder that his father did not do the same when he was enjoying British hospitality in London after his capture. He and his sable suit were housed in one of the artistic mansions of Melbury avenue, near Holland House, and his favorite breakfast was a basin of oatmeal porridge and a pint of whisky, which he preferred to milk. Otherwise he was fairly quick in his assimilation of the manners and customs of civilization.

Ungrammatical, but Earnest.

"You say there is nearly always something broke about your automobile?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Chuggins nervously.

"What is it, as a rule?"

"Me."—Washington Star.

Heard in the Dressing Room.

"Say, aren't you going out today?" asked the derby hat.

"Sure!" replied the tan shoes. "But you need not wait for me."

"Why not?" asked the hat.

Shame to Take It.

"I've got a regular cinch."

"What is it?"

"Well, I'm going to take a little railroad trip. So I bet one man that the train would be wrecked. Then another man bet me that it wouldn't be robbed. I can't lose, can I?"—Cleveland Leader.

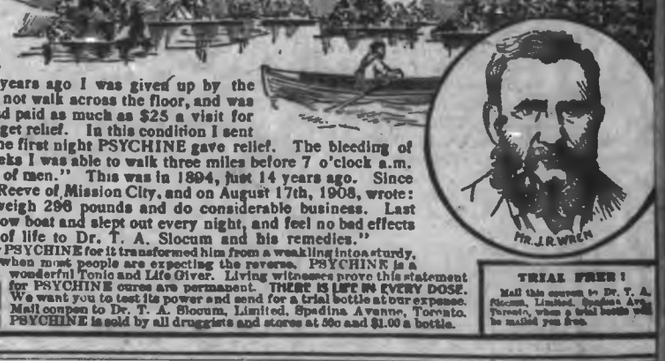
125 MILES IN A ROWBOAT REMARKABLE STORY FROM MISSION CITY



Mr. John R. Wren, late Reeve of Mission City, B.C., is now 66 years of age and tells the following remarkable story: "Some years ago I was given up by the Doctors. I was so weak I could not walk across the floor, and was patiently waiting for death. I had paid as much as $25 a visit for a specialist who said I could not get relief. In this condition I sent for a sample of PSYCHINE. The first night PSYCHINE gave relief. The bleeding of the lungs ceased and in three weeks I was able to walk three miles before 7 o'clock a.m. and take the oversight of a score of men." This was in 1894, just 14 years ago. Since that time Mr. J. Wren has been Reeve of Mission City, and on August 17th, 1908, wrote: I am now in my 66th year and weigh 286 pounds and do considerable business. Last week I travelled 125 miles in a row boat and slept out every night, and feel no bad effects from it. I owe this new lease of life to Dr. T. A. Slocum and his remedies."

No wonder Mr. Wren is grateful for PSYCHINE for it transformed him from a weakling into a sturdy, hardy man and this at a time of life when most people are expecting the reverse. PSYCHINE is a wonderful Tonic and Life Giver. Living witnesses prove this statement for PSYCHINE cures are permanent. THERE IS LIFE IN EVERY DOSE. INDIAN FOUND SILVER.

Ojibway Was Pioneer of New Silver Country in North Ontario.

Round Eyes, an Ojibway Indian, discovered bloom at Silver Lake and Boland Lake in the Montreal river district when hunting many years ago, writes J. S. Crate in The Toronto World. He did not know what it was that he had found.

Round Eyes had a step-son named Mickle Taylor, a half-breed, who went out to Haileybury at the time the first silver discoveries were made at Cobalt. There he saw bloom, and remembering that his father had found similar samples up the Montreal river, he investigated, and this led to the first discovery of silver in that country.

In March, 1904, Thomas Saville, a clever young tourist guide, came into the country with an Indian chief, Francois White Bear, of the Ojibway tribe, and camped over night at Round Eyes' place. During the night the step-son, Mickle, showed them samples taken from the discoveries around Silver and Boland Lakes. To use Mr. Saville's own words:

"We took some of the samples and showed them to Rinaldo McConnel of Ottawa, and he told us to keep it quiet. We started in when the ice broke in 1904. We staked some claims and then went out to Temagami, but came back in the fall of 1904. I have been here ever since."

Mr. Saville was the first prospector in the district, and it was due to his discoveries that the rush into the Montreal river commenced. Owing to the great public interest among mining men in Cobalt and the phenomenal surface discoveries in that camp, interest did not develop in the Montreal river country as quickly as it did in the older camp, but the volume of the movement into the country steadily increased until in the spring of 1907, it became almost a stampede. How extensive was this rush in the Montreal river will be understood when it is stated that over 3,000 claims have since that time been recorded at the Government recording office, which was shortly afterwards established there, and which has been indispensable ever since.

In World's Race Now.

That Nova Scotia is able to compete with the world in steel-making has been established. The general manager of the Dominion Iron & Steel Co., of Sydney, C.B., announces that an order has been received by the company for steel rails to be manufactured for the Southern Punjaub Railway Co. The quantity consists of 9,000 tons of eighty-pound rails, and will be sent direct by steamer via the Suez Canal. The order has been secured in competition with the mills of the world, and had to be approved by the Viceroy of India.

Using Nova Scotia Apples.

The bulk of London's apple supply for popular purposes for the time being is derived from the Nova Scotia crop. The apples are not only large but of exceptionally good quality, and are meeting with much appreciation.

Won $160,000 at One Sitting.

Mention of Lord Rosslyn and his "infallible" system reminds one that Viscount Villiers, who has just married Lady Cynthia Needham, has shown a fondness for Monte Carlo gaming tables. And although he possesses no particular system, he has proved one of the biggest winners of recent years. Some two years ago he made a most sensational coup, and won $160,000 at one sitting.

The power of necessity is irresistible. —Aeschylus.

"Bronchitis"

Is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes.

The Symptoms are tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, and a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color.

Mrs. D. D. Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes: "My husband got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for my little girl who had Bronchitis. She wheezed so badly you could hear her from one room to the other, but it was not long until we could see the effect your medicine had on her. That was last winter when we lived in Toronto.

"She had a bad cold this winter, but instead of getting another bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I tried a home made receipt which I got from a neighbor but found that her cold lasted about twice as long. My husband highly praises 'Dr. Wood's,' and says he will see that a bottle of it is always kept in the house."

Be sure and accept none of the many substitutes.

CARE OF MONUMENTS.

Much Needed Step Is Being Taken by Ontario Official Regarding Relics.

The Historiographer of the Education Department of Ontario has issued a circular which is being sent out to the historical societies in the Dominion, asking for more complete information as to statues and monuments erected in Canada and illustrative of Canadian history. In connection with this movement it is interesting to note that The London Spectator, in its current issue, refers to a movement along similar line in Great Britain. It says:

"The appointment of a royal commission to make an inventory of the historical monuments best worth preserving in Britain is one of those tardy but welcome acts which, we hope, will eventually bring our system of caring for the relics of the past abreast of those of most western nations. France, Germany, Italy, and other countries are all ahead of us. The inventory which is ordered will, perhaps, be formed on the French model more than on any other, for the 'classement' of 'monuments historiques' is the feature of the French laws, which, however, are too highly centralized. The only objection we know of to the creation of a formal catalogue is, as we have pointed out before now, that by implication it sanctions a certain carelessness in the case of monuments not catalogued. The state, as it were, publicly withholds protection from objects not on its list; yet many of them, if they are near the dividing line, may be almost quite as well worth preservation as those which have been exalted to the honors of the catalogue. This danger may easily be exaggerated, and it could not become serious unless one is to assume a considerable lack of common-sense or the presence of ill-will somewhere. Indeed, if no other danger than this exists, it is obvious that there is an overwhelming case for the making of the inventory. We hope that it will be produced without delay, and will not err on the side of scantiness. The limitations will be strict enough in the nature of things, because no monument is to be considered which is dated later than 1700. We can think of a good many buildings later than 1700 which could not be removed without national disgrace, even if we look no further than some of the churches by Wren or founded on Wren's designs."

NAMING THE TOWNS.

What to Call New Western Communities Is a Problem to the Pioneers.

The choosing of town sites and surveying of homestead lands is not the only problem of the geographers in Western Canada. In the new mapmaking that is continually going on it is a question, not merely of where the towns shall be put, but what they shall be called. The Irishman who said that he could understand perfectly how the scientists could tell the size of the planets and stars, but couldn't for the life of him see how they found out their names, might have been impressed too with the nomenclature of the Canadian West. It is a comparatively easy thing to pick out a town site on the prairie, but where does the supply of brand new names come from?

This matter of place-names in the West is an interesting bit of study and reveals not only an amazing profundity but a very considerable originality. They are not the kind of names that are known in the east. Very seldom does a western town duplicate the name of an eastern town—which is more than can be said of the east itself, where there are many repetitions.

A glance at the newest map of the prairie provinces will show an interesting variety of names that are practically copyright. They are the kind of names that would not fit well in the east, simply because they have grown out of western experiences and conditions. The earliest were Indian, many sweet-sounding Indian names are on the map. Then the cue was taken from some appearance of nature, particularly in the case of rivers, hills, and valleys; and latterly the surnames of men are being commemorated—men who have taken some part in the establishment of the town or, in the case of many of the newest stations, the officials or engineers of the railway which is bringing the town into being.

Preparing to Grow.

The port of St. John, N.B., is preparing for the great export trade that begins after the steamers leave the St. Lawrence route. Plans have just been published by the Federal Department of Public Works for extended terminal facilities, piers, breakwaters, and further dredging, to make the eastern harbor ready against the coming of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This line will not be completed for two years yet, but the harbor improvements necessary for its accommodation must soon be begun if St. John is to be ready to handle the traffic the new transcontinental will bring. The prospect for the growth of the port is certainly bright.

How Kaiser Got Order.

An entertaining story of doubtful authorship is being circulated as to how Krupps got orders for rails in Canada from Sir William Van Horne. During his visit to Germany he was much gratified by the attention paid him by the Kaiser. On one occasion the latter invited Van Horne to Potsdam, the Kaiser stating he wished him to meet a particular friend. This proved to be Krupp, and the Emperor got at least one good order for Germany.

Stopping Genteel Smuggling.

Smugglers are having their own troubles just now in the Canadian Soo, and some gentlemen have had to undress in the customs shed when they arrived from the Michigan Soo dressed in new clothes that looked suspiciously like American made goods. On a couple of occasions the police have been called in when suspects showed an inclination to refuse to move clothing or boots that the officers wished to examine.

A Long Felt Want.

They Almost Fought.

The angular chap who had been jotting down notes on the margin of a newspaper approached the stern faced man in the waterproof collar.

"Beg pardon, sir, but could I ask you a question?"

"If it isn't nonsensical."

"Well, my memory isn't good of late. Who invented the sewing machine?"

"Howe."

"H'm! He must be a little deaf. Who invented the sewing machine?"

"Howe!"

"Great Scott! I'd better get a trumpet. The old geezer is as deaf as he can be. Hey, there, who invented the sewing machine?"

"Howe!"

The angular chap leaned over and curved his hands. Then he whooped:

"For the last time, who invented the sewing machine?"

"H-o-w-e—Howe. Mr. Howe. And now if you ask me again blamed if I don't thrash you within an inch of your life! Now, get!"

And the angular chap "got."—Chicago News.

Given the Mitten.

One cold day a love sick young man who had for some time harassed a young lady with his attentions was hurrying along the street behind this very young lady when he perceived, with delight, something drop from her muff to the sidewalk.

Picking it up, the gallant young man rushed ahead and, accosting her, smilingly held out her recovered property.

Without deigning to accept it she eyed him coldly a moment, then said: "You may keep it. It's my mitten!"—Brooklyn Life.

An Uncertain Speculation.

"Jane has a caustic tongue. I asked her the other day why she didn't marry some old man for his money."

"What did she say?"

"She said the increase in the duration of human life and the depression in stocks made the speculation too uncertain. But she added that she would marry a rich old man under one condition."

"What was that?"

"He must be a chronic aeroplanist."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MANY DON'T KNOW

HEART AFFECTED.

More People than Aware of It Have Heart Disease.

"If examinations were made of everyone, people would be surprised at the number of persons walking about suffering from heart disease."

This startling statement was made by a doctor at a recent inquest. "I should not like to say that heart disease is as common as this would imply," said the expert, "but I am sure that the number of persons going about with weak hearts must be very large."

"Hundreds of people go about their daily work on the verge of death, and yet do not know it. It is only when the shock comes that kills them that the unsuspected weakness of the heart is made apparent."

"But undoubtedly heart weakness, not disease, is more prevalent nowadays. I should think that the stress of living, the wear and rush of modern business life, have a lot to do with heart trouble."

There is no doubt but that this is correct, and we would strongly advise any one suffering in any way from heart trouble to try a course of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Price 50 cts. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FLUTTERING OF THE HEART.

Mrs. G. M. White, Williamstown, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with weak spells and fluttering of the heart. I was so bad I could scarcely lie down in bed. I procured a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and they helped me so much I got another box and it has made a final cure. I cannot speak too highly of them. I think they are worth their weight in gold."

"LITTLE FRIEND'S" GRAVE.

Build a house for "Little Friend,"
Underneath the sunniest grass,
In a place where birds' songs blend
On the breezes as they pass.

Dig it not with sorrow's spade,
Use no sharp-edged tools of pain,
Nothing there must cast a shade.
Nothing there must leave a stain.

Build the walls of hope and joy,
Gladsome as the flowers and trees,
Else the little merry boy
Will not rest in it at ease.

Bring no torch or other light,
As though darkness could be there,
For a soul so pure and bright
Will give radiance everywhere.

Build the roof of faith and love,
Pillared on foundations deep,
That the rain of tears above
Will not mar his happy sleep.

Make no windows, as though he Needed peep-holes to the skies,
For the vast Eternity
Now is open to his eyes.

Build no staircase for his feet,
Make no doorway in the wall,
For he treads the golden street
Where the Christ is all in all.

Only let the cross be set
Upright in the hallowed ground,
Lest the stricken heart forget
Where the cure of grief is found.

OLD MALCOM.

Toronto Paper Picker Was Once With Booth and McCullough.

Perhaps you may have seen him, for he may have held out his hand for help. If he has met you on life's great way, just be kind to him, for he is one of this old world's derelicts whose career should have been long and brilliant, and whose declining years might have been spent in comfort and luxury.

But it is not a career now, it is an existence, and to-day in the city of Toronto, with a bag on his back and a pointed stick in his hand, he is a wanderer, a delver in our lanes and back alleys, gathering papers and bottles for the junk man and the Jew.

Malcom Macdonald was more than that once.

Years ago he was the friend and associate of the great Edwin Booth and John McCullough, sharing with them the plaudits and winning honor in his part.

His was the part of Iago, in "Othello," with McCullough in the title role. His genius was marked.

But that is all past, and he is one of the great army of Might Have Beens.

Four years ago I saw him. I saw him again the other day. He had not changed much. He was near the Government House with its spacious lawns and luxury, and here I questioned him and his voice softened, and his face lit up as his mind was flooded with recollections, memories of his illustrious one-time fellow actors.

Yes, across the road stood the Government House, and a coach was waiting at the door, the Government House representing the King, and lords and people.

But it was closed for him.

Nearby was a massive church, a monument to the Son of Man. But it was closed.

But there was another door open not far off, where even poor wretches like Malcom Macdonald can go, and are welcome for a nickel or a dime, can go and borrow enthusiasm to drown care and obliterate for the moment the sorrows of the past.

"How old are you, Malcom?" I asked.

"Eighty-three," was his reply, and with a remnant of old-time grace he disappeared to borrow new life where the bottles are shiny and men wear white coats and aprons.

He was welcome there, for he had a dime.—C.F.R., in Toronto News.

Canada and the Decimal System.

It is exactly fifty years ago since Canada adopted the decimal system, and it is therefore no wonder that so few Canadians are able to readily calculate in pounds, shillings and pence. The old system Canada abolished was not sterling, but a sort of a mongrel currency that had grown up here and taken the name of "Halifax." It was not based on the decimal principle, and yet there was some rational relation between its pound and the dollar of the decimal currency. The pound was exactly equal to four dollars, and therefore a little more than three shillings less than the British pound.

Men in business can recall the old arithmetic of their schooldays, and the rules it contained telling how to "reduce" sums from one currency to another. In 1858 the old Canadian currency was made to disappear, and since then the simple decimal system has prevailed.

Falls of Labrador.

Two travelers who have returned to St. John's, Newfoundland, after a visit to the famous Grand Falls in Labrador, have given a glowing description of their trip, which occupied some ten weeks. The falls lie inland 300 miles from the head of Hamilton inlet, on the coast of Labrador. The inlet stretches 145 miles into the country from the sea, up to which point it is navigable for steamers. Afterwards the canoe is utilized, and the river follows a very tortuous course. The width of the falls is about 2,500 feet, eclipsing the mighty Niagara. The rush of water extend many miles, and becomes a boiling torrent in the pool below. It is said that the roar of the cascade can be heard twenty miles away. The falls were discovered in 1859.

Fruit-Growing Booming.

Great progress in fruit-raising is reported from Revelstoke and Kamloops along the main line of the Canadian Pacific in British Columbia. Several large ranches have been bought by companies, and will be cut up into small holdings to be sold to fruit-growers.

SCARLET FEVER.

A Scourge of White Races In All Ages and Countries.

Now that smallpox, thanks to compulsory vaccination, has become a rarity in civilized communities, scarlet fever steps forward as the worst of the eruptive diseases of childhood. It is a malady of enormous antiquity. Thucydides, writing nearly 500 years before the beginning of our era, called it a heritage from the remote past. It has scourged the white races in all ages and all countries, and the physicians of all schools have leveled their heaviest artillery upon it. Yet it remains a puzzle unsolved and an enemy unconquered even today. We are in doubt as to its cause, and there is no drug or antitoxin that will cure it. But despite all this the death rate from scarlet fever is steadily declining, and we may expect it to decline more and more as the years go by. The reason for this, I take it, lies in the fact that the modern doctor is a great deal more sparing with pills and powders than his predecessor and a great deal more lavish with water, air and antiseptics. In the old days it was customary to dose scarlet fever patients with all sorts of violent remedies in staggering quantities, and as a result many of them died. Today medicines are but minor auxiliaries in the sickroom, and both doctor and nurse devote their main energies to preventing a spread of the infection.—Delineator.

USE FOR A TELESCOPE.

Interesting Discovery One Woman Made by Use of the Glass.

"I thought it was a pretty fair sort of telescope for one that wasn't very big," said Uncle Silas. "I rigged it up in the attic by the high north window and had it fixed so it would swing around easy. I took a deal of satisfaction in looking through it, the sky seemed so wide and full of wonders, so when Hester was here I thought I'd give her the pleasure too. She stayed a long time upstairs and seemed to be enjoying it. When she came down I asked her if she'd discovered anything new.

"'Yes,' she says. 'Why, it made everybody's house seem so near that I seemed to be right beside 'em, and I found out what John Pritchard's folks are doin' in their outkitchen. I've wondered what they had a light there for night after night, and I just turned the glass on their windows. They are cuttin' apples to dry—folks as rich as them cuttin' apples!'

"And actually that was all the woman had seen! With the whole heavens before her to study, she had spent her time prying into the affairs of her neighbors! And there are lots more like her—with and without telescopes."—Christian Uplook.

Last Charm of the Wayside Inn.

The inns of England, celebrated by Harrison and famous far and wide at the beginning of the last century, have degenerated into sad places which we visit only of necessity. Little did Stephenson think when he proposed the line from Manchester to Liverpool that he would ruin the wayside inns of England and kill the art of cookery.—Blackwood's Magazine.

PREMIER'S HELPMEET

SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S HOME HAS CHARMING MISTRESS.

Lady Laurier's Work Has Had Much to Do With Her Husband's Triumph Over Difficulties—She Is Devoted to the Work of Developing Canada and Loves the Home Life of Picturesque French-Canadians.

Of Lady Laurier, one American writer, Margaret H. Downing, entertains a high opinion. In an article in The Detroit News-Tribune, Miss Downing says:

"The wife of Sir Wilfrid Laurier would be an interesting figure were she only of mediocre attraction. For the Liberal Premier of the Dominion of Canada towers mountains high above his contemporaries, and his history is virtually the story of Canada's transition into national greatness. But Lady Laurier possesses a powerful as well as a charming personality and those who love to trace the development of the man through choosing the right helpmeet will find her an illustrious type. Perhaps no man at present before the public owes quite so much to his wife and certainly no man is more prone to attribute his success to her unfailing good counsel, to her cheerful companionship and intellectual comprehension of the political needs of the hour. A few weeks ago when Sir Wilfrid invited a distinguished company to his pleasant home in Theodore street, Ottawa, to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the wedding, he felicitated his wife in the following words: "Except for the good gift of children, all the blessedness which marriage can yield has come to me in this union. Madame Laurier has been even more admirable and efficient to the Prime Minister than she was to the struggling young barrister of Arthabaskaville forty years ago."

Dignified and gracious, Lady Laurier is the ideal chatelaine for a household such as the Prime Minister of the Dominion must maintain. It requires pre-eminent social tact to avoid the pitfalls involved in official precedence and to please the complex element which composes Canadian high society. But her training was in the days when she and her husband lingered in the cold shades of the Opposition and the lessons learned then have proved useful in the higher sphere. Sir Wilfrid's biographers aver that being a genius in things political, he would probably have succeeded against all difficulties, but it was entirely due to his wife's counsels, her unfailing patience and philosophic spirit that he succeeded so soon. Lady Laurier brought to him an excellent dower, fine social connections, and all the traditions of good blood. Her father, Mr. George N. B. Lafontaine, was a man of affairs in Montreal and she had been carefully educated in the best schools of her home city and in France. She met the future great man of Canada when he was reading law, and she studying under the Ladies of the Sacred Heart. The marriage was the result of devoted love on both sides and not the cut and dried affair arranged between parents which French-Canadian unions usually are.

Now that her faith in her distinguished husband has been so amply justified, Lady Laurier is devoting her declining years to projects which concern the future of her beloved country and particularly the future of woman in the great Dominion. Not even Sir Wilfrid himself is more devoted to the cause of Canada's development than his gentle wife.

Lady Laurier is proud of the fact that while Canada possesses a few immensely rich people, the number of those in affluence compares favorably with the prosperous neighbor to the south. She has studied all the characteristics of her people and tells many quaint stories about them. While she has never written herself, she has encouraged many friends to depict the homely life of the Canadian, which she considers more picturesque than that of the native French. She calls attention to the thrift and cleanliness which the poorest communities display. "Go through the country and glance into the open door of a peasant with a mere patch of ground and only a thatched roof cottage for his domicile," she said, "and you will see something of real rural Canadian life. The floor is yellow with many scrubbings, there are bright, neatly patched rag rugs, a stove polished bright as new tin, and most honorable ornament of all, stands in rigid solemnity the lit de parade or best bed in lace curtains and gay frillings. Cleaning and scrubbing make up a great part of every Canadian celebration, and no genuine Canadian housekeeper would think of commemorating a great day either in the religious or domestic calendar without scouring her home from rafters to floor. The feast of New Year and Easter, always supreme events in the Canadian peasant life, are preceded by general interior upheaval with broom, soap and scrub brush and so are marriages, birthdays, the visits of M. le Cure or relatives from a distance. All the distinction of the event would be gone were the home cleaning neglected and a corner slighted would bring as much remorse as a sin unconfessed. Best of all these great events are always accompanied by a confession so that the whole family conscience may be in harmony with the general purification of the home."

Lady Laurier, though a vice-president of the National Council of Women, and a director of the Victorian Order of Nurses, may not be called an enthusiast in the new woman movement of which the Countess of Minto was the progenitor. Rather she inclines to keep her energies for the home. In recent years she has traveled with her husband and her greatest delight now is to recall her experiences and to display the souvenirs of these historic visits. She was asked to many functions to which other colonials are not admitted and everywhere she added to the fame of her native land as a social centre.

THE SCRIBE WAS SLEEPY.

And He Repeated Himself Till His Editor Raised a Protest.

Some years ago when Sir Oliver Mowat was on his death-bed, the esteem with which he was held by the public received no better testimony than the fact that the morning daily papers kept small staffs on duty until six o'clock in the morning so as to be in a position to bring out special editions with his biography, and the announcement of his demise.

It was known to all that he could not possibly survive, but he lingered on unconscious for days. The newspapers were restrained by courtesy from publishing their editorials on his life, and the details of his history until the fatal hour arrived. It was necessary, however, to maintain a "death-watch," as, in the cant of journalism, it is known. That is to say, a group composed of representatives of each paper, and several correspondents of out-of-town papers sat up all night at a nearby hotel, day by day, with arrangements that they should be communicated with as soon as death intervened.

One night one of the out-of-town correspondents, who was a little out of form because of late hours and fatigue, thought he ought to do something to make a showing, and started to send bulletins. "Sir Oliver is sinking!" he wired to his paper at Ottawa. Again in fifteen minutes in apparent forgetfulness that he had sent a bulletin, he again wired: "Sir Oliver is sinking." So on through the night from time to time he would file the same message. Finally, the exasperated telegraph editor at the other end of the wire, sitting up all night for a real news message, cut in with the despatch: "Don't wire again until Sir Oliver sinks."

Then, and not till then, did the correspondent wake up to the fact that in his sleepy condition he had filed nearly a dozen messages in the same phraseology.

To Study Schools.

The Hon. D. S. Mackenzie, Deputy Minister of Education for Alberta, has departed for England in order to visit the representative schools and colleges of England, Ireland, and Scotland, and, if time permits, study the system of technical education in vogue in Germany. The Department of Education for Alberta is laying the foundation for a broad educational system, and Mr. Mackenzie's visit is for the purpose of learning the successes and failures of the British systems, in order that the new province may profit thereby. Another object is to become thoroughly conversant with the grading of the British schools, so that the Department will be able to deal more readily with the many applications which are coming from old country teachers for schools in Alberta.

Paper Products.

At a meeting of the jobbers and the papermakers of Canada, held in Toronto recently, it was decided to advance the price of wrapping paper 15 cents per cwt. It was also agreed that no orders for pulp or paper products could be booked ahead, as it was feared that some further advances in prices, due to increased cost of production, would have to be made soon.

The reasons given for the advance in price were the scarcity of pulpwood, the high price and scarcity of wood pulp and the increased use of coal for auxiliary power.

Fish Catch Is Good.

Returns from the Nova Scotia fishing fleet are most encouraging. In 1907 there were 109 vessels engaged in this industry, and the catch was 123,625 quintals. In 1908 there were 110 vessels, with a catch of 138,180 quintals. The average catch per vessel in 1908 was 1,256 quintals, an increase per vessel of 132 quintals. The catch of codfish is the largest obtained for years.

A SPITE FENCE.

Toronto Man Has Shut Out the Daylight From Objectionable Neighbors.

On one of the Rosedale streets in Toronto a huge "U" shaped apartment house offers its proportions to the public gaze. It is built of mottled brick, three storeys high, and runs from end-to-end of the lot on which it stands. So economical of ground space was the architect that the eastern wall almost rubs noses with the house on the next lot. From its windows the curious can gaze meditatively on the shy antics of the bashful inmates across the way. If the occupants of the two houses were on friendly terms they could shake hands by leaning out of their respective windows.

But they are not friendly. The owner of the smaller residence has conjured up a frame of mind which would blast the great apartment like a lightning stroke if thoughts could wither and destroy. He conceived an idea. The back section of the hated human hive overlooked his backyard, staring into his private grounds with three rows of open-eyed windows. If the unfortunate man left his house to escape the eyes peeping from the neighboring structure, he encountered twice as many as he rushed through his yard.

To relieve his simmering feelings he went to a carpenter, and soon the sound of hammering rivalled the variegated noises of the workmen next door. A fearful and wonderful structure rose steadily and compactly till it reached the height of about thirty feet. There it stands—an airtight fence, protecting its owner's lawn from scrutiny and the windows of his enemy from light. When the rosy sun bursts in splendor, hoping to illuminate the eastern windows of the new apartment house, it encounters this impenetrable wall, and in chagrin hides its face behind a cloud. Meanwhile the occupants of the apartment house sleep on blissfully till noon, thinking by reason of the great darkness, that it is still night. The proprietor should secure Eskimos as tenants, as they are accustomed to almost perpetual twilight.

It is rumored that on another side of the apartment house poplar seeds have been planted, in the charitable hope that one day they will produce a foliage sufficiently dense to obscure the light from the few windows unaffected by the "spite fence."

TO TAP NORTHWEST.

Peace River Country Will Soon Have Network of Railways.

The news that the Canadian Pacific engineers have been locating a new line north of Edmonton through the Pine Pass and the Peace River district has not come altogether as a surprise to those who have watched the recent progress of construction on this railroad into the northwest. The Calgary and Edmonton line was at one time merely an isolated branch, but very soon it will intercept two other important branches, each of which might become an alternative main line in the days to come. Sir Sandford Fleming, in his surveys for the Canadian Pacific, reported on half a dozen routes from Edmonton across the Northern Rockies to the Pacific Coast, but commercial and political exigencies were so heavily against these routes that for the time being they were all discarded for the direct route to the mouth of the Fraser. Now, however, the northwest is so well settled that an extension into the Peace River district may reasonably be expected to pay, especially as this district is known to have a very fertile soil, rich mineral wealth, and a climate much less severe than that in the Dakotas. The new line is said to have been located already as far as Dunvegan, and will be continued to the goldfields of the Yukon, passing through the Cassiar district, the principal big-game hunting-ground of North America.—Standard of Empire.

Joins Ursuline Order.

An interesting and impressive ceremony took place recently in the chapel of the Ursuline College of Chatham, when Miss Mary Dwyer of Toronto and Miss Strickland of Port Hope were admitted into the order of the Ursulines. Miss Dwyer was a graduate in honor mathematics of the class of '03, Toronto University. As an undergraduate she was prominently identified with university organizations. Since leaving the university she has been very successful as a teacher in high schools in different parts of the province and in Toronto. Miss Dwyer is the first woman graduate of a university of this province to enter a religious order.

The Ursuline Order possesses peculiar interest for Canadians, as its members were among the first to be sent to Canada when the Catholic Church was establishing its outposts in new France. The order is closely associated with the early history of Quebec. It was to the Ursuline convent that Montcalm was carried when he received his mortal wound on the field of battle, and it was in the Ursuline chapel that he was laid at rest.

The Ursulines have always been exclusively a teaching order, and the convent in which Miss Dwyer and Miss Strickland were received at Chatham has existed there for sixty years.

Hostility to Union.

In the recent Newfoundland contest it is amusing to observe how both parties declared their deadly hostility to union with Canada. There is undoubtedly a strong popular feeling in the colony against confederation. All real Imperialists will view this question of union and the consolidation of British North America as really an imperial, not a local, question. As Sir John A. Macdonald said, "Newfoundland is the key of our door, the gateway into our Dominion, and should belong to us."

Eaten by Dogs.

News has just reached St. John's, Nfld., of a terrible tragedy at Sandwich Bay, Labrador. A young girl called White, a settler's daughter, was set upon by six savage Eskimo dogs and literally torn to pieces.

In a Bad Way.

"Here is a doctor who says you mustn't eat when you're worried."

"But suppose you're always worried for fear you ain't goin' to get anything to eat?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FOOLED WITH ELEPHANT.

And the Animal Responded With a Surprise For Mr. Man.

The keeper at the Toronto Riverdale Zoo is chuckling these days over a mishap that befel a rather fresh young gentleman, who presumed to take liberties with the elephant the other day.

It appears that the elephant, though young—she is only twenty, a mere child, as elephants go—has a very well-developed sense of dignity, and resents keenly any attempts made to belittle her or her position. Some days ago a young man, accompanied by a girl, strolled into the animal house and proceeded to show off at the expense of the elephant.

He snapped his finegrs at her, threw small things in her face, and tried generally to impress his companion and all present with the fact that he was a sort of reincarnation of Kipling's Toomai of the Elephants.

Finally he indulged in his crowning piece of foolishness, poking the shackled beast in the sensitive trunk with the point of his umbrella.

Up to this point the elephant had borne it with the toleration of a man for a yelping puppy, but that was too much. With the quickness of a flash the big trunk flew out, and, according to the keeper, the young gentleman left terra firma with the speed of a baseball just off the bat. He brought up against the wall halfway down the house, knocking half the breath out of his body and smashing his hat into a pancake.

A roar of laughter from the spectators greeted his mishap, and he picked himself up, and, accompanied by his badly-scared companion, slunk out of the place, trying hard to look as though the elephant's act had been all arranged beforehand.

That sagacious beast after one grunt of satisfaction resumed her interrupted game with a handful of hay, and tried hard to keep her face straight.

Unsettled.

MILNER AS AN OBSERVER.

South African War Lord Has Had Ears and Eyes Open.

Lord Milner and his party, during their visit to Canada, have undoubtedly had their ears and eyes open, and it is unquestionable, that if he wishes, his lordship can, on his return to England, give a racy account of the situation in Canada. While in the West he dodged publicity, and in Ontario he has unobtrusively gone about at his own pleasure, living quietly in apartments and making only such public engagements as he could not without difficulty avoid. He has been declared by those who have met him to be one of the most genial and approachable of men, with a secretary who has been more than usually a companion to him.

As an indication of the manner in which the visitors have followed the situation in Canada, through personal contact and through reading the newspapers of this country, it is worth noting that they have even caught the style of a certain type of editorial expression familiar to Canadians. On the day of Lord Milner's arrival it was arranged that he should receive an honorary degree from Toronto University. Two hours previously he had an appointment with representatives of the daily newspapers, and in the course of an interview, in which he delighted his interlocutors, he was asked whether he intended to make an important deliverance at the University. He replied that he would be brief, and his secretary added, with a bland smile:

"About five minutes of the "uplift," as I think you call it in this country."

The Need of a Hobby.

In its biography of Mr. Bosworth Smith, for years a master at Harrow, who died a day or two ago, The London Times quotes the words of a colleague, who writes that Bosworth Smith's first question to each one who entered his house was "What is your hobby?" "His object has been to develop boys' tastes in every healthy direction whatever, and to bring to the surface all that was best in the innate character of his pupils. How many have learned, under this inspiring encouragement, to love wild nature, to appreciate the skill and endurance which form the best element of sport, to take an intelligent interest in travel and adventure, to follow the great questions of the day, social, political, and ecclesiastical?"

Profit-Sharing For Gasworkers.

The directors of the Tottenham and Edmonton Gas Co. in England have decided to introduce a system of profit-sharing for their employes, to whom the scheme was explained at a meeting of 500 or 600 of the officers and workmen some time ago. The bonus will vary with the price of gas, and at the present rate will amount to $22 to $500 earned per annum.

Christmas in the Country

By WILLIAM LINCOLN SHEARER

"My baby boy."

ACCORDING to a high authority, man is made of dirt—of the earth earthy. In his natural state his wants are few, his necessities fewer. The simple life bred longevity, healthfulness, sincerity and truth. From this straight and narrow path he once trod is now a far cry. The "higher civilization," so called, has "civilized" out of him many of those things which made for healthfulness in both mind and body. The feverish excitement, the mad pace of professional business and social life are paths that lead to sanitariums or early graves those worthy a better fate.

Ofttimes, in saner moments, he hears the call of the wild back to the soil from which he sprang (and to which he must eventually return) for a brief season of rest, recuperation, reflection and refreshment. He quiets the tugging at his heart-strings with, "Yes, at a more convenient season." Father, mother, homestead pass away. Youth, strength, vigor follow their flight, and when the call again comes it falls on ears that do not hear, or, hearing, comprehend not.

So, son and daughter in your prime, "the days are gliding swiftly by." There are a multiplicity of reasons why you should go home as often as possible to visit the old folks. Go on as many legal holidays as you can, on the anniversaries of their birth and their marriage, but, most of all, on Christmas.

The old people are well provided for through your generosity, to be sure. That is noble in you, but their hearth is, to all intents and purposes, as childless as when the crane was hung there years ago. They are longing for words of comfort and the personal contact and presence of those whom they reared from helpless infancy, toiled, sacrificed to sustain, educate and prepare for the warfare of this world. You were obliged to learn much to make the fight, and when you come to sift it out, to separate gold from dross, wheat from chaff, you realize that it was what you learned at mother's knee that counted for more than all the rest.

Man grown that you are, you are yet to her a child. She even treasures the infant clothes you once wore. It is not the big, successful man of the world that she sees most in her dreams at this season of the year, which is the children's festival, but her little one. Your parents sit hand-in-hand around the open hearths, while the shadows lengthen along the western horizon of life. What announcement causes father to beam and mother to weep like that? Mort, who is a Colorado judge, whither he went for asthma in the early seventies, is going to risk the climate for Christmas on the old farm; and that Dr. John, who went with his wife to Arizona, where they might sleep out-of-doors the year round for their pulmonary troubles, are coming; and that Henry, the Boston banker, notwithstanding the copper slump and the attacks of Lawsonites, will break away this year and spend Christmas at the homestead.

At the last announcement mother sobs audibly, "my baby boy." You ought to see him. A bald bachelor crowding 45 and 300 pounds; as uneasy out of sight of a Turkish bath sign, on account of his rheumatic gout, as an old maid at a wedding. A fine, healthy "baby boy," indeed.

Deciphers the boys called him Ulysses S.

You are surely entitled to at least one more Christmas at home on the dear old farm before ever the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Take it while you may.

* * * *

Christmas in the country meant more than a similar celebration anywhere else, because it was observed in spirit and in truth. The gift-giving was simple, merely incidental to the occasion instead of its chief feature, as nowadays. Then, one's affection was not measured by the intrinsic value of his present, but the good will that prompted it. The thought, not the value, determined its worth before the spirit of commercialism penetrated it, which seems to have permeated every nook and corner of our social system and crowded out some of the very things that made for happiness and contentment. The Christmas spirit was the dominant tone of the holiday vibration, to which all were attuned, and sending and receiving messages, oral and wireless, to each and from each family member.

The big white farmhouse stands, as it has always stood since you can remember, on the very top of the highest hill in this section, which bears your grandfather's name, who cleared the original forest, where now are broad, fertile acres. Down the first bench of the hill the road runs straight for about eighty rods between stump fences to the schoolhouse. This school also bears his name. So does the little cemetery which lies directly back of it, the land for which he donated, where your ancestors are buried. Cemeteries are usually such depressing affairs, with their overplus of evergreen trees and much other everlasting shade and shrubbery, through which the sun can hardly penetrate. Not so this one. It has a few trees of the deciduous kind, not many; hardly enough to obstruct the enchanting view of hills, valleys and more hills beyond to the golden west, where it always seems when the sun sinks to rest, from the halo which radiates from a common center, that the gate of heaven must be.

At the cemetery the road turns abruptly to the left to let you down the hill gradually, till you strike the main road, with its slight downward grade, to the county seat, two miles away, where the railroad runs.

December 20. At the breakfast table this morning mother said to father, somewhat decidedly, "Josiah, I'm going to get this Christmas dinner myself." "Why, no, you ain't," said father; "you're not able." Then mother looked over the top of her glasses and her eyes met father's looking over the top of "his'n." "Josiah, watch me," she said. "My children, in spite of all their new-fangled way of living and French 'chefs,' have always said there was nothing in the eating line like mother used to make, and I want to show them that my right hand has not forgot its cunning," said the old lady, her face beaming with pardonable pride.

"My children thought everything that mother made was just right," she continued, "except the army blanket pants I made for you and afterward cut over for the boys according to their size as they came along. Robert declares that his had 'U. S.' on the seat. Of course they didn't. But he has told it so much that I half believe it myself," she mused. "That's the reason he says he wouldn't go to school, because the boys called him Ulysses S. He went nutting and hunting in the fall, sledding, trapping and skating in the winter, spent his springtime in the sugar bush and fishing. Folks said he never would amount to anything at all, but the books he has written about his favorite sports and the habits of animals and birds that he has observed on his expeditions and has published would fill a whole library, and he never has been accused by a President of being a nature faker, either," said mother, warming up considerably for her.

So Bethany—that's the hired girl that has been in the family so many years—was set to work gathering the "ingredients," as she calls them, for the fruit cake, because it makes no difference how long before that is made, for it keeps indefinitely, unless one of the family happens to come before the rest, who makes a regular practice of carrying a knife and spoon in his pocket, and raids the cellar when it is most convenient and deserted.

"MOTHER'S FRUIT CAKE"

Here's mother's recipe: One pound brown sugar, one pound butter, ten eggs, one pound currants, three pounds raisins, one pound dates, one pound citron, one-quarter pound lemon and orange peel, one cup New Orleans molasses, two tablespoonfuls cinnamon, one small teaspoonful cloves, three nutmegs, one gill each brandy and wine. Grab a double handful of extra fruit, turn your head away and drop that in. Before putting it in add an even teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a very little hot water. Use extra flour to roll the fruit in.

If ever you get your teeth in that concoction, after it is slowly, thoroughly baked, you will have the time of your life then and later.

December 21-22. Christmas preparation goes steadily forward. Just like mother, the house is cleaned from garret to cellar. It is too cold to wash windows on the outside, which she mourns, for as fast as the water touches the glass it freezes, but inside everything is scoured and scrubbed until you can see your reflection in tinware and pewter.

Right after dinner this afternoon father appeared in the woodshed door with his coonskin cap, peajacket and mittens to protect him from the biting east wind, a double-bitted axe on his shoulder. At the sight Rover, the coon dog, almost threw fits. He leaped in the air, laughed, barked, threw handsprings and all but turned himself inside out for joy at the prospect of a hunt. "Down, Rover," father said, "this is no hunt. I'm going for a Christmas tree." Together they go over to the wood lot, Rover leading the way and running back to see if his master is coming and then madly on again. Father selects a fine specimen of conifer that stands in the southeast corner. He lays his coat over the stump fence and soon the bite of the woodman's axe awakens the stillness of the winter forest.

NOT GRUDGED FOR CHRISTMAS

At the first stroke a cock pheasant hidden in the topmost branches whirrs away to another shaded retreat. Marvelously few strokes, each following the other in quick succession, each precisely in the footsteps of its predecessor, for father, like his father, is a famous axeman, the tree crashes to the ground. He steps to one side so that when the butt kicks back it won't hit him. "Too bad," says father. "A few more years and it would have been a tree worth while. But, pshaw! Christmas comes but once a year." Out of the handsome top, with its even branches on every side, he cuts an eight-foot piece. There comes the hired man with the meek oxen, Buck and Bright, hitched to the stone boat, after it. Father helps him load it and the procession goes to the house.

One of the neighbors, who has been to town, brings up our mail. See the letters! Sons and daughters and grandchildren all coming, but can't possibly reach home before noon train of the 24th. The hired man will take the percheron colts, coming 4, father's pride, tipping the beam at 2800 pounds, and meet them at the depot. "I do hope it will snow," says father, as he looked out of the window toward the west, on going to bed. "A Christmas without snow is like an egg without salt."

December 23. The hired man goes to the wood lot with the oxen and boat and brings in butts of green beech logs for back logs. Another load of dry stuff follows, on which is piled fresh branches from the felled hemlock, to throw upon the blazing fire to make it crackle and blaze still higher. It still looks like snow. Just before noon the wind shifts. The sky is overcast with leadened, low-hanging clouds that shut out the sun. The rooster and his speckled harem go to bed. Finally a few flakes begin to fall about the size of half dollars. They increase in number, but decrease till the size of quarters, nickels, pennies, and finally settle down to business, a steady mantle of white falling and covering everything out of doors. The sleet beats almost vindictively against the window-panes and the nor'easter is on. Inside there is bustle and cheer and the odor of boiled cider, mince meat and fried cakes.

December 24. The morning breaks upon a world unknown. Fences where the road was are nearly drifted full. The cornerib, well sweep and pigsty are fantastically, fancifully and picturesquely covered. And the awful stillness, oppressive, choked, under the white pall. There is shoveling to the barn to liberate the imprisoned animals, who wonderingly gaze about. The turkey gobbler, who chased every petticoat that he saw unless it stayed his pursuit with a broom, is no more. His blood is reddening the pure white snow butchered for the morrow's dinner. From farther up the road come the road-breaking sleighs with two teams of oxen attached. They stop at our farm, where Buck and Bright are added, and road-breaking continues down to the schoolhouse, by the cemetery and on to the main traveled highway.

The first to traverse the broken path is the doctor's sleigh body cutter, with that worthy bundled up unrecognizable, on some errand of mercy, without waiting to inquire whether the party could pay or not. The early doctor would have scorned such inquiry as unworthy his noble calling. There is a smell of a combination of hunger-producing odors from the kitchen and smoke rises from the kettle of hot lard on the elevated oven stove.

Aunt Martha is on hand early to help trim the tree, which is firmly braced at the right of the fireplace. She has cut shreds of brilliantly colored tissue paper and strung popcorn and beads in among its fragrant branches. Cornucopias hang from every bough, filled with goodies. Little candles have been "run" and perched on every convenient limb, and across the corner where the glittering spectacle stands two sheets, sewed together, are pinned in front to hide it from the bright eyes of curious children who are soon to arrive.

A GLADSOME ARRIVAL

On account of the heavy snows the noon train is four hours late, and it is about 5 o'clock when the percherons with their precious load are discovered winding up the hill. The lumber-box wagon has been put on "bobs." Boards have been placed across for seats, and they have been put as close together as possible, and three are on a seat. A neighbor's sleigh, close behind, contains the overflow. Father is restless, and keeps putting more light stuff on the fire and then some logs, and mother walks from one window to another and wonders if those percherons ever will get there with her dear ones. They drive up close to the front porch. The men shout, the women cry and the children alternately cry and laugh. "There's mother!" they call as she appears on the porch, and is grabbed in turn by each big son and hugged and kissed till it seems she must succumb to the pressure. The daughters and children follow suit.

They stamp the snow off their feet and shake it from their garments and hustle into the house and back up to the fireplace. Wraps are removed and the dry stuff that father has loaded up the hearth with crackles, blazes. Up the great chimney's throat leap the dogs of flame, giving warmth, light and cheer. Each boy and girl goes to his own or her own room, the one that they had before they went away, and then they come downstairs to supper that mother has prepared. Among other things, creamed chicken, great yellow-legged, yellow-skinned fowls, with yellow cream in which they have been smothered; baked potatoes, soda biscuit, Dutch cheese, coldslaw, jellies, jams, honey and pumpkin pie or jelly cake, or both, twice helpin', if you desire.

Women who haven't touched a dishrag in years pick up the table, wash and wipe the dishes to help mother and Bethany, who are pretty weary from their week's work. Mother was pretty tired, she thought, before they came. There were some big circles under her eyes, but, my! what a change. She looks as young and animated as the first night the crane was hung in that same fireplace. She beams with joy.

With difficulty the youngsters are restrained from peeking behind the curtain. It is active work to keep them away. There is a very short program, consisting of "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," in which all joined, singing heartily. Father, too, who never could carry a tune, sang the words to the only tune he knows lustily. One of the grandchildren spoke "'Twas the Night Before Christmas." After that the Doxology was sung as you seldom have heard it. Then the youngsters were all sent out in the kitchen, and father was set to guard the portal. This he did by sitting down on the kitchen floor, with his back against the door, while the grandchildren crawled all over him. The sheets are removed, the candles lighted and the tree is a blaze of glory.

"All ready," says Aunt Martha, who is master of ceremonies, and father opens the door. There is not the rush that was anticipated. There is a chorus of "Oh's" and "My's" as the little ones advance slowly toward the awe-striking spectacle, the ejaculations accompanying discoveries of things that they wonder if they are for them. Aunt Martha distributed the things under and on the tree. She removes a package and calls the person's name on it, who rises, goes and gets it, and it must be undone and inspected by all who care to before another one is given. The presents on the tree are from parents to children and from children to one another. The things that Santa brings they bang up their stockings for.

READY FOR THE MORROW

It is nearly 11 o'clock, and the mothers put the little children to bed, to be ready for the big tomorrow. Their stockings are hung by the chimney with care, and they trundle off to dream of a toy-ladened sleigh, with visions of St. Nick and his marvelous pack. They start up in the night, strain their ears for the light-falling hoofs of the reindeer on the roof or listen to the good saint sliding down the chimney. The men remain about the fireplace and later the women join them. The smoke of pipe and cigar fills the room. Reminiscences are exchanged, and the whereabouts of the former boys and girls of the neighborhood are particularly inquired into, as well as the old neighbors. It is surprising to hear of the recent number of deaths of the older generation, which cause the assembled family to be especially grateful that they made the effort and sacrifice, as in some cases, to come home this year. Father reads a favorite chapter in the Bible and offers a prayer of praise and thanksgiving that the family circle is yet unbroken, after which all, armed with candles, say their good nights and go up to their rooms, after filling to repletion the little stockings, and turn in on feather beds to sleep a sleep they have hardly known since last they were there. The house is quickly in slumber, all but mother. She lies looking out across the snow-ladened fields, gliating under the full moon of a cloudless sky, too happy to sleep and fearing to drop off, afraid she will forget; she begrudges the time to be lost.

December 25. The stair clock has just struck 6. A little tousled head rises above the bedclothes, rubs its eyes and digs its bedfellow in the short ribs. "Is it time to get up?" he whispers. "Mebbe he hasn't come yet, and we'll scare him away," is the reply. There is a suppressed giggle from the hall, which indicates that some girls are stirring. Finally the old house rings with peal on peal of childish laughter, and the children, in their nightdresses and bare feet, scamper down the stairs to the living room. Every stocking is bulging. "He's been here! He's been here!" is the enthusiastic cry, and "My stocking's full!" shouts one, "And mine!" "And mine!" is the echoing call that wakens the whole house. Bethany throws more dry stuff on the dying embers. The room again blazes with light and warmth, while each grandchild is drawing things from his well-filled stocking amid shouts of triumph, which indicate that his patron saint had brought him just what he asked for. It is a faith that is apropos of the day.

After breakfast of home-made, pure pig pen sausage and buckwheat cakes the color of a pheasant's wing, golden maple syrup from father's "summeries bush," hot muffins and fruit cookies the size of tea plates—"filled with bugs," the children say—and a cup of coffee and cream that looks as if it was just poured from a sunset, the women put the house to rights and do the upstairs chamber work. The youngsters go out by the henhouse and build a snow fort. From under dripping eaves they pack snowballs and fill the magazine of the redoubt with "soakers." Then they come in and dare the fathers to come out and take the fort. The challenge is greedily accepted. Time is given the sires to load up, and the skirmish line approaches cautiously, dodging the minie, cannon and mortar balls coming their way in confusing numbers and aggravating precision. They are under orders not to waste any ammunition, but wait until they can see the whites of their progeny's eye before firing. They advance under a merciless fire, but not that close before they are shooting volley after volley and storming the redoubt [illegible] several times they almost gain the rampart, but are driven back by an enfilading fire. Finally a rally is made for the last assault. On comes the attacking party with a wild shout, answered by a storm of shell from the fort and a wild whoop as children's reinforcements turn their right flank and pour in such a galling fire that the line breaks, stampedes and is in utter rout. Across the road to the barn the demoralized column flees, the youngsters in hot pursuit and doing great damage to the stragglers. The broken column takes refuge in the barn, holding the door, and through a crack waves a flag of truce. The surrender is accepted, but unconditionally, the vanquished not even being allowed to retain their side arms.

About 2 o'clock the Christmas dinner that mother prepared is served. There is the turkey, of course, done to a turn, with oyster dressing and a rich brown gibiet gravy, which no other woman that you know can make. There are mashed potatoes and turnips, creamed onions, cabbage salad, pickled beets and sliced green tomato pickles, currant and crabapple jelly and other spreads, tarts, mince pie, with its seventeen "ingredients," and the fruit cake. There is eating till little girths and bigger ones wished they were larger or more elastic.

Then all hands go back to the fireplace, the heart of the house. There are sputtering apples along the hearth, the varieties you liked best when you were young. There are pitchers of foaming cider on the table, big pans of buttered popcorn, platters of delicious molasses candy, all of which you are to lunch on toward night, because there will be no room or time for supper.

LOVED AND LOST ONES

Dear old Aunt Patience has come over to dinner and to spend the evening. Christmas is a sad time for her, ever since Uncle Wall was killed in the woods, just before Thanksgiving, and her two little boys, all she had, lay stark and dead from diphtheria the Christmas Day following. None of us know what she would have done if it hadn't been for mother's maiden sister, Aunt Martha. She is always on hand when any of us are sick, going about like the blessed angel of mercy she is. Present at all the births, at all the deaths, in joy, sickness and sorrow, she has ever been the family's tower of strength. What Aunt Patience would have done when the crushing blow fell without her none of us know. None of her other sisters dared even to go to the funeral on account of fear of carrying contagion to their little ones, and Aunt Martha was chief nurse, chief mourner and chief [illegible] and assistant undertaker.

It was several years ago that the blow fell on Aunt Patience. She has sort of never [illegible]. The doctor says they are slight cerebral [illegible], forerunner of a stroke. In the midst of festivities, particularly around the holiday season, like as not, suddenly her eyes become riveted on a fixed spot, and there rings from her lips an almost clarion cry, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men." Aunt Martha says maybe the doctor is right in his diagnosis, but she thinks that there are times when the strong spirit in Aunt Patience's frail body overcomes the intervening space between this world and the place of departed spirits, and that she is then in close contact and communion with her loved and lost. That it seems almost too bad to bring her back, but it is our duty and hers.

In the midst of the joyousness Aunt Patience's voice rings out the Christmas message, high and clear. A hush falls on the [illegible]. All bow their heads, the women weep[illegible]. Aunt Martha rises and hastens to her side. She places her hand on the sufferer's pulse and there passes from the mourning one, who has no child to die, a message of the strongest possible human sympathy to one who has loved and lost. She puts Aunt Patience's bonnet on, ties it under her chin, slips her wrap about her, places her arm around her waist, and, sustaining, leads her up the moon-flooded highway to her own home, puts her in bed, gives her ginger tea, places hot bricks at her feet and sits at her bedside till her breathing becomes normal, and then curls down on the sofa, drawn close to the bed, to watch the night out.

December 26. The farewells are spoken. The percherons slip down the hill, around the bend, out of sight with their precious load. Father turns and puts his arm around mother, who lays her tear-stained cheek on his shoulder, and he leads her back to the settle, and the childless couple enter on another year.

Please, God, may there be many more years in store for them.

REPAIRS ATTENDED TO

Great Peace River District Beyond Edmonton As Seen Through A Surveyor's Glass

A. W. Ponton Engaged by the Dominion Government in Extending Fifth Meridian North—Corrects Erroneous Impressions of Canada's Vast Hinterland.

MOOSE AS THICK AS CATTLE

EDMONTON, December 12.—(Special.)—After nearly two years spent in survey work in the northern part of the province, A. W. Ponton, of Macleod, Dominion land surveyor, returned to the city this week for supplies, and will not go north again until spring. He is very enthusiastic over the possibilities of the great north country tributary to the Peace River, and he undertakes to correct several misconceptions that have arisen regarding this country.

Mr. Ponton has been engaged for the past two years in extending the fifth meridian northward. He went up with a party in June, 1907, and commenced his survey work at township 76. During the first season he extended the line northward as far as Wabiscaw river. Mr. Ponton says that this is not the correct way to spell the word. The correct word is "Wahpescow," an old Indian word meaning a "lake with wavy shore." The early part of last winter was spent in transporting supplies to the Red River, a tributary to the Peace, and cutting pack trails through a wild unbroken country. Last summer he extended the line to within a short distance of the Peace. Mr. Ponton states that the new map of the Peace river district recently issued was incorrect in some particulars. Most of the rivers and lakes are marked too far to the west on the map. Another error was shown in the location of Birch river, which flows into Lake Clair. According to the map there was a large area which was not drained at all. Upon investigation Mr. Ponton found that this river ran much closer the Peace than was shown on the map, and provides a good drainage for the whole of that district. These errors crept in because when the map was made but little was known of the country beyound a few broad outlines. As the country is sub-divided, however, more will be learned regarding the physical features and a new and more correct map will be issued.

EXCELLENT AGRICULTURAL COUNTRY

Mr. Ponton states that the greater portion of the Peace river district is well suited for agricultural purposes, or will be as soon as a little attention is paid to drainage. The soil is undoubtedly good and there is not, as was reported, a hardpan bottom, that would make a cold wet soil. Mr. Ponton has samples of some of the soil with him as proof of his assertions. Throughout the district between the Athabasca and Peace rivers, there is a great deal of country that Mr. Ponton states is called muskeg. He claims, however, that there is no real muskeg in the Peace River district, and the worst it can be called is a spruce swamp. Heavy growths of moss retain the moisture just like a sponge; but on the removal of this moss, the land drains off and becomes dry. The moss is also the cause of the destructive fires which periodically sweep the country, as it will hold fire for months and the first favorable wind starts a blaze. This country can all be drained comparatively easily, as there are a large number of natural water courses and an ample fall for drainage.

One of the greatest propositions which the north country is up against at present is to secure better transportation facilities to aid in the development of the country. In order to open up the country there are two methods of procedure, both of which will cost considerable. One of these is to build a railway into this country and the other to construct a good road north from Athabasca Landing. To build such a road direct north would prove very expensive, as it would have to cross the Pelican Mountains, and a large tract of swampy land. Mr. Ponton's idea would be for northern travelers to go down the Athabasca river as far as Grand rapids. From that point a good road might be built northwest to Fort Vermilion or to the Chutes. There would be ample feed and water along the route for the settlers' stock. With proper management he believed such a road could be constructed for about $35,000. This would be a great boon to the country as it would give settlers a direct and comparatively easy method of entering that country, and would do duty until it would pay to build a railway. At the present time it is possible for land hunters with pack horses to enter this country by means of the trails made by his survey party, the trip occupying about three weeks.

THE IMMEDIATE SETTLEMENT

While the vast country between the Athabasca and Peace Rivers is attractive to experienced people, Mr. Ponton states that the country immediately north of the Peace at the Chutes is more suitable for immediate settlement. From the Peace River to the Caribou Mountains there is a stretch of partly open prairie about 20 miles square that is excellent for agricultural purposes. Grains and vegetables flourish in this district even now and as the country becomes better settled the danger from early frosts in the fall of the year will disappear. Settlers around St. John, Vermilion and other points on the Peace River are impatiently waiting for their land to be surveyed. This cannot be done, however, until the meridians are produced northwards. This work is being done as rapidly as possible.

There is plenty of game in this Peace River country. Moose tracks are thick, and Mr. Ponton states that last winter some of the Indian hunters killed as many as 20 or 30 during the winter. Moose are as plentiful as cattle in that country, indeed, Mr. Ponton stated that there were more moose in the Peace River district than there were cattle in the whole of Western Canada.

The Peace River district is not a good tie country as there is very little jack pine, which is used extensively for ties. As jack pines grow on sandy soil this is another proof that the land in that country is not light and sandy, but is good for agricultural purposes. There is, however, plenty of small timber which is good for building purposes and firewood. The Peace River country offers a great many advantages to the settlers and will undoubtedly be one of the best parts of the Dominion when it is opened up. Not only is the soil productive and the country rich in mineral wealth, but there is also plenty of good hay for stock, wood for building purposes and firewood, fish and game for food, and all the things so necessary to the pioneer settler.

A FEW ADVANTAGES OF THE Diamond Calk Horseshoe

It saves time—it saves money—it saves your horse. The calk being adjustable, the shoe has not got to be removed to be re-sharpened.

The calk being made of case-hardened steel and being triangular, having three sharp edges, it has been tested out to more than equal 9 ordinary re-sharpened shoes.

The Shoe, and all the parts are made of the best material. The fittings—that is the calks, clamps and cap screws—are renewable at very small cost, while the shoe itself is practically indestructible.

SOME OLD TIME CHRISTMAS GAMES THAT DELIGHT THE HEARTS OF THE YOUNG AND OLD

With the coming of Christmas the young folk and many of the older ones too will again revert to the merry games which have been handed down from the past ages. Many of the merriest games which were once popular have for ever passed away, but a few of the long list formerly kept up are yet known to many. Among them are:

Hot Cockles.

"Hot Cockles" was much in favour. It was a species of blind man's buff, in which the blinded one knelt down, and being struck behind, had to guess who struck the blow. The poet Gay thus describes it:

As hot Cockles once I laid me down,
And felt the weighty hand of many a clown,
Buxamo gave me a gentle tap, and I
Quick rose, and read soft mischief in her eye.

Questions and Answers.

Another game was called "Questions and Answers." It is mentioned in an old book with the title "Round About Our Coal Fire," published in the early part of the eighteenth century. It perhaps perished from its very inquisitiveness, for the commander could oblige his subject to answer any lawful question he might put to them, under the penalty of paying any forfeit he might choose to lay on the delinquent.

Fox I' the Hole.

Quaint old Herrick three times mentions a game called "Fox I' the Hole," but it cannot be gathered from what he says how it was played.

Of Christmas sports the wassail bowl
That's tossed up after the Fox 'i the hole.

Perhaps it was a relation of "We'll Catch a Fox, and put him in a box." A phrase used in the game of "A Hunting we will go."

Games of Cards.

Cards furnished several old-fashioned games. One is mentioned by Scott in his graphic picture of Christmas Eve told in "Marmion," as the vulgar game of "Post and Pair." It is also mentioned by many of our old writers, amongst whom may be quoted Jonson, in his "Masque of Christmas."

Now Post and Pair, Old Christmas Heir,
Doth make a jingling sally;
And wot you who, 'tis one of my two Sons, card makers in Pur Alley.

It seems that three cards were dealt to every player, and the excitement of the game consisted in each person vying or betting on the goodness of his own hand. A pair of royal aces was the best hand—from this the game is also known as Pair Royal—and then the other cards according to their order. The modern game most resembling it is called "Commerce."

Noddy.

Another game was "Noddy" which was in great request at this season. In an old work, Father Christmas is represented as speaking to his children of the games of that time, and says, "I leave them wholly to my eldest son 'Noddy,' whom, during his minority, I commit to the custody of a pair of knaves and one and thirty." "Poor Richard's Almanack" for 1755 notices the game thus:

Some folks at dice and cards do sit,
To lose their money and their wit;
And when the game of cards is past

Ruff.

One more card game played was "Ruff," otherwise known as "Cross Ruff," and "Trump." This game was an ancient form of whist, and played by two against two or three against three. This practice, as well as others is alluded to in another quotation from "Poor Robin's Almanack," 1663. Christmas to hungry stomachs gives relief,
With mutton, pork pies, pastries and roast beef,
And men at cards spend many idle hours,
At loadum, whisk, cross ruff and all fours.

Until the reign of Henry VII. people had enjoyed immunity from interference with regard to the use of playing cards, but this monarch enacted a statute prohibiting the apprentices from indulging in the game, except during the Christmas holidays, and then only under the roof of their respective masters. This was confirmed with due severity by Henry VIII. Representation of national sports must, however, necessarily be transitory, and as each generation passed away the love of cards was transmitted in succession. They became an indispensable adjunct to Christmas entertainments, and the Squire of Queen Anne's time possessed, we are told, an almost superstitious regard for cards, never playing till the festive season came around, and then the family pack was produced from the mantel-piece with due solemnity. Stevenson, an old writer of Charles the Second's time, says: "The country maid leaves half her market, and must be sent again if she forgets a pack of cards on Christmas Eve."

Dun in the Mire.

A diversion that caused much frolic was "Dun in the Mire," and was played thus:

A log of wood representing "Dun" or the cart horse, was brought into the middle of the room. Then the cry was raised that "Dun has stuck in the Mire," and two of the company went to pull him out either with or without ropes. These called others to their assistance till the whole company, perhaps, were making a great show of lifting and pulling, the merriment really arising from the sly efforts of each to let the log fall on his neighbour's toes. Old writers often mention the game, and our great dramatist, in "Romeo and Juliet" act 1; scene 4, makes Mercutio say to Romeo:

Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word,

Handy Dandy.

"Handy Dandy" was a simple game. One of the party concealed something in his hand; if his friend guessed rightly in which hand it was, he won the article, if wrongly, he lost an equivalent. This is a schoolboy game now-a-days, but it was sufficiently important then to be noticed by Piers Plowman, by Brown in his Pastoral, who tells us how "boys with pibbles play at Handy Dandy," and in "King Lear," act 4, scene 6, Shakespeare alludes to it when he makes King John say to Gloucester; "Look with thine ears—see how yon justice rails upon you simple thief. Hark in thine ear; change places; and handy dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?"

Shoeing the Wild Mare.

Herrick mentions another game, "Shoeing the Wild Mare," about the precise nature of which antiquarians differ. Brand in his "Popular Antiquities," says that it appears that the wild mare was simply a youth so-called, who was allowed a certain start, and who was pursued by his or her companions with the object of being shod, if he, or she, did not succeed in outstripping them. Most likely the shoeing was done in some rough fashion, but this is Herrick's allusion to it:

Christmas sports, the wassail bowl,
Or blind man's buff, and of the care,
That young men have to shoe the mare.

Cap Verse

Another game, more difficult, one would think two centuries ago than now, was "Cap Verse," in which one gave a word or line to which another had to find the rhyme on pain of forfeit. This pastime, sometimes called "Cento Rhymes," is capable of affording in modern times a very great amount of amusement when material is plentiful.

The Game of Goose

For the children, there was introduced in bye-gone days the game of "Goose." Goldsmith has, in his "Deserted Village":

The pictures framed for ornament and use,
The twelve good rules, the Royal Game of Goose,

Strutt says in his "English Games and Pastimes" that it was played by two persons, although it readily admitted of many more, and was well calculated to make the young people sharp at reckoning the sum of two given numbers. The table was about the size of a sheet almanac, and was divided into sixty-two compartments, arranged in a spiral form, with a large open space in the centre marked with the number 63, the other compartments being numbered from 1 to 62 inclusive. The game was played with two dice, each player throwing in turn and marking with a counter whatever number the dice cast up. Thus, if there was a four and a five he marked nine, and so on until the game was completed. The number 63 had to be reached exactly, and should the player exceed it, he had to reckon back and throw again in his turn.

Blind Man's Buff.

"Blind Man's Buff," if learned folks speak true, may claim a vast antiquity. The first blind man, it is said, was Polyphemus, the cave-dwelling giant whom Ulysses met on his wanderings, and who ate Ulysses' men. Thereafter, as all schoolboys ought to know, Ulysses made the giant drunk and pushed out his one eye with a pointed stick. Then the first blind man's buff began. Ulysses and his men had to get out of the cave. They did it by fastening themselves under the bellies of the giant's sheep, one man to each sheep, and as the giant felt only the sheep's backs, they all won safe away.

Activity In Building

Permits For Year Totalled Over $417,000; The Figure Is Surprisingly Large; Compares Favourably With Last Year

THE PEOPLE WHO ARE BUILDING UP THE CITY; LIST OF THE NEW BUILDINGS CONSTRUCTED HERE DURING THE SEASON JUST PASSED

The building permits up to Dec. 2nd of this year reach the somewhat astonishing total of $417,365.00, in spite of the generally accepted statement that the building activity this year was not nearly as great as in 1907. True there is considerable difference in the totals, as the total amount expended in building last year was $761,321. As against this, however, must be set the fact that last year was an abnormal one because of the many large buildings that were constructed at a cost that swelled the figures enormously. There were the new armouries which alone contributed $125,000, the new Collegiate Institute, which was responsible for over $80,000 more, the extension of the Canadian General Electric Works, the new Roman Catholic Church, the enlarging of the North Ward school, and other big buildings, which tended to boost the total to nearly the three-quarter million mark. This year there were practically no large contracts, in view of which fact the total is indeed surprising, and indicates that the building trade has been in a most healthy condition in the past season. All over the city new dwellings have been constructed, and a walk through the outlying districts reveals signs of much activity during the year.

Below is a list of the new houses and buildings constructed during the year, with a few of the more important improvements made. The total number of permits up to December 2 was 245, so that it will be seen that many of the smaller alterations and improvements made are not mentioned in this summary:

GOES UP FOR TRIAL

Sufficient Evidence Against Chas. Bowen to Warrant Magistrate Edmison Taking This Step in Havelock Seduction Case.

IS FREE ON BAIL OF $2,000

"Committed for trial" was the outcome of the trial yesterday at Havelock, against Chas. Bowen, of Belmont township, who was charged by a young lady named Miss Parcels with seduction under promise of marriage. County Magistrate Edmison went to Havelock yesterday and held court there. When the testimonies were given he considered there was sufficient evidence to commit Bowen, who will have the option of appearing at the Sessions in the Spring, or before His Honour Judge Weller without a jury. He was given his freedom on $2,000 bail, $1,000 by himself and two sureties for $500 each. The case has aroused considerable interest in Havelock and vicinity on account of both parties being widely known.

FROM LOVESICK TO PETERBORO' ON FOOT— A GOOD FORTY MILES

A forty-mile tramp down from Lovesick Lake is something out of the ordinary in these days of electric trains, autos and flying machines. Mr. J. Johnston who has a valuable tract of wooded land in that neighbourhood and has a number of men engaged in cutting it started to walk home on Thursday expecting that before he got far on his journey he would meet with some one who was driving south. But as is usually the case when you want something you cannot find it when ordinarily it is staring you in the face, Mr. Johnston had to walk nearly all the distance.

THE PETERBOROUGH HISTORICAL SOCIETY HOLD ANNUAL MEETING, ELECT THEIR OFFICERS AND DECIDE UPON THEIR PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Historical Society was held in the Collegiate Institute last night, although there was not a very large attendance. The many other attractions affected the attendance considerably. However, the new officers were elected and considerable time was profitably spent in discussing ways and means of making the society more beneficial to the members and of bringing it more prominently before the people. It was decided to broaden the scope of the society so that scientific subjects may be taken up as well as historical. A committe was appointed to map out a programme of subjects (historical and scientific,) upon which papers will be prepared and read to the society during the winter months.

It is also proposed to hold meetings at least once a month, and probably every two weeks. The papers will be prepared by local people for the greater part, although several outside speakers will be brought in.

The president, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, read his annual address, which was as follows:

To the Officers and Members of the Peterborough Historical Society.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I have not prepared a report for the annual meeting, but there are several points I wish to bring before your notice this evening, and will be very glad to hear your views.

The late secretary-treasurer, Mr. T. Wallace, having removed to Toronto, a meeting was held on Nov. 19th, to appoint a successor, which resulted in the appointment of Mr. W. J. Dunlop, in whom I feel assured we have a most efficient officer.

It is now two years since any dues were collected from members, and the treasury, although not quite empty, is in need of funds to successfully carry on its proper function.

It is necessary to discuss the advisability of continuing as an Historical Society, as well as our relations with the Ontario Society, with which we are affiliated, or to re-organize as a purely Museum Board. If the former is decided on, it is essential that a strong and active Board of Management be elected, so that interest may be aroused and maintained.

If it were not for the Museum the society would scarcely have an excuse for existence. Certainly the Museum has continued to grow and the valuable collections deposited there have increased in number and value, notwithstanding the apathy shown by many members.

The society has enjoyed the use of the building at Inverlea for the past twelve years, through the generosity of Mr. Richard Hall, practically free of expense, and it is noticeable that by far the largest proportion of visitors are from outside the city.

Owing to the establishment by the Provincial Government of one of the Normal Schools in Peterborough, and the enlargement of the field of education in the Collegiate Institute, Public and Separate Schools, the usefulness of the museum has increased many fold, the collection therein containing many valuable and rare specimens. On the teaching staff of these schools are gentlemen of highly scientific attainments who have expressed their intention of using the exhibits for instructional purposes, which we as members should appreciate.

The register of exhibits commenced some years ago should be completed up to date, from which a convenient catalogue and a general classification can be made, which is most desirable and necessary for the proper study of subjects.

As this is the annual meeting of the society, it is now in order to elect the officers and committees, and it is to be hoped that with a strong and active board we may have a prosperous year.

R. A. S. HAY,
President.

An interesting discussion, participated in by Col. Rogers, Mr. A. J. Keyes, Mr. G. A. Cornish, Dr. Burnham and Mrs. Birdsall, followed the reading of the address. It was agreed that, as the Museum side of the society's activities had been stressed in the past, it would be well to pay more attention to the historical interests. All were agreed that monthly meetings should be held at which historical and scientific subjects would be treated of and discussed.

It was decided that more attention should be given to Provincial and National history than had been in the past. Mr. G. A. Cornish, of the Normal school, agreed to give the paper at the first of these meetings to be held in January, and a program committee was appointed to arrange for monthly meetings for the season.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows:

Hon. President—Col. R. C. Rogers.
President—T. A. S. Hay.
1st Vice-president—Dr. Burnham.
2nd Vice-pres.—Richard Hall.
3rd Vice-pres.—Mr. G. A. Cornish.
Sec.-Treas.—W. J. Dunlop.
Executive Committee—Col. Rogers, G. A. Cornish, A. J. Keyes, Mrs. Birdsall, Dr. Burnham, Inspector Mowat, J. E. Hodgson.
Museum Committee—Mr. E. Elcome, G. A. Cornish and the secretary.
Programme Committee—T. A. S. Hay, W. J. Dunlop, Col. Rogers, G. A. Cornish, S. J. Keyes.
Auditor—Frank Adams.

It was moved by Col. Rogers, seconded by Mr. Cornish, that the President and the Secretary be authorized to secure a canvasser to collect the yearly dues of fifty cents per member.

TERMS THAT EXPIRE

Four School Board Members and One Water Commissioner—Mr. Matthews Will Be a Candidate Again—Mr. Ackerman Undecided.

TO TALK OF NEW BLOOD

This year the terms of four of the present Board of Education expire, but this does not mean that they will not be candidates again for the honors. Those whose two-year terms conclude on Dec. 31st, are, Messrs Robt. Fair, W. S. Robinson, B. F. Ackerman and Dr. M. A. Morrison. Mr. Fair has occupied the seat at the head of the table during the past year and he has decided to again become a candidate for the School Board should there be a contest. Mr. B. F. Ackerman is yet undecided. So far as can be learned the other two mentioned will also be in the field. Dr. Morrison has been chairman of the Collegiate Institute Committee, and Mr. B. F. Ackerman, chairman of the Property Committee.

The members of the Board who have another year before them are: Messrs. D. W. Dumble, John Crane, W. F. Nelson, Dr. Burnham, W. H. Hill and Louis M. Hayes, the latter being appointed by the Separate School Board. His term does not end until Jan. 1st, of 1910.

Up to the present no prospective candidates have been mentioned but, of course, there is plenty of time before nomination day.

The term of Mr. T. F. Matthews, water commissioner, terminates this year. Speaking to the Examiner today Mr. Matthews stated he would again be a candidate. The commissioners have taken up the question of a new dam and pumping station which they contemplate erecting, and Mr. Matthews desires to assist in finishing the work.

Property Committee Has Another Plan Of Solving The Isolation Hospital Matter

Have Written to Managements of Both Hospitals Endeavouring to Get a Small Building at Each for a Different Disease.

WHAT THEY PROPOSE

A new plan of solving the Isolation Hospital question has come to light, but whether it will materialise is something that can not be predicted as yet. The Property Committee of the council, who are trying to get at some solution, have written the authorities of the two hospitals, suggesting that a small isolation building be built somewhere near these institutions. It is understood that the committee considers that the largest item of the cost is not the erection of the building, but the maintenance after it is opened for use. The exact nature of their suggestion is not known, but the city would pay a certain amount for each patient who could not pay for himself, and in other ways the city would bear its share of the expense. Nurses from these establishments could be chosen to look after the patients alone. Another feature would be that one of the annex buildings would be for scarlet fever, the other for diphtheria. These are a few of the suggestions, which, it was said, were made the managements of the two hospitals. Ald. Braidburn stated this morning that as yet no reply had been received.

Arrangements Are Being Made For Board of Trade Banquet

The annual banquet of the Board of Trade will be held during the first month of the new year. This was decided on Thursday evening, when it was moved by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Mr. J. H. Larmonth, that Dr. Morrison, president; Ald. Gillespie, vice-president; Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, secretary; Messrs. F. D. Kerr, J. H. Larmonth and Ald. Bradburn be a committee to arrange for the banquet. A good speaker will be secured and a successful affair is anticipated.

Rural Dean Langfeldt was requested to be the special preacher to-morrow, but unfortunately could not accept on account of parochial duties.

Population Of Saskatoon Has Increased From 50 In 1901 to 7000 At Present Time

Wonderful Growth of This Rapidly Advancing Western Town—The Harvest Number of Saskatoon "Phoenix" an Interesting One —20,000 Copies Sold.

ADVERTIZING THE CITY

An interesting number of the "Phoenix," of Saskatoon, one of the leading dailies of the central west, and the most prominent paper in Saskatoon, has recently been issued under the name of a special harvest number. A copy has been received at the Examiner office. There are thirty-two pages and 20,000 copies were turned off the press. The people of the town sent them throughout the country to their friends, thus making an excellent advertisement for their town. It states that in 1901, according to Dominion statistics, Saskatoon had a population of 50; by steadily growing each year the present population is 7,000, which is considered a rapid increase and the residents of this town expect to grow at the same rate.

ARE SHIPPING ENGINE

Has Been Undergoing Repairs at C. G. E. Works—To Be Returned to Shawinigan Falls, Quebec.

WAS TOO HEAVY FOR FLAT CAR

The electric engine that was brought to the C. G. E. Works to be repaired, is now completed and is ready for shipment. From the information gained it was brought here about six months ago to be electrically equipped. Plans had to be made for the motor and the patterns prepared from this. The work was then proceeded with and during the last few days it was being loaded on a flat car. It has been learned that the car would not support it, as it is said to weigh about fifty-six tons. It may be returned as it came on its own wheels. Its destination is Shawinigan Falls, Que.

Enjoyable Concert Programme Given By "Onward" Young Ladies Bible Class

One of the most successful concerts of the season was that held in the George street Methodist Sunday school last night under the auspices of the "Onward" Young Ladies' Bible Class. The spacious school room was crowded to the doors with a delighted audience, who were most enthusiastic in their reception of those taking part and encores were numerous. The programme was a delightful one, being sufficiently varied to be always interesting and the audience evidently enjoyed every minute of it, judging by the applause. Every contributor was warmly received and the little ones Miss Greta Lebar and Miss Jone Callendar, had a particularly happy reception. The young ladies of the Onward Class and their teacher, Mrs. Jas. Stubbs are to be congratulated upon the great success of their efforts.

Rev. E. A. Pearson made a most acceptable chairman, and the programme was as follows:

WAS ALLOWED TO GO AFTER HAVING HAD A WEEK IN LOCAL JAIL

There was only one case at police court this morning, when a young man who is a veteran of the South African war was allowed to go by the magistrate. He was arrested a week ago on a charge of being drunk and was remanded for a week to allow of his sobering up. When he appeared this morning Magistrate Dumble expressed the hope that he had decided to conduct himself better in future. He had had time to think over the matter and the magistrate believed that he would turn over a new leaf if allowed to go.

CONCERT REPEATED ON MONDAY NIGHT BY REQUEST OF MANY

Owing to the splendid success of the concert given in St. Peter's Hall last night by the Separate school pupils, and to the fact that a large number of persons were turned away it has been decided to repeat it on Monday night. There are many of those who saw it last night who stated their intention of returning on Monday night so delighted were they with the performance. The proceeds of the concert go towards the equipment of the library at St. Peter's school. Reserved seat tickets are on sale at Mr. James Lynch's drug store.

THE CORE'S LANDING ANGLICAN CHURCH IS NEARING COMPLETION

The new stone church at Core's Landing, which is being built by Mr. G. F. Warde, of this city, is nearing its completion, though its occupation may be delayed till spring. When finished it will be one of the prettiest churches in this and other districts, artistic in its design and thoroughly ecclesiastic in its construction. It reflects great credit upon the ability of Mr. Warde as a designer and builder.

FIRES AND FIRE ALARMS.

With a ten thousand dollar fire department, pretty thoroughly equipped and well manned, one would think that our citizens would use it to the best advantage. But there seem to be some persons who do not know or, in the excitement of the moment, forget, that we have a paid fire brigade on tap, so to speak, every hour of the day or night, whose sole duty and, no doubt, pleasure, it is to respond promptly to fire alarms and render effective service in extinguishing, or preventing the spread of fire. Yet within the past day or two, two fires have broken out in the business portion of the city, but instead of ringing in an alarm or summoning the firemen, those interested, fought the flames themselves. Fortunately, in both these cases, the fire was put out. The persons concerned, however, took a great responsibility upon themselves, and ran a very serious risk. It was doubtless due more to good luck than effective work that the fires were stayed. At another time under other conditions which it would be nothing rare to have present, similar well-attended efforts of amateur firemen might be useless and a serious blaze might develop. The delay in summoning the firemen might give the fire a fatal headway and a serious conflagration might get under way in the thickly-built business section, whose end might be disastrously costly, while the fire brigade whose business it is to cope in the most effective manner possible with fire, through default of a prompt alarm being sent in may have been ignorant and idle within easy reach of the spot. With proper warning their presence would have been effectively felt. The moral is call upon and trust to the effective establishment provided and the sufficient force maintained for the express purpose of putting out fires. In no other event possible does the lesson of the motto "a stitch in time saves nine," apply so aptly as in case of fire control. The fire alarm boxes should be used for sending in alarms. While this use is the duty of citizens, it should be made much easier than it is now. Perhaps five persons in ten may know how to use the fire alarm keys. But the five ignorant may have first knowledge of a fire and the possibilities of delay in ringing in the alarm are evident. Would it not be well to have concise directions for sending in an alarm affixed to the boxes? These could be read in a few seconds and possibly fatal delay avoided. Cards might also be conspicuously posted in numerous places recording the exact location of the fire alarm boxes. What advantage will it be to spend thousands upon a first-class fire department, if the details, little, but essential to securing its prompt, and in nine cases out of ten, effective services are neglected? This is a good way to get the city into "Class A."

An epidemic of scarlet fever, and an isolation hospital would constitute an admirable conjunction of conditions.

THE BANK OF OTTAWA.

In another column is printed the report and accompanying statement of the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Ottawa. The reports presented furnish evidence of another successful outcome of another year of good management. The net profits for the year ending November 30, 1908, after deducting expenses of management and making necessary provision for interest due to depositors, unearned interest on current loans, and for all bad and doubtful debts and contingencies are $429,879.52. There was also a credit balance brought forward of $327,832.42, making a total of $757,712. This latter sum has been appropriated as follows:—Dividend of 10 per cent., paid quarterly, $300,000; in reduction of bank premises, $46,720.73, and a payment to the officers' pension fund of $5,000. The balance of undivided profit, $405,991.22, has been carried forward. A comparison with the statement for the year ending November 30, 1907, only helps to demonstrate the careful manner with which the affairs of the Bank of Ottawa have been administered. During the year the deposits increased by $1,096,647.05, and the assets from $32,353,934.97 to $33,524,891.58.

While note is made of the fact that the influence of the Bank of Ottawa is steadily expanding throughout the country it might not be amiss to refer to the fact that under the management of Mr. Hollingshead, the local branch is rapidly conquering the confidence of the farming community, as evidenced by the large and increasing business relations of the Bank with the farmers of the district.

The assets of the chartered banks of Canada amount to nearly a billion dollars—$926,017,529.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

"Canada has many things to be proud of. One of these is perhaps the best banking system in the world and one of the greatest banks in the world, the Bank of Montreal, which by virtue of its age, solidity, splendid record of achievement and the ramifications of its operations, is intimately associated with the financial fortunes of Canada and an object of interest to every class if not every individual of every community in the country.

The ninety-first annual meeting of the shareholders was held in Montreal on Monday, when the report of the directors for the year ending Oct. 31 last was submitted, which together along with the minutes of the proceedings will be found in another part of this issue of the Examiner, and as Sir Edward Clouston remarked in the course of his address, the financial statement discloses an exceptionally strong position, the percentage of immediately available assets having risen from 43 per cent. a year ago to 57 per cent. at present. The report shows that the profits for the year ending Oct. 31, 1908, after deducting charges of management and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, were $1,957,658.68, to which fell to be added $699,969.88, the balance at credit of profit and loss account at the corresponding date of 1907. The total profits available for disposal were thus $2,657,628.56. The dividend of 10 per cent. in the usual quarterly instalments absorbed $1,440,000, and after $1,000,000 had been credited to rest account, there remained a balance of $217,628.56 to be carried forward. The rest account now stands at $12,000,000, or only $2,400,000 less than the amount of capital stock. The two combined make a total of $26,400,000, a tangible evidence of the solidity of this great financial institution. Deposits bearing interest during the year reached $105,192,365.64, an increase of $17,000,000, as against current loans, other than call, of $94,762,020.73, a decrease of $16,000,000, a fact indicating that the depression in trade has restricted the employment of capital. That this depression has largely or will soon completely pass away is shown by the remarks of the President, Sir George Drummond, to the shareholders. He regarded the situation as much improved and expressed the belief that confidence had been largely restored, that credit is again good, that better times are at hand and that the outlook is extremely favourable. Sir Edward Clouston, at the meeting, after referring to the steadying effect of the late financial depression, said; "If our people will continue the conservative policy which is at present animating their conduct of business, we will emerge stronger and better in every way." When men like these, with their fingers continually on the pulse of finance, give such cheering assurances, the business world is well justified in taking courage.

We have had a little financial flurry, but it did not seem to affect the steady glacier-like advance of the Bank of Montreal, which stolidly persists in paying, be it business rain or shine, its regular dividend of ten per cent. Its business at large has prospered and to this prosperity the local branch in charge of Mr. A. Montizambert, has contributed a liberal proportion.

The people of Canada have to-day on deposit in chartered banks or savings banks the tidy rainy day sum of $650,126,232.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

Premier Goes to Montreal—Three New County Court Judges Appointed—Date of Opening of Parliament is Definitely Settled—House will Meet on January 20th.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—The Premier and Lady Laurier left to-day for Montreal where they will be the over-Sunday guests of friends.

An order in Council was passed yesterday appointing three new County Court Judges in Ontario to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Judge MacCallum of Manitoulin and Judge Boys of Barrie, and by the resignation of Judge E P. Clement of Essex, last year. The new County Court Judge of Manitoulin is Mr. C E Hewson, K.C., of Barrie. Mr. C J Mickle of Chesley is appointed to the Essex County Judgeship and Mr. E A Wismer of Essex takes the place of the late Judge Boys at Barrie. The principle has been followed in each case of making the appointment from outside the country where the new Judge will act.

At the meeting of the Cabinet yesterday afternoon, the date of the opening of the session of Parliament was definitely fixed for Wednesday, January 20th. It had been hoped that the new wing of the Commons building would be sufficiently completed to insure its being in readiness for the opening of the House on January 13, but it has been found necessary to allow an additional week for the contractor to finish up the work and have the new quarters for the Opposition members, Cabinet Ministers, press officials of the House, etc., ready for occupation. It is expected that the session will be a comparatively short one. The Government's legislative programme, as now contemplated, will not be a heavy one, the principal items on the agenda at present being the new insurance act, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth's bill to prevent corrupt payment of secret commissions, either in private or Government business; a bill to establish a separate portfolio of labour, a bill to extend the boundaries of Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, and a bill to amend the present rules of Parliamentary procedure with a view to expediting the transaction of public business and preventing waste of time in useless debate.

ENTHUSIASM AND FAT

These two, like oil and water, mix poorly. This does not imply fat men and women are not enthusiastic. They do down deep inside. But what does it amount to? These fat doesn't get excited. They can't transmute their enthusiasm into energetic action, so they might as well keep calm.

Thus it is that fat people generate much steam for life's work, only to find the load too much for the horsepower, and as a result thousands of both sexes get just so far and no further. "Much they care," says the uninitiated slim one. But they do care. They care keenly for financial, mental, social, business fait hunting, straight-front and comfort reasons, and that is why Marmola Prescription Tablets have been so heartily welcomed by the overweight classes. The reason is not far to seek. Marmola Prescription Tablets take off about a pound a day, in most cases, without interfering in any way with the takers table tendencies or his love of ease. To some, possibly, their absolute economy appeals. Thus one large cake costing seventy-five cents at any drug store or of the makers, The Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., direct, is said in itself alone to contain enough tablets to make a decided change in any one.

But there are merely surface reasons. Marmola checks the formation of fat by curing the fat forming tendency. The fat just slips away, as it were, without the sign of a wrinkle. Thus the work these tablets do is not injurious, it is natural. That is the real reason these tablets are so much appreciated. They are safe.

Chinese Conditions And Life Subject Of Address

Mrs. Goforth Tells of Honan, Where She Lived as a Missionary.

PROGRESS IN THE FAR EAST

Conditions existing in the far east were vividly described last night by Mrs. Goforth, a returned missionary. Honan, in China, was the subject and the Sunday school room of St. Paul's church, was well filled to listen to her.

She was here under the auspices of the St. Paul's W. F. M. S., who also invited the other missionary societies in the city to attend. Mrs. Goforth has been in China for many years, and has seen a great many changes take place in the manners, customs and habits of the Chinese. She was home in Canada some seven years ago and addressed many meetings. She is a very interesting speaker, and those who were present greatly enjoyed themselves. The lecture was illustrated by lime-light views, which assisted wonderfully in impressing upon them the importance of Chinese missionary work.

Mrs. Goforth dwelt particularly upon the old customs of the Chinese, which are now being rapidly done away with. Among these are the modes of travel, which are being superseded by railways; the old-fashioned dress and many other peculiar face characteristic of the Chinese. The custom of binding the young girls' feet is now only practised by the lower classes.

Western civilization is making rapid progress in China, and the natives are awakening to the advantages derived therefrom. The opium traffic, which has always been the curse of that nation, is now being curtailed to a great extent, and it is only a matter of time when it will be practically out of use. In speaking of opium, Mrs. Goforth related an experience she had had when travelling with a party. They went along all right until a certain hour of the day, when the Chinaman, who was pulling her cart, stopped and entered a small building. There he sat down and smoked his opium pipe and the party had to wait for two hours and a half until he had finished his smoke, and the sleep afterwards.

The Chinese possess great strength and can endure fatigure which would seem almost impossible for a human being. They also possess great intelligence once they are awakened, and drop their demoralizing and physique wrecking habits.

There never was a time when it was so important for the Christian Church to work the Chinese fields, and if neglected now the opportunity will be lost. In future the Church will have more than double the work and expense to bring the natives back if they are permitted to get the bad side of western life first.

In Honan the mission has met with great success. There are over one hundred adult members and several hundred young lady members, and all the various missions are growing equally as rapidly.

VICTORIA STATE RAILWAYS.

The railways in Victoria, Australia, are owned by the state. For a time the results were not satisfactory, but on July 1, 1903, they passed under the control of a commission of three, presided over by Mr. Tait, formerly connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The commissioners present an interesting comparison of the results for the five years prior to their assuming control, and the five years for which they are responsible. The gross revenue increased by $14,007,037, with an increase in working expenses of only $3,290,625, the net revenue benefit being $11,616,412. The special expenditures and charges in liquidation of extraordinary liabilities met by the commissioners out of revenue amounted to $3,398,715 as against only $781,705 paid in the preceding period, while the interest charges and expenses only increased by $407,147. Thus instead of a deficit of $6,947,966 paid out of the consolidated revenue of the state, the commissioners aided that fund to the extent of $2,644,292. Although the traffic train mileage was diminished by 4,451,679, the passengers carried increased from 263,186,154 to 284,149,961; the tonnage of goods carried rose by 2,497,015, and the tonnage of live stock carried by 279,560—the percentage of working expenses to gross revenue at the same time falling from 59.80 to 51.68.

The above exhibit makes a strong argument in behalf of public ownership of railways; provided of course, the management of the roads is placed in the hands of a competent non-partisan commission, and in effect provides that administration as effective as private management is provided.

The success of state owned public utilities, like matrimony, depends for success on the manner of administration.

PRESENTATION AT ST. ANDREW'S LADIES' AID

Mrs. Potter Given Purse of Gold—Services of Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. McClelland also Recognized.

A special meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's church, was held last night at the residence of the President, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, Charlotte street, to arrange for the Christmas decorations for the church. Advantage was taken of the meeting by a few of her friends, to present Mrs. Robinson with a beautiful fern in recognition of her work. A presentation was also made to Mrs. (Rev.) J. G. Potter, of a purse of gold, Mrs. A. Farlane reading the following address:—

Dear Mrs. Potter,—You fellow members of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's church, feel that this season of peace, good will and loving remembrance would be a fitting time to signalize our appreciation of the services you have rendered the church and ourselves as humble workers in its interests, and to express the sentiments of gratitude we feel, not only at this time, but have felt day by day throughout the year, for many years. You have been a sympathetic and valuable help in the work our society is striving to carry on. Not only have your energy and interest been effective means of promoting its objects, but your example of cheerful devotion and ready help, has been an inspiration to us all. Your hospitable home has been placed at our disposal for our meetings and you have in other ways — in every way possible—been a very great help to us and our work.

In slight recognition of the services you have so freely and fruitfully given, we solicit your acceptance of this purse of gold, accompanied by what you will perhaps heed in higher regard, our best wishes and prayers, not only for a pleasant holiday season but for a long lease of happy life, to be spent, as has been done in the past, and as the Master showed the way, in doing good.

Mrs. Potter responded, expressing her appreciation of the gift and of her desire to continue assisting in the work of the Ladies' Aid, and of her desire to see the work make greater progress in the future.

A few of the friends of Mrs. C. McClelland, who were there, presented her with a beautiful mahogany tabourette, referring to her continuous interest in the work of the church.

Refreshments were served afterwards and a very enjoyable time was spent.

EX-MAYOR WRITES OF THE CITY'S FINANCES

Compares Last Year With the Present—The Overdraft Question.

The following letter received yesterday was unavoidably held over until to-day:

Peterborough, Dec. 11, 1908.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—In the Review of the 3rd inst., there appeared a prominent news item comparing an overdraft in the city's finances on Nov. 30th of this year of $12,000, with an overdraft of $100,000 on the same date a year ago, and drawing the moral therefrom that the ratepayers evidently made no mistake in electing Mr. Rush as mayor. The article was so unfair and misleading that though seasoned to newspaper criticism, I thought it necessary to have the facts set right. I have been waiting since for the City Treasurer to complete his monthly return to the council, but in the meantime the editor has been good enough to withdraw any criticism of last year's mayor and council which might be involved. Truth, however, is always slow to catch up, and therefore I would ask you to publish the following summary of this year's finances compared with last year.

In the last Mayoralty election the chief charge made against me as mayor for 1907, was that I was extravagant and incapable in the management of the finances of the city, and the ratepayers were therefore urged to elect Mr. Rush, who was said to be a man capable of managing the finances. It is therefore doubly fair to examine the mayor's record on the financial side. I invite the ratepayers to enquire into the facts and I hope the newspapers will examine them fully and publish the results. Here are one or two for a beginning:

When Mayor Rush took office he found an overdraft of $138,423.45, made up as follows:

Sewers of 1905-6 allotted to
City Trust Com'rs	$ 23,000 00
School Buildings	49,984 93
Permanent improvements built or completed in 1907	65,413 97
Current account	24 55
	$138,423 45

The mayor of 1907, supported by the whole council, had decided to sell very few of the debentures because of the poor rates obtainable. The new mayor adopted the plan, one could not call it a policy, of selling everything at any old price, and did sell $190,520.70 worth of debentures at the interest rate of 4 3-4 per cent. What does that mean? It means an increase of 3-4 of one per cent. on the rate at which nearly all our debentures have been sold for several years. What does that amount to? It amounts to an addition to each year's taxes for the next thirty years of $1475, or a total of over $40,000 added to the taxes of the people of this city by the financial wisdom of the present mayor. It may be said that the rate will not come down again at 4 per cent. It is down now to 4¼ per cent., and if the city had those debentures to-day they could be sold at a rate which would save $28,000 to the taxpayers compared with the rate at which they were sold in the early part of this year. I invite the mayor to justify such financing over his own signature.

Now as to the Current Account,—the expenditure of the year's taxes on the year's business. The figures above quoted show that the overdraft about which there was such a howl a year ago amounted on Dec. 31st to less than $25. But it wasn't even that. After the close of each year there are many adjustments, arrears and accounts to be settled, and the result of the auditors' examination was to show a surplus in the current accounts of 1907 amounting to $6,545.50. So that fearfully extravagant mayor left behind him the largest surplus in the last ten years.

How does the record of the present mayor compare? The statement published a day or two after being presented to the council shows a surplus in the current account of $21,140.70. Against that balance there have to be paid in December, firstly, the balances due the School Boards and the City Trust, amounting to $21,288.45, and, secondly, the usual expenses for the month, which last year, without anything abnormal, amounted to $15,053.19. That means that the expenditure directed by the present capable mayor will exceed the largest tax-bill in the history of the city by over $15,000. That means that next year there will have to be a special levy of two mills over and above the present rate to pay the deficit created by one year of Mayor Rush's management. I again ask the mayor over his own signature, to justify such financing.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I want to say that I am prepared to discuss the management of the city finances at any public meeting.

Yours sincerely,
R. F. McWILLIAMS.

MAYOR RUSH REPLIES TO MR. McWILLIAMS

Explains Sale of Debentures and Deals With Possible Deficit.

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—I notice in the Review of last night a letter signed by R. F. McWilliams, which demands some attention on my part, in order to correct its misleading statements, and to give a correct idea of conditions which he misrepresents.

Much is made of the alleged loss sustained by the sale of debentures. There are two points in this connection. First, these debentures could have been sold early in 1907, and should have been sold by the mayor and council of that year. They could have been disposed of at that time at a lower rate of interest and a declined saving effected. If Mr. McWilliams holds me responsible for my connection with the sale of debentures, he must take the responsibility of the neglect which resulted in loss.

Secondly, we had to sell the debentures. The bank overdraft was so large that the bank insisted that it must be reduced. The debentures had to be sold and were sold on the best possible terms at the time, and by the Finance Committee, not by the mayor. I might say that the bank overdraft at the end of 1907 would not have been nearly as large had less work been done in the line of building sewers on streets where there were no water mains, when material was at its very highest, and labour hard to procure, work being so plentiful that year.

In regard to Mr. McWilliams' alleged deficit at the close of the present year it is to be said that this amount is very greatly exaggerated. If there should be any deficit it will be due largely to justifiable reasons. It will be accounted for by the fact that the expenditures on streets and bridges was abnormally large, and defensibly large for two reasons—the people have the benefit in the improvements represented by the expenditure, and the ratepayers were given employment. During the season as many as fifteen unemployed persons visited my office in one day asking for work. Was it better to spend considerable sums of the peoples' money in charity, or to give citizens employment on work on the streets which would, at least, represent value to the taxpayers? Then there were besides other considerable expenditures for which value was received, and which add to the total of the amount chargeable to this year's expenditure, and which will go to make a deficit at the end of the year, if there should prove to be one.

Of this fact there is a considerable doubt. The estimated deficit of $15,000 of ex-Mayor McWilliams, is liable to very great reduction. There will be to set against his estimate, $13,000 of uncollected taxes, of which between $11,000 and $12,000 may be available. Other incoming amounts will offset liabilities to a sufficient extent to remove any fear of a considerable deficit, which, if any, will be of comparatively small amount.

I do not wish to argue the question—merely to state the facts as they exist. The facts seem to me to show that this year's council acted to the best of its ability in protecting the city's interests in the matter of the sale of debentures forced upon it by the urgency of the bank and the neglect of last year's council. Under the circumstances the overdraft on account of street expenditure was justified by the conditions. It was a case of either charity or work and myself and the council preferred the expenditure of money for value received.

In conclusion, I may emphasize two points: the council of 1908 disposed of, to the best advantage, debentures, which could, and should, have been sold a year before by the council of 1907, on terms which would have prevented the loss represented by the practically forced sale of this year. The large overdraft on the streets was caused by giving employment to labour which gave substantial returns, instead of paying out money in charity, which would have tended to pauperise honest and worthy citizens, resting under the disadvantage of want of employment.

I might remark that last year's council arranged with the bank for current accommodation at a rate of six per cent. for 1908. This year's council has arranged with the bank for the accommodation of 1909 at five per cent.

Yours faithfully,
M. RUSH.

LARGE NUMBER ENJOY OPENING OF THE RINK

The Brock street rink was opened for the season last night and in spite of the soft snap, there was an excellent sheet of ice for the first skate of 1908-09 season. A section of the 57th Band was in attendance and rendered enjoyable music. The attendance was surprisingly large in view of the short notice given and the evening passed very pleasantly. The rink opened a week earlier this year than last as it was on December 18th that the doors of the Brock street structure were opened to the public last season. The slight drop in temperature to-day made it possible for Caretaker Thirnbeck to sprinkle the ice this morning and there is a good sheet available for the use of the skaters to-night.

DELIGHTFUL TIME AT THE "HOT-GUTS" DANCE

A most enjoyable function was the fancy dress dance under the auspices of Miss Pearl Lundy's dancing classes at the Conservatory of Music last night. Some fifty couples were present, and some beautiful costumes were worn, the effect being wholly charming. Delightful music was provided by Miss Gladman, whose work at the piano left nothing to be desired. The prize for the best ladies' costume was won by Miss Pretty while the gentleman's prize went to Mr. Jack Barstone. The patronesses of the affair were Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, Mrs. A H Stratton, Mrs. W H Bill, Mrs. Gliddon, Mrs. Palmer, and Mrs. G W Fastlen.

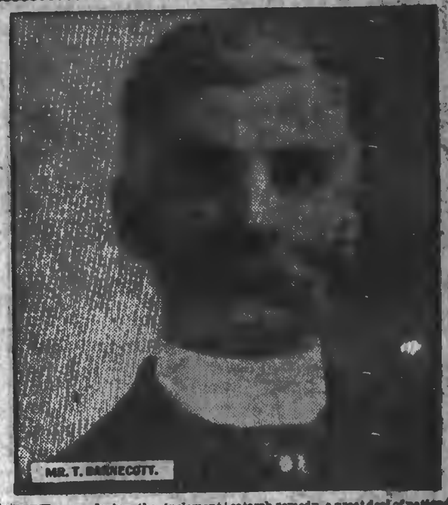
Pe-ru-na Promptly Relieves Severe Cold and La Grippe

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time and at little expense. Every time I take a cold, I take some Peruna, which makes me well again.

"I also induced a young lady, who was all rundown and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring.

"I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."



MR. T. BARNECOTT.

EVERY year, during the inclement weather of winter, there is an epidemic of la grippe. The disease is really catarrhal in nature, but from the form it assumes, has been commonly termed the "grip."

Splendid Remedy for La Grippe.

Mr. Frank H. Fielder, 218 Pleasant Ave., Montgomery, Ala., formerly principal of Haynesville High School, writes:

"I can truthfully say that Peruna is a splendid remedy for la grippe and a good tonic for building up the system."

La grippe is very tenacious when it once gets a firm hold upon the system, and in addition to a thorough, systemic catarrh remedy, a great deal of patience and persistence in the treatment are required to eradicate the disease.

Peruna, an internal catarrh remedy, is one of the best medicines ever devised to meet the exigencies of these cases. The large number of commendatory letters received by Dr. Hartman, the inventor of Peruna, in behalf of his remedy is proof sufficient of its value as a reliable medicine for the "grip."

Prompt Relief.

Mr. Frank Bauer, Minnesaka, Minn., writes: "I suffered with la grippe. My lungs felt as if knives were sticking in them. I took Peruna and in four days I was able to go out."

"The Best Concert Ever Given In St. Peter's School Hall"

Children Excel Past Successes in an Entertainment That Sent Away Largest Audience Yet—Delighted With the Drills, Choruses and Operetta.

REPEATED MONDAY EVENING

Probably the most delightful concert that has ever been given at St. Peter's School Assembly Hall was presented by the pupils of the Separate Schools last evening. The entertainment was a succession of delightful surprises from the opening chorus—"The Land of the Maple" — of one hundred boys' voices to the equally fine "Good Night" song. As each number was presented the children seemed to improve although the initial numbers were as well rendered as the last. The fact was that the ensembles grew prettier and the songs more effective as the programme unrolled itself with the result that the interest grew apace until the echo of the last note died away.

A Large Attendance

One of the features of the evening was the large attendance. Standing room even, was at a premium, and many were turned away. Without going into the details of each number, for one was as well executed as any of the others, the singing of the children was particularly fine and the nuns and teachers who have trained them had excellent material to work with, judging by the finished work in the choruses and drills. The costumes, stage settings and in fact every detail was excellent in taste and design and greatly enhanced the production of the various numbers. While the children accepted their parts in a most creditable manner, the greatest credit is due the Sisters of St. Joseph for the grand success of their efforts. The patience required to train so many little ones must have been equalled only by the inventiveness that was evident through the entire programme, which was as follows:—

Part I.

Boys' Chorus, "The Land of the Maple"—One Hundred Voices.
Instrumental Duet, "Tancredi," Rossini—Misses H Pearce and L Hatrick.
Song and Drill—Six Little Maids from Timbuctoo.
Sword Drill—Vatican Guards.
Action Song—Little Brownies.
Operetta—A Peaceful Assault.

Part II.

Instrumental Duet, "In Festal Array," Englemann—Misses K O'Brien and H Giroux.
Boys' Chorus—Merry Sailor Lads.
Sword Dance—Master E O'Shea.
Sunbonnet Drill—Sixteen Girls.
Song, "A Boy's Wealth"—Masters J Clancy and F Galvin.
Cantata—A Christmas Idyll.
Chorus—Good Night.
Accompanists—Misses A Sullivan, H Giroux, M Gorman.

Compliments of the Bishop

Of the special numbers the sword dance by Master O'Shea was cleverly performed and well merited the generous encore which it was accorded. He responded by dancing the Highland Fling. Particular mention is deserving Mr. V McCabe and Master E Tooley, who took leading parts in the Operetta. At the conclusion, His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, who was present, together with Mayor Rush and Rev. Father McColl, made a short speech commending the pupils and the Sisters on the very enjoyable evening which they had provided. Rev. Father McColl who suggested the concert was one of the most interested among the audience and was delighted with the manner in which the pupils acquitted themselves. The proceeds were for the library at the St. Peter's School.

What more appropriate Christmas present than 5 lbs., 10 lbs., 30 lbs. or 50 lbs. of "Salada" Tea in original cases? You can purchase this from your grocer in "Brown" Label at 30c. per lb., or "Blue" Label at 40c. per lb., or the very finest quality in "Gold" Label at 60c. per lb. Your gift will be appreciated three times a day as long as it lasts. 12, 15, 19

LOCAL MUSICIANS AT HASTINGS

Violinist and Pianist Contribute to Presbyterian Church Concert

Examiner Special.

Hastings, Dec. 12.—The elite in musical circles in Hastings village assembled last night at the Town Hall, on the occasion of the presentation of a most delightful concert, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church. The large attendance and the success of the function was very gratifying to those in charge. Every number was warmly received by the audience. Among those who contributed were Miss Julia Choate, violinliste, and Miss Fife, pianist both of Peterborough. Miss Choate, who is a member of the teaching staff of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, and who has a large class here, was given a flattering reception. The chief charms of the music of the violin were splendidly illustrated, and her selections during the evening were, judging from the manner in which they were received, greatly appreciated.

The piano numbers by Miss Fife were played with a daintiness of expression, which captivated her audience and made her presence on the programme very pleasing.

Miss Jessie Anderson, a talented local pianist and vocal soloist, acquitted herself admirably, as well as did Miss Fraser in the vocal selections. Mr. Chas. Plant's recitation and solo in costume, and contributions by the Male Quartette were other enjoyable numbers. Mr. Melvin Pelton, the possessor of a fine baritone voice, sang a solo which was also much appreciated. The singing of the National Anthem closed the delightful concert.

DANGEROUS HAIR DYES

Many of these fluids have recently been a subject of investigation by an English chemist, who after careful analysis asserts that they contain dangerous portions of Nitric and Muriatic Acids. Instances have been reported of ladies having been injured by drops of the hair dye falling on the shoulders. Seven Sutherland Sisters' "Colorator" is not a hair dye. It is a delightful toilet preparation for restoring grey, faded or bleached hair to its natural color. It is easily applied and perfectly free from any of the injurious ingredients of the obnoxious hair dyes. WHITE SHOOTS 7 NEGROES

Memphis Man Walks Into Saloon and as Result Three Blacks Are Dead—Fanatic Terrorizes New Jersey Town—Another Adamite Victim Is Dead—Three Ruffians Perpetrate Outrage on Family.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 12.—"I shot 'em and that's all there is to it." Beyond this, mumbled as he was being led to a cell at police headquarters, William Laturas, a white man of this city, proffered no explanation of the killing of three negroes and the wounding of four others, one a woman, at a saloon here yesterday.

When Laturas entered the saloon a group of negroes were about a pool table in a rear room. Laturas leisurely unbuttoned a long overcoat he wore and drew an automatic pistol and shot down his victims.

His weapon empty, Laturas threw it in an ash can and walked to a neighboring saloon, where he submitted to arrest.

Laturas several years ago shot and killed a white man, but was released on the ground of self-defence. Several years ago a negro met death at his hands, and he was again acquitted on a plea of self-defence. Recently he forced several men, at the point of a pistol, it is declared, to return money won in a game of chance.

Another Victim Dies.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 12.—A. J. Selsor, a bystander, injured in the fight between religious fanatics and the police on Tuesday afternoon, died early yesterday morning. This brings the death list to five.

James Sharp, self-styled "Adam God," who led the fanatics in their fight, was arrested Thursday night at Monticello, Kansas. He made no resistance.

"Honestly, captain," he said to an officer, "I believed that we were doing right and that it was God's will. When the bullets commenced to hit me, then I had a revelation. I am glad to be back and as willing to stand for anything that God wills. Oh, it is terrible, terrible."

Sharp told the police he tried to kill himself immediately after the fight, but could not get the cartridges into the revolver.

Holds Up Town.

Edgewater, N.J., Dec. 12.—Shouting that he was "John the Baptist come to save the world," an aged insane man held this town in terror for nearly an hour yesterday afternoon. He rushed down the main street, waving a revolver and held up half a dozen citizens, robbed the tills of three business establishments, stole a team of horses, and exchanged many shots with a hastily formed posse. His wild career was temporarily checked when he was bowled over by shots fired by members of the posse after a chase of more than half a mile.

A Dastardly Crime.

Cartersville, Ga., Dec. 12.—That a band of ruffians entered the home of J. A. Gibson three miles from Cartersville, Saturday night, and perpetrated a series of dastardly outrages upon the members of that family, including the shooting of Mrs. Gibson and criminal assault upon Lizzie Hardy, a sixteen-year-old girl, is the substance of charges contained in warrants just issued for three well-known young white men of this county.

The "Code" in Mississippi.

Hazelhurst, Miss., Dec. 12.—Dr. A. S. Pitts, prominent physician, was shot and killed at his office here by Dr. Thomas Birdsong, a dentist. Dr. Birdsong is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Annie Birdsong, convicted two years ago for the killing of Dr. Butler at Monticello and pardoned.

Homer Smith was arrested as an accessory. It is alleged that Smith lent Dr. Birdsong a pistol with full knowledge that Dr. Birdsong intended to kill Dr. Pitts.

A Powder "Combine."

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 12.—World-wide agreements as to prices of all the powder companies in the United States and Europe was presented at the federal hearing before Special Master Mahafey here.

It provided for a $150,000 fine for any breach of the agreement.

Ex-Chief of Police Accused.

Brockville, Dec. 12.—George Brown, for many years chief of police at Athens, is lodged in jail here, having been committed by Magistrate Samuel Boddy on a charge of indecent assault on Emma Scott, aged 35 years. He is 65 years of age.

Drayton, Dec. 12.—Joseph Coote, proprietor of the Glen Allan Hotel, was yesterday fined $40 for having liquor on his premises. This is a local option town. It was Coots' second offence. He will appeal.

Chatham, Dec. 12.—A. Wolven was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison for attempted indecent assault. Wolven thanked the judge sincerely and said he wished it were more.

Civic Investigation.

Port Arthur, Dec. 12.—The investigation into the charges of malfeasance by municipal officers ordered by the City Council will commence Monday before Judge O'Leary.

HOW MRS. CLARK FOUND RELIEF

After Years of Suffering Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Her.

Pleasant Point Matron Tells Her Suffering Sisters How to be Free From the Terrible Pains that Make a Life Burden.

Pleasant Point, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Special)—That most of the ills that the suffering women of Canada have to bear are due to disordered kidneys, and that the natural cure for them is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is once more shown in the case of Mrs. Merril C. Clarke, a well known resident of this place and a prominent member of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Clarke is always ready to give her experience for the benefit of her suffering sisters.

"My sickness commenced twenty years ago with the change of life," says Mrs. Clarke. "My health was in a bad state. Water would run from my head which would make me faint. When I came out of the fainting spell I took fits. I was bloated till I was clumsy. The pain I suffered was awful. It would go to my feet and then to my head. Many doctors attended me, and I tried many medicines, but nothing gave me relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first box stopped the fits and seven boxes cured me completely."

Every suffering woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They make strong healthy kidneys, and the woman who has good kidneys is safeguarded against those terrible pains that make miserable the lives of so many women.

TO TAP SILVER COUNTRY.

Canadian Northern Prepared to Extend to Gowganda.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—The Canadian Northern Railway is prepared to extend its line from Sudbury to Sellwood, on to Gowganda, the new silver field, if a measure of co-operation can be arranged with the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

The proposal is that the C. N. R. complete their line from Sudbury to Gowganda, which would provide a direct service of about 14 hours to Toronto. The C. N. R. is built and in operation north of Sudbury, on which is located the famous Hutton iron range.

From Sellwood the line is under construction to Burwash, 20 miles further north. This leaves only 32 miles of projected line to connect Gowganda direct with the capital of Ontario.

Meanwhile the T. & N. O. has been surveyed from Charlton to Elk City, and the commissions have had a line through this district and the Gowganda country to Sudbury for some time past.

The Canadian Northern stands ready to give the Government line access from Cochrane at Charlton to Sudbury in return for running rights over the Government system between those points.

PROTECTION INADEQUATE.

Coroner's Jurors on Miller Accident Roasts M. C. R.

Dunnville, Dec. 12.—"That Mrs. Edith Miller and Burton Lloyd Miller came to their death by being struck by Michigan Central Railway train No. 31, at 9.45 a.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 8; that the devices for warning persons of the approach of trains at level crossing are inadequate; that the crossing referred to is particularly dangerous and the jury recommend that the electric alarms be placed at each dangerous crossing, and also that the approach to this particular crossing should be tiled and filled in from fence to fence."

This was the verdict of the coroner's jury in the inquest yesterday into the double fatality last Tuesday at Dilts road crossing of the M.C.R.

Engineer Johnson swore positively he whistled for the crossing, but none of the other witnesses heard either the whistle or the bell, though they would not swear no signals were given.

Fire Companies Had Bad Year.

London, Dec. 12.—(C. A. P.)—The Canadian Associated Press understands that the experience during 1908 of such companies as transact fire business in Canada is more than likely to prove unfavorable, as the losses are very considerably in excess of the corresponding period of 1907. A sequence of good years had been looked for to make amends for the disastrous experience of 1906.

A Shame to Jail Him.

St. Catharines, Dec. 12.—"It's a shame to send him to prison," said Judge Carman in acquitting 12-year-old James Schram of chicken-stealing. Schram and John Doyle had pleaded guilty and the latter had implicated Schram's father. Doyle will be sentenced Monday. Young Schram will be given a guardian.

A BULLET FROM SON'S REVOLVER

Judge Jean Blanchet of Quebec Commits Suicide.

HAD BEEN IN ILL-HEALTH

One of the Most Eminent Members of the Bench in Lower Province in Fit of Despondency Kills Himself With Revolver Borrowed From His Son—Game of Old Family Famous in Quebec Annals.

Quebec, Dec. 12.—Hon. Judge Jean G. P. Blanchet, judge of the King's Bench, and an eminent jurist, committed suicide at his residence, St. Genevieve street, Thursday night or early Friday morning by shooting himself through the heart with a forty-two-calibre revolver. The cause of his rash act can only be attributed to a sudden fit of despondency brought on by ill-health.

Deceased recently came from Montreal, where he left his wife and family to reside for the winter, and spent Thursday evening at his residence with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Florence Bayard, and daughter, Mrs. Norman Orilvie, and appeared in good spirits. Yesterday morning one of the house servants entered the bedroom to learn if deceased required any attendance, and when she realized what had happened she aroused the household, and the family physician was sent for, who arrived in time to see life ebb away.

The late Hon. Jean Gerrais Protais Blanchet was a member of a family many of whom have greatly distinguished themselves in professional and public life. Two of his uncles, the late Bishop Francois Nobert Blanchet and Augustin Magloire Blanchet, were among the pioneers of evangelization on the Pacific coast. A son of the late C. Blanchet, N.P., of St. Francois, Beance, the deceased was born at St. Gervais in February, 1843, and was educated at Nicolet College, subsequently entering Laval University to pursue his law studies, and was called to the Bar in 1863. He practiced throughout at the Quebec Bar, was created a Q.C. by the Quebec Government in 1876, and had the same honor conferred upon him by the Marquis of Lorne in 1880. He was elected Batonnier of the Quebec section of the Bar in 1888, and Batonnier-General of the province in 1891. A Conservative in political life, he sat in that interest for Beance in the Quebec Assembly continuously from the date of his first election in November, 1891, up to his appointment to the Bench on Sept. 19, 1891. He held the office of Provincial Secretary in both the Mousseau and Ross Administrations, and was leader of the Conservative Opposition to Mr. Mercier in 1890-91.

Morgan's Fast Ride.

New York, Dec. 12.—After having predicted in Chicago that "any man who is a bear on the future of this country, will go broke," J. P. Morgan returned to New York Thursday evening after a remarkable trip on a special train over the N. Y. C. The journey was made in 17 hours and 1 minute, one hour faster than the Twentieth Century Limited.

The special made 58 to 60 miles an hour for the entire distance, with six stops to change locomotives.

The trip cost the financier $100 an hour.

Free Trade With Philippines.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Free trade with the Philippines was one of the most important matters argued by President-elect Taft and the Republican members of the ways and means committee at Thursday's conference on tariff revision. While Mr. Taft favors free trade with the insular possessions without any restrictions, it is understood that in order that there shall be no dissension he has agreed that the amount of sugar and tobacco which should be allowed entry free of duty should be restricted.

ARE PLANNING CHEAPER CABLE RATES

London Meeting Discusses Government-Owned Lines.

SCHEME IS NOT SOCIALISM

Sir Edward Sassoon Rights Misunderstanding and Declares That Proposed Purchase of Ocean Lines Is Pure Imperialism — Messrs. Fisher, Fielding and Borden Were Present at Gathering.

London, Dec. 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—An influential meeting was held in the Mansion House (the chairman being Lord Mayor Truscott), in support of the movement in favor of state-owned cables and cheaper rates.

Those present were: The Duke of Argyle, Lords Strathcona, Milner, Jersey, Hon. Messrs. Fisher, Borden and Fielding, Sir E. Sassoon and the agents-general of most of the colonies, a number of M.P.'s and the city business men.

There was some objection to state-owned cables expressed in the word Socialism, but Sir Edward Sassoon emphasized the difference between Socialism and Imperialism.

He was more particularly concerned with a state-owned cable service across the Atlantic. It was the logical sequence of the establishment of a Pacific cable. This one step would be of incalculable importance; it was a feasible scheme, one that could be worked on a paying basis.

Figures showed the Pacific cable was not worked at an annual loss each year. There had been an excess of earnings over expenditure ranging from $125,000 to $28,000, which was regularly employed in paying off the orriginal capital expenditure.

The 20th century was Canada's. Was it not a wise policy to give cheap telegraphic communication to both countries (Cheers.)

He welcomed the help given by the United States, but as this great reform is to be achieved at no distant future, he claimed that Britain and her premier colony should lead and not follow. A state-owned cable across the Atlantic would immediately lower the charges 50 per cent. It is believed there would eventually be a uniform charge not exceeding ten cents a word.

It would immediately bring charges on messages between England, New Zealand and Australia to half or less the present exorbitant rates. It would be a harbinger of a pan-Britannic cable and telegraph system encircling the globe.

"Can that be accomplished? I think it can, and I believe it will; I have searched in vain for the word impossible in the latest edition of the English dictionary."

Hon. Mr. Fielding also spoke earnestly in favor of a cheap system on imperial grounds. Resolutions in support of the movement and calling on the Government to convene a conference, were carried. Mr. Asquith was also requested to receive a deputation of business men.

Has Stolen Bonds.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—Information has been received by the Dominion police from the Belgian authorities, warning Canadian bankers and brokers to look out for Elysabeth Herreboudt, 35 years old, described as the wife of Count D'Ivy, sister of a receiver of stolen bonds, who left Brussels with a package of bonds valued at 700,000 francs, stolen in Europe, with the intention of selling them in Montreal. She landed in New York and then proceeded to Montreal, from which place she has herself cabled by the several false names. Her father, Joseph Vincent Herreboudt, is supposed to reside in Montreal or Quebec, as well as her brother Jean, who is also suspected as a receiver of stolen bonds.

RUNNING ATHLETICS HOCKEY

PETERBOROUGH HOCKEY CLUB WAS RE-ORGANIZED AT MOST ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING HELD LAST EVENING; TWO O. H. A. TEAMS ARE TO REPRESENT THE CITY

A junior and an intermediate O. H. A. team for Peterborough. That was the verdict reached at an enthusiastic gathering of hockey supporters in the Oriental Hotel parlours last night, when the Peterborough Hockey Club was re-organized for the season, under most encouraging circumstances. The outlook for the season is decidedly bright, as the indications point to a strong intermediate septette and a junior seven that should give a good account of themselves. There is an abundance of materia., players and officers alike are enthusiastic, and it is understood that satisfactory arrangements can be made with the rink company, and everything presages a most successful season, if last night's meeting can be accepted as a criterion.

C. G. GRAHAM,

The older players have announced their intention of coming out this season and helping the intermediate team along, and it is felt that with a number of the younger puckohasers to round out the bunch, a team can be put on the ice that should prove a pennant winning possibility, at least. The fans can count upon seeing some fast hockey, as it is altogether probable that the locals will be grouped with Belleville, Cobourg and Lindsay, and with the four rivals clashing there will be something doing down in this neck of the woods when Jack Frost sets the ball a-rolling.

Dr A. W. McPherson was elected to the chair at last night's meeting, and there was a representative and enthusiastic crowd of players and supporters present when the meeting was called to order. The chairman briefly stated the object for which the gathering had been called, namely to take some steps to revive the Peterborough Hockey Club and to decide upon what series teams should be entered in.

There was considerable discussion in regard to a junior team. It was explained that the Chieftain A. C. had taken steps to place a junior team in the O.H.A., but the feeling of the meeting seemed to be that the junior team should be under the control of the Peterborough Hockey Club or that, at least, the Chieftains should throw their team open to all junior players in the city. Mr. Fred A. Clarke, president of the Chieftains, was present, and stated on behalf of his club that they were not at all anxious about entering the O.H.A., but that if they did so they would prefer to have their own men as far as possible.

Mr. Clarke, however, was of the opinion that if the rules of the Junior City Hockey League could be arranged so as to permit of the players taking in junior O.H.A. games without affecting their standing in the league, that the Chieftains would be quite willing to play for a Peterborough junior O.H.A. team.

After some further discussion along the same line, it was moved by Mr. Harry Morgan and seconded by Mr. Sam Ray, that intermediate and junior O.H.A. teams be organized, and the resolution was carried unanimously.

The meeting then proceeded with the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

Patrons and Patronesses—Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., and Mrs. Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. R. Denne, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Morrow, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Hon. President—J. H. Burnham.

President—Dr. A. W. MacPherson.

First Vice-President—C. G. Graham.

Second Vice-President—Jos. Picord, Jr.

Secretary-Treasurer—R. M. Glover.

Executive Committee—H. P. Morgan, W. E. Wasson, Geo. Lynch and F. A. Clarke.

It was decided that the secretary-treasurer should have power to appoint an assistant, who shall be satisfactory to the members of the executive.

The question of what district the club will be grouped with, was discussed, and it was decided to ask the O.H.A. to group the intermediates with Belleville, Lindsay and Cobourg if possible, while for the juniors a group composed of Peterborough, Port Hope and Cobourg was favoured. The O.H.A. will group the teams at a meeting to be held on Tuesday night next and the district meetings to draw up the schedules will be held shortly afterwards.

W. E. WASSON,

The questions of drawing up a constitution for the club, making arrangements with the rink company, for practices, etc., was left in the hands of the executive.

There is every reason to look forward to a good season this year. With such a splendid set of officers and with the return to the game of the old players a splendid intermediate seven can be placed on the ice. The junior team is as yet an unknown quantity, but there is any amount of junior material in the city, and a seven can be picked that should give all the district clubs a hard argument.

THE BELMONTS MADE NEW LEAGUE RECORD IN TRIMMING MIDGETS

New records were established last night in the ten pin league at the P.B.C. when the Belmonts smashed the figures formerly held by the Iroquois for the team total and the individual three game aggregate. Incidentally the Belmonts captured all three games from the Midgets, who were not bowling up to form. The winners were strengthened by Harold Tanney, a former London bowler. Tanney has all the requisites of a crack trundler and his score for the three games was just a trifle above that of Joe Pollard, who, it might be explained, was bothered by the foul line, and who lost the chance of making a couple of high scores by a slight transgression of the rules. At that he was second high for single honours with 181.

Wareham's work was the feature of the evening, his total for the three games being a new league record. Martin formerly held the record with 548, just four pins less than Wareham. The team score for the three games, 1480, breaks the record previously held by the Iroquois, by 1x pins.

To-night the Pacifics and Examiner B. meet.

The scores last night follow:

Midgets

Giroux	151	151	122—	424
Brown...	92	136	129—	357
Hayes...	135	144	143—	422
	378	431	394—	1203

Belmonts

Pollard	126	181	156—	463
Tanny...	134	176	156—	469
Wareham	192	167	203—	552
	452	548	515—	1480

Majority for Belmonts, 277 pins.

Week Dec. 14

Monday—B.A.C. vs. Grays.
Tuesday—Lock Works, vs Exam. B.
Wednesday—Bankers vs. Belmonts.
Thursday—Pacifics vs. Midgets.
Friday—Frontenacs vs. Iroquois.
Saturday—Hutchison vs Exam A.

EUGENE HURTUBISE,
Peterboro's big wrestler, who beat "Cyclone" Burns the English wrestler in a handicap bout at Toronto last night.

GENE HURTUBISE BEATS CYCLONE BURNS; WON THE HANDICAP MATCH LAST NIGHT

Eugene Hurtubise won the match last night with Cyclone Burns, in Toronto. The Globe has the following to say of the bout:

At the Riverdale Rink last night Gene Hurtubise, the Peterborough wrestler, won the handicap bout from "Cyclone" Burns, the English grappler. Hurtubise took the place of Perelli, the Greek, who was unable to make train connections. Burns agreed to throw him three times in an hour or forfeit the purse. The handicap proved too much for Burns, who was able to secure only one fall. This was gained with a head and arm lock hold after 28 minutes of fast wrestling. After a short intermission the men re-appeared on the mat, but no more falls were recorded. Hurtubise weighed 200 pounds and Burns about 190. Mr. Bob Harrison refereed the bout.

INDOOR BASEBALL IS BEING TALKED OF IN PETERBOROUGH

Many of the military men of the city are discussing the advisability of organizing an indoor baseball league for Peterborough this season, and it is likely that some steps will be taken in the near future. The 24th Field Battery, it is said recently talked over the matter and some of the members are most enthusiastic over the prospects. Those who have seen the game in other places and especially those who have played the game are loud in their praises of the pastime and they have fired the local men with some of their enthusiasm so that the prospects for a league are bright. The game is a good one for players and spectators alike and would no doubt take well in Peterborough.

NEW SECRETARY FOR THE HOCKEY CLUB WILL BE NECESSARY

It will be necessary for the Peterborough Hockey Club to elect a new Secretary-Treasurer for the Club. Mr. R M Glover who was elected to that position at last night's meeting has asked the Examiner to state that he cannot see his way clear to accept the office, and is reluctantly forced to send in his resignation to the club.

NEW ROYAL THEATRE WILL OPEN SHORTLY

As a short enumeration of the beauties of the Royal Theatre, soon to open, we would call attention to the fairy-like appearance of the entrance. Here one walking over a beautiful mosaic tile pavement sees on either side walls covered with artistically finished plate glass ovals surrounded by hand-cut ornamental glass in Persian design. Over the seat of Caesar, or ticket office, is a handsome cut glass covered wall, the glass being mirrors made in a pleasing design, the outer having the words "Royal Theatre" emblazoned thereon. Possibly no similar theatre on this continent is better illuminated by electric light. The theatre, including the outside sign, "Royal Theatre," has over six hundred incandescent lamps, over one hundred and eighty being on the sign.

This theatre contains two new pianos of latest make. At the entrance is an electrically played instrument specially imported from the United States. The piano for inside use is the New Scale Williams piano, for the equal of which its makers offered a reward of $1000. These two pianos cost over $1400.

ELECTRIC FIXTURES

To describe this item in full would take too much space. Suffice to say that three machines for displaying moving pictures of the most recent type have been specially imported from New York. These machines throw clearer and better pictures on the screen than ever seen before in Canada. The handsome electric light fixtures of expensive make and handsome design and fans for ensuring good ventilation, were imported from St. Louis for The Royal.

The films are imported direct from Paris. The proprietor of The Royal has made arrangements for new films to be sent direct from Paris. These films (or pictures) will be seen by Peterborough people before any other audience in Canada. The new films show clearer and better pictures than the cheaper films that pass from one theatre to another.

The management has secured from Chicago, New York, Toronto, Montreal and other cities the best talent, both vocal and instrumental, that money can procure.

Every child and lady in Peterborough will be as safe in The Royal as in their respective homes. Latest make of comfortable opera house chairs.

THE MONTREAL RIVER GOLD FIELD

A year ago last June a band of weary prospectors were crossing through the wilds of the Great South Bend of the Montreal River, in the Temagami Reserve, west of Willison Township, in search of precious metals. The leaders of the party were Mr Joseph L. Garvin, B.A., Principal of Schools, Lakefield, Ont., representing J. W. Garvin and Co., and Mr. W H. Fletcher, of Cobalt, representing C. Salkeld and Co.

When about three miles from the Montreal River their guide declared he had lost his way, and that it was necessary to retrace their footsteps. As it was late in the evening, the tired and discouraged party refused, pitched their tent and allowed the guide to return alone.

In the morning they found themselves located beside an immense reef of gold-bearing quartz, free milling, averaging about fifty feet in width, with leaf gold here and there on the surface, visible to the naked eye.

The discovery was kept a secret for several weeks, until the best claims were staked out and recorded, and was then made known; but the exceptional financial depression of the following autumn and winter prevented a big rush to the district.

The recent rich discovery of silver at Gow Ganda Lake, in the same great South Bend District, has aroused the keenest interest, and now this new mining territory is overrun with eager prospectors and other remarkable discoveries may be expected.

The four most noted claims of the new gold field have been purchased by "The Titan Montreal River Mines, Limited," (authorized capital $2,000,000, in $1 shares; 500,000 shares in treasury), whose prospectus has just been issued, and the first 100,000 shares of treasury stock are offered to the investing public at 20c a share. The huge reef runs through this company's properties for a distance of about one mile. For full particulars apply to the head office of the company, 29 Manning Arcade, King street west, Toronto, Ont., or to J. W. Garvin and Co., of the same address, or to any of the well known Toronto brokers.

LADIES' BENEVOLENT ORANGE ASSOCIATION TO HOLD CONCERT

A social and entertainment under the auspices of Sentinel Lodge, No. 66, Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, will be held in the Foresters' Hall, George street, on Friday evening, Dec. 14. An excellent musical and literary programme by the best local talent will be given. Refreshments will be served after the programme.

It is expected that the Rev. A. H. Brace, of Cobourg, and Mr. R. H. Holland of Port Hope, will be present and deliver addresses. Admission adults 25c., children 10c. God Save the King. 4d11

POULTRYMEN RETURN FROM THE GUELPH FAIR

Messrs. Jas. Baptie, of Springville, and Mr. Harry Luch, of this city, who returned last night after spending the week in visiting the Winter Show at Guelph, are most enthusiastic in their references to the success of this annual affair. The poultry show they state was exceptionally successful, no less than 5000 birds being shown and it can be imagined that many classes were pretty well filled up. Mr. Luch showed twenty-four birds and Mr. Baptie sixteen and both succeeded in getting into the money class in several events, being well satisfied with their showing. They report the best of treatment and were delighted with the show which they state is of the greatest benefit to Guelph as it brings a big influx of visitors who leave behind them considerable money during their stay.

FRED A. CLARKE,
A Member of the Executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club.

SCIENCE ADMITS EFFICACY OF PRAYER

By Sir Oliver Lodge.

Conceive a scientific God. How would He work? The universe is governed by law, effect is connected with cause; if a thing moves it is because something moves it; effects are due and only due to agents. If there be guidance or control it must be by agents that it is exerted. Then what in the scheme of things would be his agents?

Surely among such agents we must recognize ourselves. Watch the bird teaching its young to fly, the mother teaching a child to read, the statesman nursing the destiny of a new-born nation. Is there no guidance there? What is the meaning of legislation and municipal government, and acts of reform, and all the struggle after better lives for ourselves and others? Pure automatism say some, an illusion of free will. Possibly, but even a dream is not an absolute nonentity; the effort, however it be accounted for, exists. What is all the effort, regarded scientifically, but the action of the totality of things trying to improve itself, striving still to evolve something higher, holier and happier out of an inchoate mass?

We are God's visible and tangible agents, and we can help; we ourselves can answer some kinds of prayer so it be articulate. We ourselves can interfere with the course of inanimate nature, can make waste places habitable and habitable places waste. Not by breaking laws do we ever influence nature—we cannot break a law of nature it is not brittle; we only break ourselves if we try—but by obeying them. In accordance with law we have to act, but act we can and do, and through us act as deity.

And perhaps not alone through us. We are the highest bodily organisms on this material planet, and the material control of it belongs to us. It is subject to the laws of physics and to the laws of our minds operating through our bodies. But what about our mental acts? We can operate on each other's minds through our material envelope, by speech and writing, and in other ways, but we can do more; it appears that we can operate at a distance, by no apparent physical organ or medium; if by mechanism at all, then by mechanism at any rate unknown to us. If we are open to influence from each other by non-corporeal methods, may we not be open to influence beings in another region or of another order? And if so, may we not be aided, inspired, guided by a cloud of witnesses, not witnesses only, but helpers, agents like ourselves of the immanent God?

Gibson's Son Ill.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Gibson, left yesterday afternoon for Colorado Springs on receiving a telegram announcing the critical illness of their eldest son, Gordon, who went to Colorado two years ago, his lungs being affected. He appeared to be progressing very favorably, but suffered a severe relapse. A later telegram said his condition had somewhat improved.

Roosevelt May Prosecute.

Washington, Dec. 12.—"If they can be reached for criminal libel I shall try to have them reached," said President Roosevelt in speaking about "those Americans who have been guilty of infamous falsehood concerning the acquisition of the property and construction of the Panama canal itself."

IN SEARCH OF A FATHER

Chapter One

THERE was a young man in Monte Carlo. He had come in a motor car, and he had come a long way, but he hardly knew why he had come. He hardly knew in these days why he did anything. But, then, one must do something.

It would be Christmas soon, and he thought that he would rather get it over on the Riviera than anywhere else, because the blue and gold weather would not remind him of other Christmases which were gone—pure, white, cold Christmases, musical with joy bells and sweet with aromatic pine, the scent of trees born to be Christmas trees.

There had been a time when he had fancied it would be a wonderful thing to see the Riviera. He had thought what it would be like to be a rich man and bring a certain girl here for a moon of honey and roses.

She was the most beautiful girl in the world, or he believed her so, which is exactly the same thing, and he had imagined the joy of walking with her on just such a terrace as this Casino terrace where he was walking now, alone. She would be in white, with one of those long ermine things that women call stoles, an ermine muff (the big, "granny" kind that swallows girlish arms up to the dimples in their elbows) and a hat which they would have bought together in Paris.

They would have bought jewels, too, in the same street where they found the hat, the Rue de la Paix, which she had told him she longed to see. And she would be wearing some of the jewels with the white dress—just a few, not many, of course. A string of pearls (she loved pearls), a swallow brooch (he had heard her say she admired those swallow brooches, and he never forgot anything she said), with perhaps a sapphire studded buckle on her white suede belt. Yes, that would be all, except the rings, which would lie hidden under her gloves on the dear little hands whose nails were like enameled rose leaves.

When she moved, walking beside him on the terrace, there would be a mysterious silky whisper and rustle, something like that you hear in the woods in the spring, when the leaves are crisp with their pale green youth, and you shut your eyes, listening to the breeze telling them the secrets of life.

There would be a fragrance about the white dress and the furs and ermine and the silk things that you could not see, a fragrance as mysterious as the rustling, for it would seem to belong to the girl and not to have come from any bottle or bag of sachet powder—a sweet, fresh, indefinable fragrance, like the smell of a tea rose after rain.

They would have walked together, they two, and he would have been so proud of her that every time a passerby cast a glance of admiration at her face he would feel that he could hardly keep in a laugh of joy or a shout: "She is mine! She is mine!"

But he had been poor in the old days, when from far away he had thought of this terrace and the moon of honey and roses and love. It had all been a dream then, as it was now, too sweet ever to come true.

He thought of the dream and of the boy who had dreamed it half bitterly, half sadly, on this his first day in the place of the dream.

He was rich, as rich as he had seen himself in the impossible picture, and it would have been almost too easy to buy the white dress and the ermine and the pearls, but there was no one for whom he would have been happy to buy them. The most beautiful girl in the world was not in his world now, and none other had had the password to open the door of his heart since she had gone out, locking it behind her.

"She would have liked the auto," he said to himself, and then, a moment later, "I wonder why I came."

It was a perfect Riviera day. Everybody in Monte Carlo who was not in the Casino was sauntering on the terrace in the sun, for it was that hour before luncheon when people like to say "How do you do? How nice to meet you here!" to their friends.

The young man from far away had not, so far as he knew, either enemies or friends at Monte Carlo. He was not conscious of the slightest desire to say "How do you do?" to any of the pretty people he met, although there is a superstition that every soul longs for kindred souls at Christmas time.

He had not been actively unhappy before he left the Hotel de Paris and strolled out on the terrace to have his first sight of Monte Carlo by daylight. Always there was the sore spot in his heart, and often it ached almost unbearably at night or when the world hurt him with its beauty, which he must see without her, but usually he kept the spot well covered up, and, being healthy as well as young, he had cultivated that kind of contentment which Thoreau said was only desperate resignation in disguise. He took an interest in books, in politics and sport and motor cars and a good many other things, but on the terrace the blue of the sea, the opal lights on the mountains, the gold glint of oranges among green, glittering leaves, the pearly glimmer of white roses thrown up like a spray against the sky, struck at his heart and made the ache come back more sharply than it had for a long time.

If he had been a girl tears would have blinded his eyes; but, being what he was, he merely muttered in anger against himself, "Hang it all, what a wretched ass I am!" and, turning his back on the sea, made his way as fast as he could into the Casino.

It was close upon 12 o'clock, and the "rooms" had been open to the public for two hours. The "early gamblers" thronging the atrium to wait till the doors opened had run in and snatched seats for themselves at the first tables or marked places to begin at 11 o'clock if crowded away from the first. Later less ardent enthusiasts had strolled in, and now, though it was not by any means the "high season," yet there were rows of players or lookers-on three deep round each table.

The young man was from the south, though a south very different from this. He had the warm blood of Virginia in his veins and just so much of the gambler's spirit as cannot be divided from a certain recklessness in a man with a temperament. He had seen plenty of life in his own country in the nine years since he was twenty, and he knew all about roulette and trente et quarante, among other things desirable and undesirable.

Still, gambling seemed to be made particularly fascinating here, and he wanted to be fascinated, wanted it badly. He was in the mood for the heavy hush of the rooms, for the closeness and the rich perfumes which, mingling together, seem like the smell of money piled on the green tables; he was in a mood for the dimmed light like dull gold—gold sifted into dust by passing through many hands.

He had got his ticket of admission to the Casino after arriving yesterday evening, but the rooms had not pleased him then. He had not played and had merely walked through, looking at the people, but now he went to a trente et quarante table, and, reaching over the shoulders of the players—not so many as in the roulette rooms—he put a 500 franc note on couleur. It won. He let the money lie, and it won again. A third time and a fourth he left the notes on, and still luck was with him. He was in for a good run.

As it happened, nobody else had been playing higher than plaques, the handsome hundred franc goldpieces coined for the principality of Monaco, and people began to watch the newcomer, as they always do one who plays high and is lucky. On the fifth deal he had won the maximum. He took off half and was leaving the rest to run when a voice close to his shoulder said: "Oh, do take it all off! I feel it's going to lose now. To please me."

He glanced aside and saw an exceedingly pretty, dark face, which looked vaguely familiar. With a smile he took up all the notes, and only just in time. Couleur lost; inverse won.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" said the owner of the pretty face. She spoke English with a slight but bewitching foreign accent, and her eyes shone at him like brown jewels under the tilted brim of a hat made all of pink and crimson roses. She was rather like a rose, too, a rich, colorful, spicy rose, of the kind which unfolds early. He knew that he had seen her before and wondered where.

After all, it was rather nice to be spoken to by some one other than a hotel manager or a waiter—some one who was good to look at and friendly. He lost interest in the game and gained interest in the girl.

"Thank you," said he. "You've brought me luck."

"I hope you don't think I speak always to strangers like that," said the girl in the rose hat. But, you see, I recognized you at once. I don't know if you remember me. No, I'm afraid you don't."

"Of course I remember you, only I can't think where we"—

"Why, it was in Paris. You saved my mother's little dog from being run over one day. We were both so grateful. Afterward we saw you once or twice at tea at the Ritz, and you took off your hat, so you must have remembered then. Ah, me, it's a long time ago!"

"Not so very," said the young man. "I remember well now." He wished her mother had not been quite such an appalling person, fat and painted. "It was only last October. I'd just come to Paris. It was my first day there when I picked up the little dog. Now, on my first day here you pay me back for what I did then—as if it needed paying back!—by making me pick up my money. That's quite a coincidence."

They had moved away from the tables now and were walking very slowly down the room. The young man smiled at the girl as he crushed up the notes and stuffed them into his pocket. He saw that she was much prettier than he had thought her in Paris, if he had thought of her at all, and her dress of pale pink cloth was charming with the rose hat. Somehow he was glad that she was not in white—with an ermine stole.

"So it is, quite a coincidence, and a pleasant one for me, since I meet again one who was once so kind," she said. "Especially it is good to meet a friend—if I may call you a friend—when one is very sad."

"Of course you may call me a friend," said he kindly. "I'm sorry to hear you are sad."

"That is why I told you the other meeting seemed a long time ago," explained the girl. "I was happy then. Now I am breaking my heart, and I do not know what to do. Oh, I ought not to talk like this, for, after all, you are a stranger. But you are English or you are American, and men of those countries never misunderstand a woman, even if she is in trouble. We can feel ourselves safe with them."

"I'm American," he answered, "and I'm glad you feel like that. I wish I could help you in some way." He spoke kindly, but not with absolute warmth of sincerity. The girl saw this and knew that he did not believe in her as she wished him to believe, as she intended to make him believe.

She looked up at him with sad and eloquent eyes, which softened his heart in spite of himself. "You can't help me, thank you," she said, "except by kind words and kind thoughts. I think, though, that it would do me good to tell you things, if you really take an interest."

"Of course I do." He was speaking the truth now. He was human, and she was growing prettier, as she grew more pathetic, every moment.

"And would you advise me a little? I have nobody else to ask. My mother and I know no one at Monte Carlo. Perhaps you would walk with me on the terrace and let me talk?"

"Not on the terrace," he said quickly, for he could not bear to meet the sweet ghost of the past in the white dress and ermine stole as he gave advice to the flesh and blood reality of the present in the pink frock and roses. "What about Ciro's? Couldn't we find your mother somewhere and get her to chaperon us for lunch? I should think it must be very jolly now in the Galerie Charles Trois."

"So it would be, but my poor mother is very ill in her bed," said the girl.

"Would she—er—do you think, as I'm an American and we're almost old friends, mind letting you have lunch just with me alone? Of course if she would mind you must say no. But I must confess I'm hungry as a wolf, and it would be somewhere to sit and talk together quietly, you know."

"You are hungry?" echoed the girl. "Ah, I would wager something that you don't really know what hunger is. But I know—now."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean it is well my mother is ill and doesn't wish to eat, for there would be nothing for her if she did."

"Good heavens! And you?"

"I have had nothing to eat since yesterday morning, and then only a biscuit with a glass of water."

"My poor girl! We won't say anything more about chaperons. Come along with me to Ciro's this instant to lunch and tell me everything."

He was completely won over now and looked very handsome with a slight flush on his brown face and his dark eyes bright with excitement.

When she did this and drooped the corners of her mouth she was very engaging, and the young man tingled all over with pity. That poor, pretty creature starving in her charming pink dress and hat of roses! How strange life was! It was something to be thankful for that he had met her.

A little while ago he had walked through the Galerie Charles Trois, thinking how delightful the tables looked at Ciro's and making up his mind to return there for lunch. But afterward on the terrace he had been so miserable that he would probably have forgotten all about his plan if it had not been for the girl.

Now he chose a small table in a corner of the balcony close to the glass screen. A month later he might have had to engage it long beforehand, but today, though the place was well filled with pretty women and their attendant men, there was not a crowd, and he could listen to his companion's low voiced confidences without fear of being overheard.

Chapter Two

He ordered a lunch which he thought the girl would like, with wine to revive the faculties that he knew must be failing. Then, when she had eaten a little, daintily in spite of her hunger, he encouraged her to talk.

"Mother and I are all alone in the world," she said. "We are Belgian and live in Brussels, but we have drifted about a good deal, just amusing ourselves. Somehow we never happened to come here until a month ago. Then my mother said one day in Paris: 'Let us go to Monte Carlo. I dreamed last night that I won 20,000 francs there.' My mother is rather superstitious. We came, and she did win at first. She was delighted and believed in her dream so much that when she began to lose she went up and up, doubling each time. They call the game she made 'playing the martingale.'

"She lost all the money we had with us and telegraphed home for more. Soon she had sold out every one of our securities. Then she won and went half mad with joy and excitement, but the joy didn't last long. She lost all again—literally our all. We were penniless. There was nothing left to pay the hotel bill. I went out and found a Mont de Piete, just beyond the limits of the paincipality. They aren't allowed inside. I pawned all our jewelry, and, as we had a great many valuable things, I got several thousand francs. I thought the money would last us until I could find something to do; but, without telling me what she meant to do, mother took it all to the Casino—and—it followed the rest.

"She was so horrified at what she had done, when it was too late, that she wished to kill herself. It was a terrible time for me, but I was so sorry—so sorry for her."

As the girl said this she looked full into the young man's eyes with her great, appealing ones. He thought that she must have a wonderfully sweet nature to have forgiven that horrible fat old woman after being subjected to so much undeserved suffering. It was a thousand pities, he said to himself, that a really good sort of girl should be forced to live her life beside a creature of that type and under such an influence. He had not quite believed in the poor child at first perhaps, and because he did believe in her now he felt poignant remorse for his past injustice.

"What did you do, then?" he asked, honestly absorbed in the story, for he was a generous and warm hearted fellow, who found most of his pleasure in these latter days in the help he could give others, to make them happier than he was himself.

"I comforted her as well as I could, but I didn't know what would

INCURABLE HEART TROUBLE

LOOKED FOR DEATH IN A SHORT TIME.

Entirely Cured by "Fruit-a-tives."

"Gentlemen,—The days of miracles are not all past and I feel that my complete recovery, from what seemed inevitable death, is practically a miracle. I suffered from severe Indigestion and Dyspepsia for nearly two years. I could not take food without fearful distress and I became almost a skeleton as the result of the suffering. I could not do any work and became so run down and weak that I could hardly walk. I was attended by two experienced doctors. They both pronounced my case heart failure and incurable, and I looked forward for death in a short time. I not only had the doctors but after they gave me up I tried many remedies and treatments but got no better.

At this time my son asked me to try "Fruit-a-tives," and from the outset of taking these wonderful tablets I was better and gradually this medicine completely cured me. I took a large number of boxes, perhaps a dozen, and now I am entirely cured and I have gained over thirty pounds in weight.

I am now so well that I have sold my farm and bought 200 acres more land. I make this statement voluntarily for the sake of humanity, and I am convinced that "Fruit-a-tives" is a wonderful remedy that will cure stomach trouble where doctors and everything else fail."

(Sgd) Henry Speers, J.P.

The doctors were all wrong. Mr. Speers had what we call "irritated heart." Indigestion and dyspepsia completely upset the stomach. Poisonous gases were formed which swelled the walls of the stomach and pressed against the heart.

"Fruit-a-tives" immediately strengthened the stomach, insured sound digestion and regulated the bowels. There were no poisons—no noxious gases remained in the system, and the heart was no longer irritated. Then the pain and fluttering stopped.

"Fruit-a-tives" is put up in two sizes 25c and 50c. If your dealer has not both, write Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

become of us. Then a lady who had a room next to mine in the hotel heard me crying and was very kind."

"I should think she would have been," interrupted the young man.

"She told me that, as my mother had lost everything, she had better go to the direction of the Casino and get what they call a viatique—money to go away with. So she did ask, although it was a great ordeal to make up her mind to do it, and they gave my mother a thousand francs. Then, you know, she had no right to play in the rooms again. She was supposed to pay her hotel bill and leave Monte Carlo. But she gave half the money to a woman she had met in the rooms and asked her to put it on six numbers she had dreamed about. She was sure that this time she would win."

"And did she?"

"No; the money was lost. We hadn't enough left to settle our account at the hotel or to get away from the place, even if there were anywhere to go—when one has no pennies. So my mother begged me to slip into the rooms with what was left and try to get something back. I had been trying when you saw me, with our last louis. Now you know why it seemed so good to see a man I knew, a face I could trust. Now you know why I, who had had such misfortunes, was glad at least to bring you luck."

"It's my turn to bring you some, I think," began the man she could trust, but she stopped him by putting up her plump little white hand.

"If you mean with money—no," she said, with a soft decision that was pretty and sad to hear. "If you mean with advice—yes. If you could only get me something to do! You see, they will be turning us out of our hotel tomorrow. They've let us keep our rooms on up to now, but for two days they've not given us anything to eat. Of course it can't go on like this. If it hadn't been for you I think when I went back to tell my mother that the last louis of the viatique was gone we would have killed ourselves."

"Great heaven, you must promise me not to do that!" the young man implored.

"I will promise now, for you have saved me by—caring a little. You do care, really, don't you?"

"I wouldn't have blood in my veins if I didn't. But—about something for you to do—I must think."

"Are you staying here for some time?" asked the girl.

"I haven't made up my mind."

"I asked because I—I suppose you don't need a secretary, do you? I can write such a good English hand, and I know French and Italian as well as I do German and your own language. If I could be of use I would work so hard for you."

"I dare say I shall be needing a secretary after Christmas. Indeed, I am sure I shall," insisted the young man, more and more earnest in his desire to do good. "I have dozens of letters to write every day and all sorts of odds and ends to keep straight. I could bring the things down to your place, and you could help me if you would. But I'm afraid it would be no end of bother to you."

"I should love it," said the girl gently.

"Oh, it would be hard work. It would take a lot of your time and be worth a lot of money."

"Would it, really? But you mustn't overpay me. I should be so angry if you did that."

"There's no danger. I'm a good business man, I assure you. I should pay a capable secretary like you—knowing several languages and all that—say $40 a week. That's about 200 francs."

"Wouldn't that be too much?"

"Hardly enough."

"You are so good—so good! But I know you would be. I wonder if you would think me a very bold girl if I told you something. It's this: I've never forgotten you since those days in Paris. You were different, somehow, from other men I had seen. I thought about you. I had a presentiment that we should meet again. My mother dreamed of numbers to play at roulette. I dreamed of—but, oh, I am saying things I ought not to say! Please don't blame me. When you've starved for two days and not known what to do, unless to die, and then a man comes who is kind and saves you from terrible things, you can't be as wise and well behaved as at other times."

"Poor child!" said the young man.

"It does me good to be called that. But you don't know my name, the name of your new secretary. It is Julie—Julie de Lavalette. My mother is the Comtesse de Lavalette.

And you?"

"Oh, I'm plain Hugh Egerton," said the young man.

The girl laughed. "I do not think you are plain Hugh Egerton at all. But perhaps an American girl would not tell you that. Hugh! What a nice name! I think it is going to be my favorite name."

She glanced up at him coyly under long lashes—a thrilling glance, but he missed its radiance, for his own eyes were far away. Hugh had been the favorite name of another girl.

When she saw that look of his she rose from her chair. "I'm taking too much of your time," she exclaimed remorsefully. "I must go."

His eyes and thoughts came back to the wearer of pink and roses. Perhaps there had been just a little too much softness and sweetness. It had been wise of her to change the key and speak of parting.

He paid for the lunch and tipped the waiter so liberally that they all hoped he would come again often. Then he asked if he might walk with her to the hotel where she and her mother were staying.

"It's down in the Condamine," she hesitated. "We've moved there lately, since the money began to go, and we've had to think of everything. It's rather a long walk from here."

"All the better for me," he answered, and her smile was an appreciation of the compliment.

They sauntered slowly, for there was no haste. Nobody else wanted Hugh Egerton's society, and he began to believe that this girl sincerely did want it. He also believed that he was going to do some real good in the world, not just in the ordinary, obvious way, by throwing about his money, but by being genuinely necessary to some one.

When they had strolled down the hill and had followed for a time the straight road along the sea on that level plain which is the Condamine, the girl turned up a side street. "We live here," she said and stopped before a structure of white stucco, rococo decoration and flimsy balconies. Large gold letters, one or two of which were missing, advertised the house as the Hotel Pension Beau Soleil, and those who ran might read that it would be charitable to describe its accommodation as second rate.

"It is not nice," she went on, with a shrug of her pretty shoulders, "but—it is good to know, all the same, that we will not be turned out. I have a new heart in my breast since I left this house a few hours ago—because there is a You in the world."

As she said this she held out her hand for goodby, and when he had shaken it warmly the young man was bold enough to slip off her wrist the little pink leather bag which hung there by its chain.

"Now for that advance on your secretarial work," he said, and, taking from his pocket a wad of notes which he had won at the Casino, he stuffed it hastily into the yawning mouth of the bag, while the girl's soft eyes gazed at the sea. Then he closed the spring with a snap, and she let him pass the chain over her hand once more.

"Oh, but it looks very fat!" she exclaimed. "Are you sure you counted right?"

"There's a little more there," he said uncomfortably, "just a little to save the bother of counting here in the street. Don't look angry. Only the salary part's for you, of course, but the rest—couldn't you just hand it over to your mother and say, 'Winnings at the Casino?' That's true, you know. It was, every bit. And you needn't say who won it. Besides, if it hadn't been for you it would have been lost instead of won. It would be a kind of Christmas present for your mother from the Casino, which really owes her a lot more."

The girl shook her head gently. "I couldn't do that, even for my mother's sake, but I don't misunderstand now we are such friends. I know how kindly you mean, and, though neither mother nor I can accept presents of money, even from dear friends (after all, we are of the noblesse), I'm not going to hurt you by giving the money back if you will do what I ask of you."

"What is that?" He felt ready to do anything within reason.

"Let us sell you our dear little dog for this extra money you have put into my bag. He is very, very valuable, for he cost thousands of francs, the sweet pet, so you would really have something not unworthy in return for your goodness. Ah, don't say no! You would love Papillon, and we should love you to have him. We couldn't have parted with our little darling to a stranger though we were starving, but it would make us happy to think he was yours. And then, if you won't, you must take all this back." As she spoke she touched the bag on her arm.

"Oh, I'll have the dog!" Hugh Egerton said quickly. Anything rather than the girl should return the money, which she so much needed. "I remember he was a dear little chap, Pomeranian or something of the sort. I hope he likes motors."

"He will like whatever you like. If you will come and fetch him this evening I will show you all his tricks. Do come. It would be good to see you again so soon."

"With pleasure," said the young man, flushing slightly, "if you think your mother will be well enough to receive me."

"The news I have to give will almost cure her. If you would dine with us! They will give us a dinner now"—and she laughed childishly—"when I have paid the bill. It will be very stupid for you at a place like this, but you will have a welcome, and it is the best we can do."

"It is the welcome I want," said Hugh. "But if you and your mother could dine with me somewhere"—

"Another time we will."

There were to be other times, of course!

"And this evening," she went on, "we can talk of my beginning work as your secretary. It shall be directly after Christmas?"

"Whenever you are ready."

"I suppose you have friends to whom you will go for Christmas?"

"Not a friend."

"Oh, perhaps we might be together—all three?"

"I'll think of something pleasant for us to do if you'll let me."

"How good you are! Then till this evening. It will seem long till then."

They shook hands once more. She had taken off her glove now, and her palm left on his a reminiscence of Peau d'Espagne. He did not know what the scent was, but it smelled rich and artificial, and he disliked to associate it with his new friend. "But probably it's her mother's, and she didn't choose it herself," he thought. "Well, I have a new interest in life now. I expect this is the best thing that's happened to me for a long time."

As he walked back to his hotel his head was full of plans for the girl's transient pleasure and lasting benefit. "Poor lonely child!" he thought. "And what a mother! She ought not to be left with a person like that. She ought to marry. It would be a good deed to take her away from such an influence. So young and so ingenuous as she is still, in spite of the surroundings she must have known, she is capable of becoming a noble woman. Perhaps if she turns out to be really as sweet and gentle as she seems"—

There could be only second best and third best things in life for him now, since love was over, and it would be impossible for him to care for an angel from heaven who had not the face and the dear ways of the girl he had lost. But second best things might be better than no good things at all if only one made up one's mind to accept them thankfully. And it was a shame to waste so much money on himself when there were soft eyed, innocent girls in the world who ought to be sheltered and protected from harm.

* * *

HE soft eyed, innocent girl who had inspired the thought went into the hotel and was rather cross to the youthful concierge because the ascenseur was not working. There were three flights of stairs to mount before she reached her room, and she was so anxious to open her bag to see what was inside that she ran up very fast, so fast that she stepped on her dress and ripped out a long line of gathers. Her eyes were not nearly as soft as they had been while she picked up the hanging folds of pink cloth and went on.

The narrow corridor at the top of the staircase was somewhat dark, and, her eyes accustomed to the brilliant light out of doors, the girl stumbled against a child who was coming toward her.

"Petit bete!" she snapped. "You have all but made me fall. Awkward little thing! Why don't you keep out of people's way?"

The child flushed. She would have liked to answer that it was mademoiselle who had got in her way, but mother wished her to be always polite. "I am sorry," she replied instead, not saying a word about the poor little toes which the pretty pink lady had crushed.

"Well, then, if you are sorry, why don't you let me pass?" asked the girl of the soft eyes.

"If you please, I want to give you a note," said the child, anxiously searching a small pocket. "It's from mother for madame. She told me to take it to your door. So I did, several times, but nobody answered. Here 'tis, please, mademoiselle."

Mademoiselle snatched it from the hand, which was very tiny and pink, with dimples where grownup folk have knuckles. She then pushed past the child and went on to a door at the end of the passage, which she threw open without knocking.

"Eh bien, Julie! You have been gone long enough to break the bank twice over. What luck have you had?" exclaimed the husky voice of a woman who sat in an easy chair beside a wood fire, telling her own fortune with an old pack of cards spread upon a sewing board on her capacious lap.

She was in a soiled dressing gown of purple flannel, with several of the buttons off. In the clear light of a window at the woman's back her hair, with a groundwork of crimson, was overshot with iridescent lights. On a small table at her side a tray had been left, with the remains of dejeuner—a jug stained brown with streaks of coffee, a crumbled crescent roll, some balls of silver paper which had contained cream chocolates, ends of cigarettes and a scattered gray film of ashes. At her feet a toy black Pomeranian lay coiled on the torn bodice of a red dress, and all the room was in disorder, with an indiscriminate litter of hats, gloves, French novels, feather boas, slippers and fallen blouses and skirts.

The lady of the roses went to the mirror over the untidy mantelpiece and looked at herself as she answered, "No luck at roulette or trente, but the best of luck outside."

"What, then?"

The girl began to hum as she powdered her nose with a white glove lying in a powder box.

"You remember le beau brun?"

"The young man in Paris you made so many inquiries about at Ritz's? Is he here?"

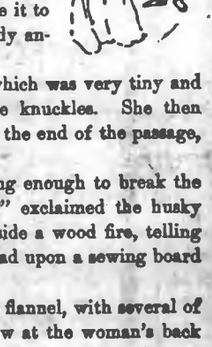
"He is. I've just had lunch with him. Oh, there are lots of things to tell! He is a good boy."

"How good? You told him we had had losses?"

"I painted a sad picture. He was most sympathetic."

"To what extent?"

"Chere maman! One would think we were vulgar adventuresses. We are not. He respects me, this dear young man, and it is right that he should. I deserve to be respected. You know the fable about the dog that dropped his meat in the water trying to snap at its reflection? Well, I don't ask strangers for loans. I make my impression. M. Hugh Egerton is my friend—at present. Later he will be what I choose. And most certainly I shall choose him for a husband. What luck, meeting him again! It is time I settled down."



"They said at Rits's that he was one of the young millionaires, well known already in America," the fat woman reflected aloud. "It is a good thing that I have brought you up well, Julie, and that you are pretty."

"Yes, it is a good thing that I am pretty," repeated the girl. "We have had many hopes often before, but this seems to be the most promising. I think it is very promising indeed, and I don't mean to let it slip."

She turned her back to the easy chair and opened the pink bag. As the woman talked on she secretly counted out the money. There were more than 10,000 francs in mille notes and others of smaller denominations. Quietly she put them away in the top of a traveling box, which she locked. Then she noticed the letter which the child had given her still lying on the dressing table with her gloves.

"Here's something from la belle Americaine upstairs," said she, "a billet doux."

"A dun!" exclaimed the woman.

"No doubt. It can be nothing else."

"Well, we can't pay."

"No, we can't pay," said the girl, looking at the locked box.

"Let me see—how much was it she lent?"

"Two hundred francs, I think. We told her we'd give it back in a week. That's nearly a month ago."

"Serves her right for trusting strangers. The saints alone know when she'll see her money again. She shouldn't be so soft hearted. It doesn't pay in these days."

"Neither do we—when we can help it."

They both laughed.

"But when you are Madame—let me see, what was the name of the young monsieur? They told you at the Ritz?"

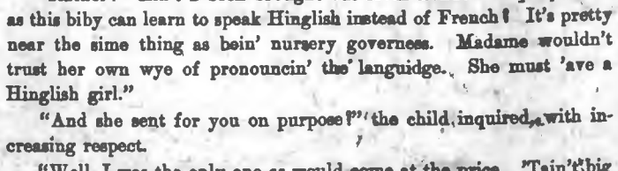
"Egerton."

"Ah, yes! When you are Mme. Egerton"—

"Everything will be very different then."

And the girl slipped the key of the box into the little pink bag.

* * *



AFTER delivering her letter the child went slowly on downstairs to the room she had been on the way to visit. It was on the second floor just under the room of the Comtesse de Lavalette.

"Come in," said a cockney voice shrill with youth in answer to her tap, and the child obeyed.

Though this room was of the same size and shape, it was very different from that of the comtesse. The plain furniture was stiffly arranged, and there was no litter of clothing or small feminine belongings. By the window, which gave a glimpse of the sea and of Monaco rock, with the old part of the palace, a plump young girl sat with a baby a year or two old in her arms and a nurse's cap on her smooth head.

"You invited me to come down after I'd had my dejeuner, so I came," said the child.

"Right you are, Miss Rosemary," returned the plump girl. "You're such a quaint little body you're a regular treat. I declare I ain't 'alf sure I wouldn't rather talk to you than read the Princess Novelettes. Besides, I do get that tired of 'earin' nothin' but French I'm most sorry I undertook the job, and the biby don't pick up Hinglish much yet."

"Don't you think he's a bright baby?" asked the child, sitting down on a footstool, which was a favorite seat of hers.

"For a French biby 'e 's as bright as you could expect," replied her hostess judicially.

"Are they different?"

"Well, they ain't Hinglish."

"I'm half American," said the little girl.

"You don't talk through your nose. Far as I can see you've got as good haccent as me."

"I suppose yours is good?" asked Rosemary, as if she longed to have a doubt set forever at rest.

"Rather! Ain't I been brought out from London on purpose so as this biby can learn to speak Hinglish instead of French? It's pretty near the sime thing as bein' nursery governess. Madame wouldn't trust her own wye of pronouncin' the languidge. She must 'ave a Hinglish girl."

"And she sent for you on purpose?" the child inquired, with increasing respect.

"Well, I was the only one as would come at the price. 'Tain't big wages, but I'm seein' loife. Lor', I come down here with madame and mounseer a fortnight ago, and Monte Carlo ain't got many secrets from me. I was a duffer, though, at first. When I 'eerd all them shots poppin' off every few minutes up by the Casino I used to think 'twas the suicides a-shootin' theirselves all over the place, for before I left 'ome I 'ad a warnin' from my young man that was the kind of goin's on they 'ad here. But now I know it's only the pigeon shooters tryin' for prizes, and I wouldn't eat a pigeon pie in this 'otel, not if 'twas ever so!"

"Do they ever have them?" asked the little girl, awed.

"Not as I knows of, but they may for Christmas. Itsye, are you lookin' forward to your Christmas, kiddy?"

"Angel—that's mother, I mean—says I'm not goin' to have much of a Christmas this year. I'm trying not to mind. I suppose it's because Santa Claus can't get to the Riviera with his sleigh and reindeer. How could he, Miss Jane, when there's no snow and not even a scrap of ice?"

"Pshaw!" said Miss Jane. "It ain't Santa Claus brings you things, snow or no snow. Only babies believe that. You're old enough to know better. It's your father and mother does it all."

"Are you sure?" asked Rosemary.

"Dead sure. Don't be a silly and cry now, just because there ain't any Santa Claus nor any fairies."

"It isn't that," said the little girl. "It's because I can never have any more Christmases if it depends on a father. You know, I haven't a father."

"I supposed you 'adn't, as 'e ain't 'ere with yer ma," replied the young person. "She's mighty pretty."

"I think she's the prettiest mother in the world," said Rosemary proudly.

ROSEMARY IN SEARCH OF A FATHER . .

"She don't look much like a mother."

The child opened her eyes very wide at this new point of view. "I couldn't have a mother who looked any other way," she said. "What do you think she does look like?"

"Silly puss! I only mean she isn't much more'n a kid 'erself."

"She's twenty-five, twenty whole years more than me. Isn't that old?"

"Lawks, no! I'm goin' on seventeen myself. I 'aven't got any father, no more'n you 'ave, so I can feel for you. Your ma 'as to do typewritin'. Mine does charrin'. It's much the sime thing."

"Is it?" asked Rosemary. "Angel doesn't like typewriting so very well. It makes her shoulder ache, but it isn't that she minds. It's not having enough work to do."

"Bless your hinnercent 'eart, charrin' mikes you ache all over! Betcher loife my ma'd chinge with yours if she could."

"Would she? But Angel doesn't get on at all well here. I've heard her telling a lady she lent some money to and wanted to have it back after awhile. You see, when we were left poor, people said that she could make lots of money in Paris, because they pay a good deal there for the things Angel does, but others seemed to have got all the work for themselves before we went over to Paris to live, so some friends she had told her it would be better to try here, where there was no—no com—com"—

"No compertishun," suggested the would be nursery governess.

"Yes, that's the right word, I think. But there was some, after all. Poor Angel's so sad. She doesn't quite know what we'll do next, for we haven't much money left."

"She's got a job of char—I mean typin' today anyhow," said Jane.

"Yes, she's gone to a hotel, where a gentleman talks a story out loud and she puts it down on paper. She's been three times, but it's so sad. The story is a beautiful one, only she doesn't think he'll live to finish it. He came here to get well, because there's sunshine and flowers, but his wife cried on Angel's shoulder in the next room to his and said he would never, never get well any more. Angel didn't tell me, for I don't think she likes me to know sad things, but I heard her saying it all to a lady she works for sometimes, a lady who knows the poor man. I don't remember his name, but he's what they call a genius."

"It's like that out here on the Riviera," said Jane, shaking her head so gloomily that the ruffled cap wabbled. "Lots of ill people come, as well as those who wants fun and throwin' their money about. In the midst of loife we are in death. Drat the biby, I believe 'e's swallowed 'is tin soldier! No, 'ere it is on the floor. But, as I was sayin', your ma and mine might be sisters in some wyes. Both of 'em lost their 'usbins, young"—

"How did your father get lost?" Rosemary broke in, deeply interested.

"'E went to the dogs," replied Jane mysteriously.

"Oh!" breathed the child, thrilled with a vague horror. She longed intensely to know what had happened to her friend's parent after joining his lot with that of the dogs, but was too delicate minded to continue her questioning after such a tragic beginning. She wondered if there were a kind of dreadful dog which made a specialty of eating fathers. "And did he never come back again?" she ventured to inquire at last.

"Not 'e. You never do, you know, if once you goes to the dogs. There ain't no wye back. I was wonderin' since we've been acquainted, kiddy, if your pa didn't go the sime road. It 'appens in all clarses."

"Oh, no; my father was lost at sea, not on the road, and there aren't any dogs there—at least I don't think so," said Rosemary.

"If it's only the sea 'as swallered 'im, 'e may be cast up again any day alive an' bloomin'," replied Jane cheerfully. "My ma 'ad a grite friend; sold winkles. 'Er 'usbin was lost at sea for years and years till, just w'en she was comfortably settled with 'er second, along 'e comes, as large as loife. Besides, I've read of such things in the Princess Novelettes, only there it's most generally lovers, not 'usbins nor yet fathers. Would you know yours again if you seen 'im?"

Rosemary shook her head doubtfully, and her falling hair of pale, shimmering gold waved like a wheatfield shaken by a breeze. "Angel lost him when I was only two," the child explained. "She's never talked much to me about him, but we used to live in a big house in London—because my father was English, you know, though Angel's American—and I had a nurse who held me in her lap and told me things. I heard her say to one of the servants once that my father had been lost on a yacht and that he was, oh, ever such a handsome man. But—but she said"—Rosemary faltered, her gray blue eyes suddenly large and troubled.

"What was it she said?" prompted Jane, with so much sympathetic interest that the little girl could not refuse to answer. Nevertheless she felt that it would not be right to finish her sentence.

"If you please, I'd rather not tell you what nurse said," she pleaded. "But, anyway, I'd give everything I've got if my father would get found again. You see, it isn't only not having proper Christmases any more that makes me feel sad; it's because Angel has to work so hard for me, and if I had a father I s'pose he'd do that."

"If 'e didn't he'd deserve to get what for," said Jane decidedly. "If you was a child in a story book, your pa'd come back and be lookin' for you everywhere on Christmas eve—this Christmas eve as ever was."

"Oh, would he?" cried Rosemary, a bright color flaming on her little soft cheeks.

"Yes, and, what's more," went on her hostess, warming to the subject, "you'd know 'im the hinstant you clapped heyes on his face by 'eaven sent hinstinct."

"What's 'eaven sent hinstinct?" demanded Rosemary.

"The feelin' you 'ave in your 'eart for a father wot's planted there by Providence," explained Jane. "Now, do you hunderstand? Because if you do I don't know but you'd better be trottin'. Biby's gorn to sleep and seems to be sleepin' light."

"Yes, I think I understand," Rosemary whispered, jumping up from her footstool. "Goodby. And thank you very much for letting me come to see you and the baby."

She tiptoed across the room, her long hair waving and shimmering again, softly opened and shut the door behind her and slowly mounted the stairs to her own quarters on the fourth floor.

Chapter Five

SHE had a doll and a picture book there, but she had looked at the picture book hundreds of times, and, though her doll was a faithful friend, somehow they had nothing to say to each other now. Rosemary flitted about like a will-o'-the-wisp and finally went to the window, where she stood looking wistfully out.

Supposing that Jane were right and her father came back out of the ocean like the fathers of little girls in story books, this might be a very likely place for him to land, because there were such lots of sea, beautiful, sparkling, blue sea. Of course he couldn't know that Angel and she were in this town, because it was only about a month since they came. It must be difficult to hear things in ships, and he might go away to look for them somewhere else without ever finding them here.

Little thrills of excitement running from Rosemary's fingers to her toes felt like vibrating wires. What could she do? Jane had said if he came at all he was sure to come on Christmas eve, according to the habit of fathers, and it was Christmas eve now. By and by it would be too late, anyhow for a whole year, which was just the same as forever and ever. Oh, she must go out this very minute!

The child had put on her hat and coat before she remembered that Angel had told her she must never stir beyond the hotel garden alone. But, then, Angel probably did not know this important fact about fathers lost at sea returning on Christmas eve and not at any other time.

If she waited until Angel came in it might be after sunset, as it had been yesterday, and then, even if they hurried into the street to search, they could not recognize him in the dark.

"I do think Angel would surely want me to go if she knew," thought Rosemary.

Her heart was beating fast under the little dark blue coat. What a glorious surprise for Angel if she could bring a tall, handsome man into this room and say: "Dearest, now you won't have to work any more or cry in the night when you think I've gone to sleep. Here's father, come back out of the sea."

"Oh, oh!" she cried and ran from the room, afraid of wasting another instant.

The sallow young concierge had often seen the child go out alone to disappear round the path that circled the hotel and play in the dusty square of grass which, on the strength of two orange trees and a palm, was called a garden. He thought nothing of it now, when she nodded in her polite little way and opened the door for herself. Five minutes later he was reading of a delicious jewel robbery which had happened in a tunnel near Nice and had forgotten all about Rosemary's existence.

The little girl had an idea that she ought to go to the place where ships came in, and as she had more than once walked to the port with her mother she knew the way very well.

Two white yachts were riding at anchor in the harbor, but no one had come on shore who looked handsome enough for a father to be recognized by "'eaven sent hinstinct" the moment you set eyes upon him. Rosemary stood by the quay for a few minutes uncertain what to do. Two or three deep eyed, long lashed Monegasque men smiled at her kindly, as Monegasque men and Italians smile at all children. She had learned to lisp French with comparative fluency during the months she and Angel had spent in Paris, and now she asked where the people went who had come in on those pretty white ships.

"Those are yachts," said one of the deep eyed men, "and the people who come on them are rowed to shore in little boats. Then they go quickly up the hill to the Casino—that big white building there—so that they can put their money on a table or take somebody else's money off."

"I have always seen dishes put on tables," said Rosemary, "never money. If I went there could I take some off? I should like to have a little very much."

"So would we all," smiled the deep eyed man, patting her head. "They would not let you in, because you are too young."

"I want to find my father, who has been on the sea," the child explained. "Do you think he might be there?"

"He is sure to be there," said the deep eyed man, and he and the other men laughed. "If you sit on a bench where the grass and flowers are outside the Casino d or and watch, perhaps you will see him come down the steps. But you are small to be out all alone looking for him."

"It's very important for me to find my father before it is dark," said Rosemary. "So I thank you for telling me, and now goodby."

Daintily polite, as usual, she bowed to them all and started up the hill.

As she walked briskly on she studied with large, starry eyes the face of every man she met, but there was not a suitable father among them. She was still fatherless when she reached the place of the Casino, where she had often come before to walk in the gardens or on the terrace at unfashionable hours with her mother on Sundays or other days when, unfortunately, there was no work to do.

A PAGE FOR MISSES

ALTHOUGH she may not be permitted to take any part in the actual festivities given for a débutante sister or friend, it is still possible for a younger girl to derive considerable pleasure as well as much knowledge that will be of service to her later on if she is willing all through the winter so far to forget herself as to be always on hand to attend to those little details which no servant can superintend and which the débutante herself is far too worried and infinitely too excited to think of.

The girl, for example, who would be sufficiently unselfish of her spare time as to play secretary to her sister and answer all the delightful sounding invitations to luncheons, dinners and balls would awaken a gratitude in that older girl which, repaid when she herself comes out, would mean the success of many a dance. Men friends may be useful when one comes out, but if she is not popular among the older girls no débutante can have a thoroughly successful winter. After all it is through the girls that invitations are given, and the girl who has unselfishly thrown herself into the fun which some older friend is enjoying will more than reap her reward in the winters to come.

In the actual making up of the list for the big reception at which a débutante is to be formally introduced there is not any real work which a younger sister can do to help, unless perhaps she will take this opportunity of compiling neatly in a large, alphabetically arranged address book a complete visiting list. Such a book is a real necessity all through life and is an especially useful possession during a débutante's first season, when entertainments, both large and small, are being constantly given in her honor. In order that as many mistakes as possible may be avoided invitations for large and formal entertainments are now generally sent out by some firm which makes a regular profession of such affairs, but considerable expense can, of course, be saved for a new gown or theatre party if there is some one at home sufficiently reliable to undertake this somewhat difficult and confusing task. Or perhaps if a girl is desirous of eking out her allowance she may be permitted to take all charge of addressing and sending out the invitations and receive the remuneration that would otherwise go to some agent.

Naturally no girl should attempt to carry out such an undertaking unless her penmanship is both neat and legible, for a carelessly or untidily addressed envelope is considered a shocking breach of etiquette and is bound to prejudice the recipient.

THE time of all others when a younger sister or girl friend can be of use to the débutante and when she can at the same time obtain untold pleasure herself is the day of the coming out tea. In order that the débutante herself may be in no way tired and may look her very best in the afternoon she should not be allowed to appear at all before the morning is half over and she should then be spared every possible bother and fatigue. This certainly necessitates that the younger sister be down early for breakfast to get together and sort out all the cards that will come by the first post (for each one of these cards is necessarily obliging, for future reference); to be ready to receive all telephone messages and to see that the first early instalment of flowers is carefully unpacked and the card properly labelled. Not even the cleverest débutante or the most vigilant younger sister could possibly remember at the end of the reception by whom each bouquet had been sent, so that the only known means of writing a satisfactory note of thanks to the donor is to mark on each card as the bouquet arrives a full description of the flowers—Jacque roses, American beauties, three dozen chrysanthemums, shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, large corsage bouquet of orchids and gardenias, &c. The description will frequently call to mind the exact bouquet, and a really sincere note can thus be written, but even when this is not possible a girl will receive great credit for a letter of thanks stating how much pleased she has been with a certain carefully described bunch of pink roses. When the donor has seen at least fifty bunches of pink roses she is astonished beyond measure that her bouquet should have made such an evident impression. These letters of thanks should be written within two or three days at most after the reception, and a younger sister can assist greatly in this task by writing to all those who are not sufficiently intimate as to recognise any difference in handwriting.

No real attempt at decoration can well be attempted with the superb flowers which it is now the accepted custom for the interested friends and relatives to send to a débutante, for the flowers arrive so intermittently during the morning, and many of them so short a time before the guests are to arrive, that any regularity of grouping is extremely difficult. It must be remembered that the more well known florists, who are apt to receive the largest orders, will in all probability be among the latest to send these out—for one reason that there may be no question of orders received late in the day not being filled, for another that the flowers shall be given no opportunity of drooping or losing their first exquisite freshness. It is therefore well to leave places in prominent positions where the handsomest bouquets will be most conspicuous and to have at hand plenty of the small bunches with which to fill in odd vacancies.

IT'S all very well for a débutante to make up her mind definitely that she will receive no flowers of any kind, so that she will then be pleased at any number, however small, that may be sent her; but really this is superfluous modesty for the average débutante, and it is much the best plan for her to order from the florist a large wire screen to stand directly behind where she and her mother are to stand in receiving their guests, and in this to place as they arrive a sufficient number of bouquets to form one complete bank of flowers. Even if there are no flowers left to be placed anywhere else in the room such a screen will show off to best advantage each individual bouquet.

In a large house where there are from three to four or more rooms to be thrown open for the reception it is a mistake to spread the flowers about too much. Concentrated masses will give infinitely more effect. The best plan is to literally mass the flowers in the main reception room, where the guests will enter and receive their first impression, if necessary leaving only a few vases of cut flowers in the other rooms.

In a room having a high mantel with a mirror above a charming effect can be obtained with comparatively few bouquets. The mantel board should first be covered with separate bunches arranged with apparent carelessness, but in reality being so placed that there is some added height noticeable toward the centre or at each side. A screen should then be made of cords attached to picture hooks in the moulding and fastened at the other end by nails in the floor and cords tied across this, forming squares to hold in the bouquets, which are thus firmly held in place. If the woodwork of the mirror or the wall covering is not especially valuable this arrangement can be more easily managed by simply tacking or nailing pieces of cord or wire across the length of the mantel and slipping the ends of the flowers in behind.

With tall, not too wide spreading firs or Christmas trees, which can so easily be obtained at this season, handsome bouquets can be most effectively shown. The trees should be placed in the corners of the room or at each side of the mantelpiece and the flowers tucked in among the branches. If there are a number of these trees it is frequently attractive to separate the flowers so as to have on one all pink roses, on another only American Beauties, and so on, or, perhaps, one corner of the room, or one whole salon if there are enough flowers, may be kept entirely pink. As a rule, however, all flowers blend so beautifully that no better effect can be obtained than by placing side by side blooms of all imaginable kinds and colors.

In arranging the bouquets it should be borne in mind that only those which are comparatively high up will be noticeable, for the throng in the room will hide all that are placed below the range of vision, saving, of course, those which are on the screen as a background for the débutante and her mother. For this reason it is well to place bouquets wherever they can possibly be made to stay—on the wall, behind side lights, picture frames or on top of any high piece of furniture that has not had to be moved out of the room to give space.

At her luncheons and dinners also a younger sister can be invaluable in arranging the cards for the guests, which must needs be done at the last moment and while the young hostess is in all probability occupied in putting the finishing touches to her gown. A really interested young sister, who is perhaps particularly farseeing in the sowing of seeds for a harvest to be reached when she herself is to come out, will always be sure that the flowers on the table are prettily and tastefully arranged and that the color scheme of the decorations will be sure to blend happily with the débutante's costume, an apparently small but tremendously important item.

And, after all, even if she never receives half the help and interest which she has given, she will be constantly gaining little bits of information that will be invaluable to her when she herself is to have all the fun and excitement that falls to the lot of a popular débutante.

Eighteenth Century Mules.

IN the way of footwear nothing could be more captivating for young girls than the dainty little eighteenth century mules which have come again into fashion. It is so eminently proper for the wearer to display them that the Directoire frocks which women wear and which hang long on the floor are coquettishly caught up a bit in front for the express purpose of showing off the fetching mules. Girls who do not wear sweeping gowns are therefore at an advantage, for the length of their skirts is such that the pretty mules show all around.

The mules are made of satin and may be ornamented with a tiny spray of flowers or a small tulle rosette, or be absolutely plain, according to one's desires. For girls the most charming are those of white, but all colors are permissible provided the shade worn precisely matches the gown. To dance in them, or even to walk in them, is quite an art, for there is nothing but one's own ingenuity to keep them on at the heel, but our girls are as clever as the French demoiselles, who managed them with charming grace.

SOCIAL AMENITIES FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL

AMONG the social accomplishments a very important and charming one to acquire is that of making good tea. Girls may perhaps smile at this and declare that to make tea is the simplest thing in the world and requires no thought or practice at all. But this is not so. Any one can brew poorly made tea, of course, but to make it as it should be and serve it with grace is an art.

There is an old nursery rhyme to the effect that:—

"Unless the tea kettle boiling be, Filling the teapot spoils the tea,"

and girls should learn this by heart, for the reckless manner in which this is disregarded by the average tea maker is nothing short of sacrilege to the lover of good tea. It is not enough, however, to have the water boil—it must freshly boil. Never use water that has been boiling some time. Many a pot of tea is ruined by the fact that the water in the kettle is made to last an hour or more and is drawn upon during that time to replenish the teapot.

Take the greatest possible pains to see that the tea you are serving is hot and fresh. Do not fall into that lazy little way indulged in by some of continuing to pour hot water on the same old tea leaves that first did service earlier in the afternoon. This is inexcusable, and no self-respecting girl should be guilty of such a thing. On the contrary, she should bear in mind that the making of tea may be regarded as a charming rite, that tea has an efficacy all its own and that it is a delightful medium for dispensing cheer and comfort.

If you want to be a genius at tea making, have that capacity for taking infinite pains which is said to be the secret of every form of genius. Have your tea kettle filled with freshly drawn cold water and boiled over alcohol on your tea table. As the water reaches boiling point pour a little in the teapot and let it stand there till the pot is thoroughly heated. Then empty the teapot and put into it the tea leaves, measuring a spoon to each person and one for the pot. As by this time the kettle "boiling be," the water is poured on the tea leaves and the pot is quickly covered with a "cosey" to protect it from the air while the tea brews for two minutes. Take this opportunity to heat the cups by pouring into each one a little hot water from the kettle. Always put the sugar first into the cup after the heating process is over, then the tea, poured through a strainer, and last the slice of lemon when lemon is desired. But if cream is preferred you must go about it in quite a different way, putting the cream on the sugar before adding the tea.

It makes all the difference in the world whether the tea is poured onto the cream or the cream onto the tea, as any connoisseur knows. The ingredients must blend, and well blended tea is achieved by pouring the scalding hot liquid on the cream and sugar. Taken the other way, with the cream dabbed in at the end, the perfect flavor is destroyed.

When presiding at a tea table be very alert and have all your wits about you. You have a dual responsibility—to be as charming as possible and also to cleverly dispense the tea. You must be adroit enough to work and play at the same time, for that is what is required of you. Do not be so stupid that you become engrossed in the tea while you are pouring it and fail to make yourself agreeable by smiling and chatting during the process. On the other hand, don't talk so much that you forget your duties and give the person lemon who wishes cream or cream when they ask for lemon.

BEAUTY HINTS FOR YOUNG GIRLS BY THE APRIL GRAND MOTHER

"BEWARE the high, tight collar," warned the April Grandmother solemnly, "for to eradicate the ugly dark line which its continued pressure makes upon the neck will be a matter of considerable time and patient perseverance. Girls who have incipient "stock rings" should promptly begin to get rid of them, and those whose throats are still free from blemishes should bear in mind the axiom that in this respect particularly 'an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.' But," she continued resignedly, "high, tight collars are so salient a fashion feature of the hour that it is almost impossible to avoid the wearing of them at certain times. However," cheerfully, "much may be done to mitigate their evil effects. The most important step is to regularly renew the blood circulation which the unnaturally tight swathings so cruelly impede, for nothing will so quickly dry, deaden and discolor the throat's cuticle. A brisk, rough rubbing of the throat with a big, broad, coarse-bristled flesh brush will soon cause the blood to circulate freely, and the hot water and soap with which it is lathered will search out all the accumulated grime and dust that are communicated by high collars, while the final cold water douche will tighten and strengthen the muscles. This may safely be done several hours previous to going into the open air, but the best time is at night, when the baths may be followed by a reliable bleaching cold cream application—first taking the precaution to protect the hair line with a ribbon, so that the cream shall not penetrate its roots and give the hair an unpleasantly greasy appearance.

"That most unsightly of feminine physical defects, a red neck, may frequently be traced to a tight collar, but usually to the carelessness of its owner. Girls of the extremely blond type naturally have a thin throat cuticle, which readily roughens and reddens, while the brunettes are often dismayed to discover that the skin of the neck is rapidly becoming deeply, darkly brown. These unpleasant conditions frequently are caused by lack of protection from cold winds or by permitting furs to come into direct contact with the throat. Another very common cause of discoloration is the excessive use of toilet powders, which so clog the throat's cuticle pores that their natural oils are dried out.

"A cranelike throat, suggestive of an over-allowance of bones prone to push themselves to the surface, is often the birthright of the thin-faced girl, who would best start the reforming process before the tissues, shrinking away from the muscles, cause her neck to resemble that of a picked chicken more than anything else in nature.

CARE OF SILVER ORNAMENTS.

COLLEGE girls who are worried because their silver mounted toilet sets, picture frames, desk conveniences and individual tea services so quickly become tarnished and dull looking can readily keep them brilliant by going over them daily with a "witch" cloth such as may be purchased at any large department shop.

Whatever silver is in daily use, like the brushes and the manicure set, may be kept shining by being regularly dipped in soft warm water and castile soap. But care should be taken to handle each piece separately, so that while in the water they may not scratch or indent.

As any silver that is kept in a gas or a stove heated room is certain to quickly tarnish, the girl who is not of methodical habits and finds the daily witch cloth or bath treatment irksome should have her toilet articles lacquered. They need then be merely dusted with a dry towel each morning and occasionally gone over with a slightly dampened cloth, but under no circumstances should they be permitted to get wet.

Once a fortnight any unlacquered silver should be thoroughly cleansed by washing it in warm water softened with ammonia and generously soaped. Each piece should be carefully gone over with a fine, soft sponge kept especially for that purpose, while the dust should be removed from the chasings and handles with a brush. After the silver has been carefully rinsed in clear water let it stand until self-dried and then polish it with ammonia moistened whiting applied with a piece of old flannel.

Charming Home Made Christmas Gifts.

Money Envelopes.

NOW is the time to be making Christmas presents. Indeed, it is already so late that any girl who wishes to make more presents will do well to choose something simple. In making this choice two very simple and easily made gifts are a linen envelope, to carry money when one is travelling, and a case for brooches, collar pins, collar buttons and cuff buttons.

The money envelope is made of white linen, shaped like an envelope. It should be a little larger than a folded dollar bill. The bottom of the envelope is turned up and basted into place, then small scallops are embroidered all around it, including the flap. A little eyelet hole is worked in each upper corner, to hold the safety pins used to fasten the envelope to the clothing, and a buttonhole in the point of the flap, with a small button placed underneath.

The pin case is made of half a yard of flowered ribbon four inches wide and a piece of eiderdown flannel fourteen inches long and almost four inches wide. The ribbon and flannel are laid together, back to back. One end of the flannel is cut into a point, and over this the ribbon is turned, meeting in the centre of the point. Then the flannel is cut stitched to the ribbon. At the other end there will be about two and a half inches of ribbon left. This is hemmed across the end and turned back over the flannel to form a pocket, the sides being over-handed together. To finish three-quarters of a yard of narrow ribbon must be sewed to the point to be tied around the case when it is rolled up.

Dainty Cases.

CASES, attractively covered and daintily finished, perfectly solve the problem of having a special place in which to keep each one of the small articles that are in almost daily use. A charming present is a little oblong shaped flat case covered with corded silk, satin, moire, pressed or hand painted paper. Such a receptacle has double lids, which fasten with an invisible spring and fly open to reveal two satin lined compartments. One of these contains three bolt pins and the other three collar pins of cut silver, set with rhinestones, fresh water pearls or white coral.

A narrow and flat case, scarcely larger than a good sized pocketbook, has a covering of sealskin glace kid or moire silk and a satin lining of matching hue. When opened this case discloses a pair of small but powerful lensed opera glasses mounted in gold, silver or gun metal, and barrel covered with mother of pearl or in material similar to the case covering.

Bridge whist cases of portfolio shape are covered with any of the fine grades of kid or leather, have imitation padlock fastenings and linings of satin or moire. They contain two packs of high grade, gilt edged playing cards, a number of score cards and an ivory tipped pencil.

Vanity cases covered with ivory, mother of pearl, moire or kid contain gilt backed mirrors, gilt puff boxes and change purses and an ivory folding comb.

Rag Baby Doll.

ANY young girl who wishes to carry joy to the heart of a small sister or a niece should promptly set about providing the wee woman with a rag baby—the very latest favorite in dolldom.

The rag baby is dressed in whatever manner best accords with her rank in the doll collection. If she is needed as a parlor maid she wears a plain or figured pink, blue, green or brown lawn dress, a coquettish white cap and a lace frilled muslin apron.

The Crimson Wigwam

By THEODORE ROBERTS

Author of "The Red Feathers," "Captain Love," "Heming, the Adventurer," "Mary Jane," etc.

Written specially for this edition.

WESTWARD and westward, beyond the voiceless barrens, beyond the hills where dwell the Gray Hunters, eyond the narrow sea and atop the edge f the world, glows the Crimson Wigwam. The spirits of the warriors of the Beothic People tarry at the Crimson Wigwam on their way out from the stony graves, to tell their names, and the tales of their great and little deeds, to the god who dwells therein. Then they continue on the long trail to the valleys of eternal summer.

In the Crimson Wigwam are many wonderful things which in the old days were given to man by the gods, only to be taken back because of the waywardness of man. Among these wonders are: The Red Arrow, The Wallet of Plenty, The Moccasins of the Wind, The Pictures of Wisdom and The Water of Healing.

To the village on the River of Three Fires stole a fearful sickness. It followed on the trail of the hunters who had been slaying the caribou about Wind Lake. The season was that of the southward migration, when the great herds cross the barrens to the extremist valleys, and the ptarmigan cross the bays and dust themselves in the dry loam between the granite boulders on the knolls; when the snipe take wing for the far flight and the leaves singe to blackness on the twisted alders. It was the season of dropping gold in the birch thickets; of rotting berries on the marshes; of haze of lost camp fires across expectant lakes.

Before the dawn, with the white frost, the sickness stole into the lodges of the village. Three of the returned hunters were the first to die. Then a woman turned away from her food, and her eyes from the light, and forgot the voice of her lover. The old women distilled bright liquors from various herbs, according to their knowledge of such things. The priests covered their heads with the head-skins of bear and wolf, and invoked their gods. They pricked their flesh with needles of bone, moistened the ashes of the council-fire with their blood and tossed pellets of it to the four ways. Still the sickness entered the lodges and claimed its helpless victims.

With the coming of the snow and the binding of the ice, the nameless malady increased in deadliness. Then the oldest man of the village—oldest in wisdom as well as in years—called Wolf Master, his great-grandson, to his lodge and told him of the Water of Healing, which was in the Crimson Wigwam atop the western edge of the world.

"Hold straight to the journey," said the oldest man. "Turn not aside for anything save food to strengthen you on the way. Cross the salt water as your wits and courage may tell you how. At the door of the great lodge of dyed skins stand upright and cry, with a fearless voice, that death sits in the lodges of your village and that you have journeyed from the River of Three Fires, without help of magic, in quest of the Water of Healing. Then cover your eyes with your left hand and extend your right, and await what may happen."

Wolf Master tied food in a bag at his belt, armed himself and bound racquets to his feet. His heart shook within him for terror of that journey which no living man before him had undertaken. As he turned his face westward from the shelter of the lodges, a young squaw ran to his side and laid slim hands on his arm. The bloom of health was still in her cheeks and lips. Life still glowed undaunted in her strong young body. Her eyes were alight with more than life.

"Do you hunt to-day?" she asked.

He freed his arm from her hands and drew her against him.

"I hunt a great quarry," he said; and he told her, in a few words, of the Water of Healing.

"Let me go with you," she pleaded, clinging to the furs on his breast.

"Nay," he whispered, "for how could I remember the sufferings of the village and the end of the quest, with your hunger and weariness ever near me? Then would I forsake the trail, that I might hunt food for you and build you a warm lodge."

The maiden saw the truth of his words. For a moment she clung to him—and then turned away. So they parted at the edge of the forest, where the new snow lay gray and unbroken under the gray sky. The girl went back to the stricken lodges, and the brave stepped between the frozen spruces and broke his trail up the wooded slope.

To the west he set his face, flashing through the lifeless wood up to the lifeless barren. A long wind ran before him, between the levels of brooding sky and blanketed earth. It died in a thicket of black spruces, like a wounded animal in its den. The gray canopy of heaven hung lower and snow descended in silent, revolving curtains of white. Wolf Master bent his head to it and held on his way; and love was a fire in his heart that warmed his courage against the ghostly desolation. All day he travelled, breaking a trail that twisted and turned, yet held true to the westward course. So the expert woodsman has ever travelled—saving his strength by edging thickets rather than breaking through, and taking a dozen steps around wind-fall and boulder rather than risking a strain by leaping across.

The storm of snow ceased about noon. The sky cleared, and a cold draught of wind came down from the north. When the early twilight began to gather over the gray waste, Wolf Master sought a resting place in the heart of a thicket of firs. There, with one of his racquets, he dug a trench in the drift. Near by he found fresh tracks of a hare, and above it, between two small spruces, he set a loop of fine thong. Returning to the trench, he built a fire and broiled a fragment of dried deer meat. He wisely chose to make his first day's journey short, so as to season himself gradually to the toil that lay before him. At one end of the trench he laid a bed of fir branches, springy and aromatic. At the other, the fire burned brightly, and the white, melting walls reflected the heat to the couch of boughs.

In the middle night Wolf Master awoke. The fire was low. Stars twinkled frostily in the violet dome of the sky. A light wind ran in the huddled firs and blew an occasional wisp of snow across the trench. Wolf Master fed the fire with a few sticks from the pile of dry wood which he had gathered before retiring. As the flame shot up, two great wolves slunk away from the edge of the trench into the shadows of the trees.

By the red sunrise Wolf Master found that his snare had been robbed. There was blood on the snow. Under the thin, new drift he discerned the tracks of wolves. Anger stirred in him, and a hot desire to hunt down the robbers; but duty held him to the westward trail.

Night after night he set his nooses, at the end of each weary journey; and night after night, the same pair of wolves, following like grim shadows, devoured his catch. At last all of his dried deer meat was eaten and hunger gnawed him. The narrow, unknown sea still lay a day's march ahead. Death faced him, and trotted behind him in the open. Better to seek it while his blood had still some warmth from the last scanty meal than to wait for it to tear him at the last with double agony. So, that night he built no fire and set no snare.

Twice, in quick succession, Wolf Master drew his bow and sped the heavy arrow. The dog-wolf snarled and sprang. The she-wolf yelped and crawled forward with her belly in the snow. The flint knife struck the dog-wolf in the shoulder, and tore hide and muscle. Again it struck, this time wedging between two of the gaunt ribs. Then the hands of the man closed on the neck of the beast. The final struggle was brief.

A day's journey back from the western coast lay the great red carcasses. Wolf Master had taken the pelts from them, and a little of the flesh. The red foxes found them and fed to their heart's content. Jays and snow-birds pecked at the frozen bones.

Wolf Master stood on the shore of the narrow sea, gazing westward and across. He could not see the Crimson Wigwam, for the sun was still low in the east. Ice fringed the gray tide, and the rocks were drifted with snow. The farther shore lay like drifted smoke along the uneasy waters. The air was bitterly cold; and in all that wide outlook nothing stirred but the wind and the sea. The warrior's courage faltered and sickened. Who was he to dare those unknown perils?—to brave the sliding, shifting waters on which no man had ventured before him?—to stand at the door of a god's lodge? His spirit cowered within him; his limbs shook; his belly yearned for food.

Strengthened by the meat of a great sea-bird, which he had stalked and killed, Wolf Master took fresh heart for the completion of the adventure. By the slanting sun of the previous evening he had seen the walls of the Crimson Wigwam so close that it seemed as if an arrow, shot high, would rouse the god from his retreat. Now only the rocking sea and the belt of smoky hill lay between him and the guardian of the magic water.

With fire and his stone axe, he felled a dozen spruce trees. He trimmed them of their branches and dragged them to the edge of the tide. There he bound them together with thongs cut from the raw hides of the wolves. He shaped rough paddles of spruce and fir. Such game as he could procure—a brace of ptarmigan, several gulls and a hare—he roasted at his fire, let freeze and bound securely to his raft.

THE VICE-REGAL VISIT TO BERMUDA

The morning sky was heavy, the wind was raw and from the east, when he launched his rude float from the rocks onto the desolate waters. The raft rode so deep that it was awash with every wave. It was sluggish, too, and the reckless voyager had to work desperately, with his pole of spruce, to get it clear of the shore. Once away from the rocks the wind helped him. He paddled until he was tired, standing upright, with the icy water streaming over his moccasined feet. He found it no easy matter to keep his balance, so sidling and erratic was the action of the sea.

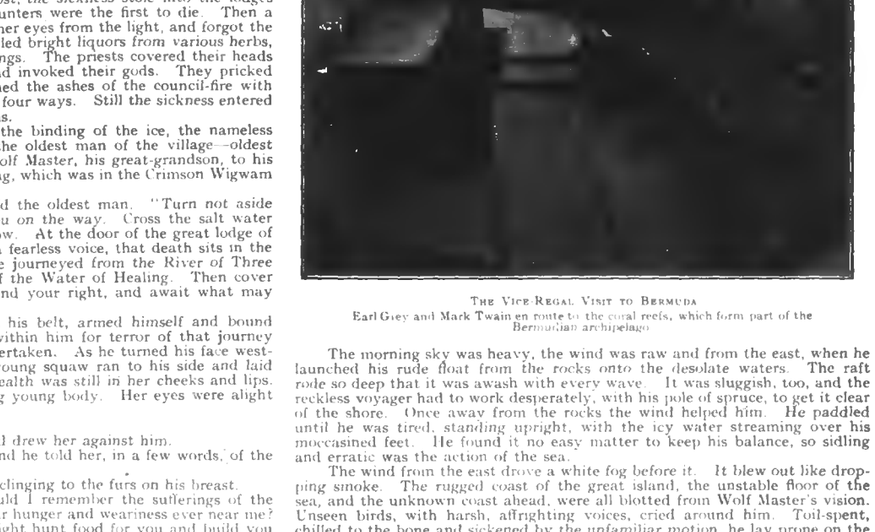
The wind from the east drove a white fog before it. It blew out like dropping smoke. The rugged coast of the great island, the unstable floor of the sea, and the unknown coast ahead, were all blotted from Wolf Master's vision. Unseen birds, with harsh, affrighting voices, cried around him. Toil-spent, chilled to the bone and sickened by the unfamiliar motion, he lay prone on the raft and clung to the straining thongs of hide by which it was held together. Indifferent to danger, and weak beyond naming, he sank, at last, into a profound slumber.

The sleep of exhaustion lasted many hours. The wind slackened and fell. The fog thinned and rolled southward. The sea quieted. The sun shone in the west, illuminating the walls of the Crimson Wigwam till they burned like fire. Soon the dusk flooded from the east and stars glinted overhead. Weird voices floated on the bitter air—the voices of the spirits of the wilderness. In the north a red curtain fell across the stars, shook east and west with silver and violet in its folds, and wavered along the hill tops. The gods of the north were dancing, beyond their walls of eternal ice.

Wolf Master's sleep of exhaustion slowly deepened towards the verge of the sleep of death. The while his blood pulsed slower and slower, he dreamed of summer and love. His leather garments were frozen stiff, and the raft was heavy with a casing of new ice. And still he slumbered, dreaming of summer along the valley of the River of Three Fires. Shortly before dawn a northing and landward current drew the raft toward the shore of the unknown land. Sea-birds swooped above it, veering and returning. A bright figure waded into the water and lifted the body of the brave from the sodden raft. The face of the god was tender. The arms of the god were strong and warm.

When Wolf Master recovered consciousness he found himself lying on a caribou hide in the open. The blood ran warm in his veins. Weariness had left him. He was clothed in a new coat made from the skins of silver foxes. Gloves of mink skin were on his hands, and on his feet were moccasins trimmed with dyed porcupine quills. Beside him, in a bag of oiled skin, lay what he knew to be the Water of Healing. He sat up and looked about him. In front ran the narrow sea, gray as steel under the high sun. Beyond it lay the rugged shores of the great island from which he had come. But nowhere could he see the Crimson Wigwam.

He fastened the bag of water to his belt and got to his feet. A strange sensation of buoyancy—of strength and lightness—possessed him. He sprang into the air and felt the invisible currents firm under his feet. Then he knew that he wore the Magic Moccasins of the Wind. So he ran eastward, swift as flying brant, high across the gray sea, the black hills and the white, desolate barrens.



THE LATE DR. DRUMMOND IN HIS STUDY
This picture shows the author of "The Habitant," seated at the desk on which were penned many of the charming poems dealing with French-Canadian Life that have made the name of Drummond a literary asset to Canada.

In the chief's lodge in the village on the River of Three Fires, sorrow crouched in the shadows. The daughter of the chief lay unconscious, stricken with the sickness. From the outer glare came Wolf Master, her lover, with the Water of Healing in his hands. Kneeling beside the couch of skins, he held it to her lips. Straightway she opened her eyes—and life was returned to them, and love still glowed in their depths.

W. H. Ruse
Of the City Music Store

Musicians were born, not made.

W. H. RUSE is one of a family of fourteen. Each of his brothers and sisters inherited the strong musical propensities of their parents and grand parents. Every available opportunity was given the Ruse family to develop their musical talents, and at early ages the Ruse family figured prominent at all musical societies, conventions, choruses and choirs in their neighbourhood.

W. H. Ruse attended singing schools, and at the age of nine years, could read his part (alto). He was engaged in church choirs as an alto singer at 12 years. Afterwards, developing a good robust tenor voice, was in demand at churches, lodges and social entertainments. Later, taking up teaching singing school, choruses, glee clubs, choirs and bands, which he organized and supplied with instruments. Developing considerable business ability he was induced to venture into the larger field of music and began as a salesman at the age of 21, for one of the largest and most prominent hums and organ manufacturers of that time.

Since then Mr. Ruse has held prominent positions with some of the largest manufacturers of pianos and organs, both in Canada and United States, in the several departments, retail and wholesale; and for several years closely associated with the manufacturing of instruments. His experience and natural musical ability makes him a thoroughly competent expert, as to mechanical construction, tone production, and real value of instruments.

Mr. Ruse has secured the lease of the store, No. 326 George St., and after January 1st, 1909, will carry a select line of pianos, organs, sewing machines, gramophones, records, small musical instruments, music and musical merchandise. Special attention will be given to ordered music and samples of the latest publication will be received in advance of general issues.

His Answer

By MRS. HERMAN KOTZSCHMAR, Author of "The Story of a Song," "A Polish Fantasy," etc.

By special permission of the Ladies' Home Journal

"MOTHER, Mother! How can I bear it, never to see, never again to read the music he has written?—blind, blind forevermore!" With a cry the girl fell upon her knees, and buried her face in her mother's lap.

"My baby! My little one!" were the only words the mother breathed, but in her heart, with David of old, she cried in anguish: "Would God I could die for thee!"

"The Music of the Trees."

Little by little the child—she was scarcely seventeen—grew calmer. Exhausted by the vehemence of her grief the sobbing cries became fainter, until she lay motionless, save for an occasional tremulous, quick-catching breath.

The daylight faded into early twilight, and still mother and daughter did not move. In those crucial moments they were facing the new problem of their lives, and drawing from an unseen power strength to meet and master a seemingly overwhelming sorrow.

For many weeks this dark cloud had overshadowed them, but today all they had feared had come upon them.

"Do you remember," came in low tones, "it was this very week you were to see the master, and ask if he would take me for his pupil?" A pressure of the hand was the reply. "Now that can never be." Then, as a tear dropped from her mother's cheek upon her hand, the girl started, crying almost joyously: "But I have seen him—nothing can ever take that from me. Think what that will always mean, even if I have not spoken to him. Why, I can see him now"—and excitedly the girl stood up—"see him just as he looked the day he directed the last concert. That splendid head, those deep-set eyes, one instant filled with fury, the next with tenderness. Can you not hear it—that immortal symphony which he has never heard with outward ears?

"Ah! little did I think that day how soon Fate would knock at my door, and snatch all my plans, ambitions, fondest hopes——" and the gold-crowned head drooped sadly. "No, no, I am not crying, my tears have all been shed. I feel through this affliction I can better comprehend what he has borne these many years—understand beyond others what deafness means to a musician. Oh, dearest comforter," and the girl threw her arms about her mother, drawing her closer, "now I can tell you all, tell you what his music has meant to me since I have known what music meant; how it draws my very soul to his. There is no shame, my mother, in my telling this to you, for being blind I never can be just like others girls, and you must be to me husband, children, mother—all."

When Grief, the terrible one, enters the door the strongest are shaken, the bravest quail—all shrink from the unwelcome guest. Days and weeks go by, and still he stays, and slowly the lesson is learned, that the intruder can never be driven away, and only by the readjustment of one's life can power be gained to bear his presence.

The blow which had fallen upon her child struck to the mother's heart, and pierced it as with a thousand arrows. Only by mothers can this mother's grief be measured. Every phase of passionate rebellion was hers, fought and conquered only in the midnight loneliness of her sleepless hours. Over and over the woman lived the years of her child's life, murmuring: "She was sent to save me from despair the time her father died, and through poverty and struggle she was my one joy." Then a faint smile would come and she would whisper: "It was the summer she was seven that she could play from memory the 'Bagatelles.' Each year how tall and fair she grew, always loving, but her one desire to which she gave everything—time, thought, her very self—was to be worthy to interpret the master's music." Then bitterly this poor human heart would cry: "Now all is ended. Why could it not have been my faded, useless eyes that closed, and not hers, with all life's promises before them?"

As the weeks went by the exaltation of sorrow, as it might be called, faded, and left the blind girl listless, weary, struggling when with her mother for a cheerfulness which did not for one instant deceive the eyes of Love. They know not love who say that "Love is blind"—nay, nothing makes the eyes so keen as love. By its power virtues shine with a resplendent light, and faults, while seen, are hidden from unfriendly criticism, till love so changes them that they become the very gold of character.

With sinking heart, day by day, the woman marked the increased pallor of the girl's face; the feebleness with which she groped her way. The one hour of the day in which she seemed her former self was at dusk, when, seated at her loved instrument, all her despairing longings were voiced in exquisite harmonies.

"She cannot live and bear this long," the mother would whisper, as she listened outside the door.

It was one glorious evening, when the unusually long pause which followed this most beautiful of adagios told of the struggle being waged within.

Suddenly the woman stood erect, the tears not dried upon her cheek, but a new light in her eyes, and a firm resolve irradiating her face—"Yes, that will help, and that only; tomorrow I will go to him."

It was nearly the close of the following long summer day, when, in answer to a low knock, an elderly woman opened the door of one of the seemingly endless apartments which lined each side of the narrow, dark street.

"The master is out, but you can wait; he will soon come," said the housekeeper as she disappeared.

Almost timidly the visitor sat down in the cheerless room, near a table, dusty and disordered, strewn with manuscript, on top of which lay a slate and pencil. As the woman's eyes fell upon this she exclaimed inaudibly, taking up the pencil: "This is the better way—I will write it all and go; he will not need my presence; it will be easier for us both if he reads it by himself. He has known grief and disappointment, and as heart answereth to heart, so will he respond to what I ask."

"Revered Master:

"I am unknown to you, and so my name would count for nothing. I come to you out of the depths of my great need, as one stricken human soul cries to the one on earth who can comprehend and help, and yet I plead not for myself, but for one dearer than life—my child.

"How can I make you understand that you and your music have been through all the years of her young girlhood almost as the breath of her life? The consummation of all her tireless work was to become your pupil. This star of hope which guided her for years has sunk in blackest night, for now she is blind—hopelessly blind—Daily I see her grow weaker, the spring of action, of desire, broken, and I know unless some stimulus is given, she will slip forever from my arms.

"You and you only, can make her feel there is something still for her to do for music. Each night at twilight she sits for hours and plays what you have written.

"Would it be asking too great a gift if on one of your nightly wanderings you should pass a little house, but three doors from where your nephew Carl has lived, and should hear your own familiar music, you would stop and enter, speak and give to my blind, grief-stricken child, from out of your deep experience, courage to bear her lot?

"She knows nothing of my visit to your room, nor of this letter, written by her mother."

Again and again by the fast-fading daylight, the master read this mother's cry for help, and the written words seemed to bring before him every harsh, untoward circumstance of his own life. He saw himself a little boy, dragged from his bed after midnight by a drunken father, and forced to practice for hours.

"I can forgive and forget that," the man muttered, "but this is harder to forgive, and forgetfulness is denied me," and he lifted a clumsy ear-trumpet which hung by his side, regarding it with a melancholy smile.

"What demon guided my father's hand that he should always strike my ears whenever I came into his presence, and destroy the keenest sense a musician craves?" And restlessly he paced up and down the room. "Oh, this ceaseless, unavailing questioning!" And the clenched hands showed the struggle within.

"The world calls me morose, irritable. What does the world know of the tortures I endure in silence? Deaf from my early boyhood, cut off from my kind; denied love, wife, children, home. O Eternal One, Thou alone knowest all, Thou alone canst read my heart!"

And the master stood motionless, covering his face with his hands. With a mighty effort the man roused himself. "This will never do. I must go to her with cheer and comfort. I must show her that these and these," and he touched eyes and ears, "are not what make life worth living. I must prove to her that it is the divine within each one which makes for life, and only as we manifest that life do we really live."

As the master closed his door and stepped into the street a sight of such transcendent beauty met his gaze that he stood motionless, lost in contemplation of nature's loveliness. The leaves of the trees in the neighboring park swayed gently to and fro in the soft summer breeze. The sky was studded with stars, but these paled and faded before the light of the glorious full moon, which seem to ride the heavens as a queen, and sent a shaft of glittering moonbeams before the master as he walked slowly along, his head bent and his hands clasped behind his back.

On and on he walked, apparently without thought of definite direction, and yet as though the way were known and had often been traversed. After many turnings, and just as he passed a little house set somewhat back from the street, some impulse made him lift his ear-trumpet, and, as he did, soft and clear he heard the strains of music.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, "so it is here," and motionless he listened until the movement was completed. Then he whispered: "She has feeling, comprehension; she will understand. I will go in."

Somewhat hesitatingly he entered and tapped gently at the door of the room from which the sounds of music had come.

Almost instantly the door was opened, and in the moonlighted room the girl stood before him, saying in low tones: "Please tell me who it is, for I am blind."

In equally low tones he answered: "And I am deaf. I also am a musician, and hearing music played as only one can play who loves it I ventured to enter. Will you pardon my intrusion?"

The color flamed in the girl's cheeks as she faltered, nervously clasping and unclasping her hands: "It is a pleasure to welcome you, sir. You are a musician. Will you not enter and play to me?"

"Willingly," he replied.

Seating himself at the worn piano the man drew forth tones of such sweetness, such power, that the blind girl, greatly agitated, her hand pressed over her heart to still its beating, drew nearer and nearer, crying involuntarily, "Who are you? You told me you were deaf, and a musician. There is but one who can play like this—you are—the master!" and with fast-falling tears the girl bent and kissed his hand. "It is like some beautiful dream," the child murmured, "and if I stir I shall awake."

She knew not how it was that soon she had unburdened her heart of all its aspirations and lost joys.

"My child," and tenderly the master laid his hand on the bowed head, "I have lived long and suffered much, and this I know, there is a compensation for every trial. Our weak and finite sense too often fails to grasp life's meaning, but the deepest, most heartrending experiences should yield the fullest, richest harvest. [illegible] time—with childish folly have I railed at my deafness. How do I know that without it I could have shut out the world's allurements, and have attained? From your blindness may blossom some marvellous flower of beauty that will live forever."

At this moment the moon, which had been clouded up to this time, came out in full splendor, and sent a flood of light into every corner of the tiny room.

"How wondrously beautiful, how heavenly the moonlight is," the man murmured; then, turning to the girl and regarding her compassionately, he continued: "I will make you see the moonlight with your inward sense—the spiritual. I will improvise for you a Moonlight Sonata. You shall be its inspiration, its motive power."

There was a deep and pregnant silence in the room, as the master's rugged head sank down upon his breast; then softly his fingers pressed the keys, and there flowed forth an infinitely tender melody, which crept gently on, even as the moonbeams' light creeps over the earth. Filled with the sadness of all the ages, there was yet the calm, the dignity, which speaks of love and conquered sorrow.

"Oh, I can bear all things now!" the girl whispered, leaning forward, fearful to lose one magic strain.

Seeing the wrought tension in the child's face, the player said: "Now I will show you how the moon sprites dance."

And quick to answer to his change of thought the girl cried gleefully: "O, I can see them twining their arms about each other, their pale moonbeam tresses waving as they float hither and thither, now singly, now in groups."

Beethoven's Dream — By De Lemunc

Then a darker mood seized the man, and the keys under his fingers rang out in bitter protest, in fiery rebellion.

Agitated, trembling, the girl crouched by his side, but he was oblivious to all—the little room, the blind girl—only the genius, the Titan was there, battling with Destiny. Then the waves of sound surged about him, as the roar of the mighty ocean, proclaiming in triumph, "All thy storms have gone over me, but have not quenched me. I rise above time and circumstance, for I am deathless—immortal."

As, pale and exhausted with emotion, he rose to go, the girl cried tremulously: "What have you not done for me—what have you not given me?"

And gently the master said: "I have given you love, courage, faith, for I have given you the 'Moonlight Sonata.'"

Cheerfulness is like music to the soul; it excites to the duty, it oils the wheels of affliction, makes duties light, and religion ride swiftly on the wings of deligh

BABY'S VALUE

She isn't worth a fortune, and she hasn't any stocks;
Her wealth is all in little shoes and pinafores and frocks,
In little rings of curling hair and big, blue, laughing eyes,
In leaves and grass, and buds and flowers, and bees and butterflies.
But when she comes in tired from play and crawls up on my knee,
She's worth a hundred millions to her mother and to me.

She sits among her dolls and toys, and doesn't seem to care
If wealth is all in rosy cheeks and locks of curly hair.
She toddles up to me, and, like a dainty fay, will write
A cheque drawn on love's bank with just her glances sweet and bright
And when she puts her soft arms round my neck and coos in glee,
She's worth uncounted millions to her mother and to me.

And when she's in her crib at night, and cosily tucked in,
The wealth of Croesus couldn't buy the dimple in her chin.
And as she blinks her roguish eyes to play at peek-a-boo,
She chuckles me a fortune with each archly-spoken coo.
And though she has no fortune, I am sure you will agree
She's a fortune, more than money, to her mother and to me.

Canada as a Summer Resort

Written especially for this edition.

ONE of the available assets of Canada, and a source of ever-increasing revenue to the Dominion, is her growing popularity as a summer resort. It has been stated that twelve million dollars is spent annually in Maine by tourists. This is because Maine is old, advertised, and famous as a place where weary mortals may rest, where the fisherman may fish, and the huntsman hunt; but when Canada becomes known to the people of the Republic, who, of course, make up the bulk of the summer travel, millions of dollars will be spent here.

This will not detract, in any measure, from other out-door places, because the more men go the more they want to go. It is becoming more and more a recognized fact, that every man, woman, and child should have, at least once a year, a holiday—a loafing season. Even Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world, takes a holiday every year and goes back to the simple life in the woods—loafs and lounges in the little country town up in New England where the people are quaint, original and honest;

"Where the creeks are clear, and the skies blue,
And the hearts of the people kind and true;
Where folks do just as they want to do—
Folks that are livin' in the country."

The Lake of Bays is far the largest lake in the Huntsville District. From the deck of the "Iroquois" or "Mohawk" can be seen some inland scenery unsurpassed. The wooded hills billow away in every direction, not a rough, inhospitable shore always, for here and there are wide open reaches running down to the lake and sometimes away high on the hills are fine farms, from which the lakeside hotels draw new garden truck, fresh butter, buttermilk and sweet cream for the summer tourists. There is a ten-mile sail across the Lake of Bays, but many an enthusiast has taken off his hat long before he has reached the half-way island, and named her Queen of Lakes as she smiled up at the blue sky, her emerald island jewels glowing upon her quiet breast. The very trees that top the high hills that surround her shores seem to sing the praises of the Lake of Bays.

The natural charm and accessibility of this section are making friends year by year for the Huntsville District, of which the Lake of Bays is easily the chief charm.

Dwight Bay, with its green shore curving caressingly around it, and sloping gently and gradually back, sheltering groves with open evenness running down to the water edge, through which we get glimpses of open fields beyond, long reaches of slanting sandy beaches, where babes can bathe in absolute safety; cunning little cottages, picturesque summer houses, the white church, the schoolhouse, the hotel, and the "Iroquois" in the offing, that is but a faint hint of a picture of this beautiful Bay. Dwight Bay is its own best advertisement. The fact that the first visitor to this comparatively new resort came twenty years ago from a certain city in the State of New York, went home happy, came again and again, bringing each year others from the same section of that interesting state, speaks well for the Lake of Bays generally, and for Dwight Bay in particular. The Bay, walled in on three sides, is as safe for the canoeist as the shallow beach is for bathers.

The opening paragraph in this description describes the scenes to the north at the head of the Bay. On the west shore the dark-wooded mainland rises abruptly, while the river comes singing in from the east. Sail around the entire shore line, leave and sail all the other lakes in the "Highlands of Ontario," and there will remain with you the memory of Norway Point, Point Ideal, Britannia, and more distictly still, Dwight Bay, the Beautiful.

Of course the people have been coming to the Lake of Bays for a good many years as they have to the Muskoka District, but until 1908 there was not sufficient first-class accommodation to attract a great number of the best class of tourists.

Last year a beautiful hotel called the Wawa was built at Norway Point. Wawa is Indian for "Wild Goose," and as the wild geese go north in summer, so the tourists betake themselves to the Highlands of Ontario and to the Wawa.

When the proposition came up to build a beautiful hotel at Norway Point, where the beach spreads out on the sleeping shore, the Grand Trunk representatives predicted that they would be able to fill the hotel the first season, and with that promise or prediction, the work was commenced. To the surprise of the promoters and the builders of the hotel, the house was filled, not the first season, but the first month it was opened. During the month of June alone three hundred applicants were turned away, representing perhaps five hundred people.

In justification of the assertion at the opening of this article, that the more summer resorts we have, the more people will come, it is interesting to know that the new resort, opening a new pleasure land in the Highlands of Ontario, has actually helped the older resorts in the Muskoka District. Hundreds of people who were unable to find room at the Wawa, hastened to secure accommodation at the Royal Muskoka and other older hotels in the well-known district.

The Huntsville District affords every variety of scenery. The calm pastoral of Vernon, the romantic and rugged mountainous grandeur of Hollow, the fine bathing and quiet scenery of Lake of Bays, and the picturesque beauty, coupled with the unsurpassed fishing and hunting along the entire chain, lend to these waters an attraction and a charm. The ease with which any point along the system may be reached, and the facility with which from the solitude of primeval forests, deep glades, mountain dells, babbling brooks and enchanting lakes (the haunts of fish and game), the tourist may find a base of supplies, together with the superiority of the scenery, are among the causes rendering these lakes such favorite camping resorts.

The Rev. Edward S. Young, of Pittsburg, in an article in The Index, speaking of the Lake of Bays, says: "The Lake of Bays, where the cool breezes blow the purest air the Almighty has thus far manufactured; where groves of spice balsam lift their graceful minarets against the sky; where the old Laurentian rock, one of the oldest of this earth's formations, juts its bald ledge occasionally above the clearing; where the timbered slopes run toward the waters too rapidly for the accumulation of swamps; where the sandy beach gently feels its way into the soft, clear water, that the children may bathe in safety and hilarity; where in the early summer the speckled trout, unwary, seeks the wriggling worm or the artificial fly, and through all the summer down in the cool depths the noble salmon trout awaits the whirl of your otter or archer spinner at the end of your copper troll-line; where the skies and the clouds at sunset make the fading light go farther than Russell Sage could make a ten-dollar bill; where the sone or the call uttered in the twilight or under the moonlight is taken up by the circle of the surrounding hills and played into a melody of echoes; where you can on the cold nights gather around a fireplace crackling with Norway pine and cedar just for the blaze and fragrance, and plenty of beech and hardwood for solid heat; where all the children and all the dyspeptics suddenly turn into one group of appetites; where the insomnia wretch sleeps twenty-six hours out of the day and still more out of the night; where there are no nerves and no worry."

Fish abound. Speckled trout, salmon trout and black bass are plentiful in these waters; while whitefish, salmon trout and speckled trout are found in great quantities in the waters of the surrounding lakes. As a field for the geologist and mineralogist, the district is interesting. Wahawin, a delightful resort consisting of one hundred and forty acres, has a frontage on the Lake of Bays. Beginning at a fine shelving beach, it rises in natural terraces 70 to 80 feet to a plateau above, and is wooded on the slope with the choicest of hardwood trees. The location commands one of the finest views on the lake. Cottages are available here, also fine locations for cottage sites.

Not the least on the charms of Wahawin lies in the many woodland walks radiating in every direction from the cottages. There is a daily mail service by steamer.

Another popular resort is Britannia (on Lake of Bays). Britannia is the first calling point of steamer after leaving South Portage. Located on a fine bay on a sloping hillside, with fine bathing beach, this resort includes some 300 acres of land, part wooded and part cultivated. Extensive additions and improvements have been made here during the past year, and this resort has room capacity for 100 guests; beautifully cleared walks through the woods, along the lake shore, tennis courts and croquet grounds and a fine baseball ground situated on the brow of the hill back of the house overlooking the lake; a large covered pavilion, 100 feet by 42 feet for dancing, musicales, etc., electric lighted, has been erected, and weekly evening excursions to this point are run by the "Iroquois" for social hops or other amusements.

Christmas should be a day of joy, but joy should not be allowed to die out of our lives when the day is past and over. It should stay with us ever after. We should sing the Christmas refrain through all the new year and keep our hearts bright with the cheer and glow of the Christmas thought. We should carry continuallly in our hearts a deeper sense of the presence of God. We should from this time learn to find the beauty and good in all things and show to all the world our belief that since God loves us, and Jesus Christ is our eternal Friend, "all's well with the world" and with us who are in his tender keeping.—Anon.

CHRIST, the perfect babe, is born,
HOLY, holy is the morn.
ROYAL gifts the wise men bring,
INCENSE for immortal King.
SING His praise O angel throng
TILL a world repeats the song,
MAKER, God of Heaven and earth,
ALL shall glorify His birth,
SINGING, Holy is the morn.

The babe lying in a manger, heaven's gift to earth, is the picture we most easily understand of how the glorious life was literally given in love of our race. But the fact of the love that gives itself is none the less when we see that life being lived for others in later years, and at last, as a necessary part of its true and full living, dying for the world.—Henry F. Cope.

In one of the German picture galleries is a painting called "Cloudland." It hangs at the end of a long gallery, and at first sight it looks like a huge, repulsive daub of confused color, without form or comeliness. As you walk toward it, the picture begins to take shape, it proves to be a mass of exquisite little cherub faces, which somehow or other immediately rivet the attention like those at the head of the canvas in Raphael's "Madonna San Sisto." If you come close to the picture, you see only an innumerable company of little angels and cherubim. How often the soul that is frightened by trial sees nothing but a confused mass of broken expectations and crushed hopes! But if that soul instead of fleeing away into unbelief and despair, will only draw up near to God, it will soon discover that the cloud is full of angels of mercy.—(By the Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.)

W. St. Thomas Smith, Canada's Greatest Marine Artist.

Written specially for this edition.

W. St. Thomas Smith

"MY PICTURES must sell themselves," says St. Thomas Smith, the greatest marine artist that Canada has produced. "My ambition at first was to be a portrait painter and I used to get commissions. But I couldn't do my best work then. It was too commercial."

Such has always been the peculiarity of the "artistic temperament," to appreciate intrinsic values at the expense of material things.

St. Thomas Smith knows a great deal about the forest, the sunshine, the songs of birds, rocks and plains, ocean waves and great open spaces, and the big things of life, he is not so much concerned with the "hams and cheeses." He doesn't decorate Christmas cards; he paints on big sheets the big things of nature.

Born in Belfast of Scotch parentage, he claims to be Scotch because of his long line of Scottish ancestry. At the age of seven he came with his parents and brothers to live on the shores of Lake Simcoe in Beaverton.

Many of the happiest of his boyhood days were spent on the water, and he loved the lake in its every mood. He belonged to a race of sailors. He didn't require to learn the secrets of the great deeps. The understanding of the sea was inborn. Had he not been an artist he would have been a sailor. But instead of exploring the vast bodies of water, he chose to interpret them.

Among his ancestors there had also been artists some who had even acquired reputation. But art as a profession was not very highly regarded by the Scottish parents. The artist's remuneration was too uncertain, and the Scot is born with a practical mind.

At school he didn't distinguish himself by his precocity. He confesses to this day to an aversion to arithmetic. He preferred covering his school books with heads and sketches. And those were the days when the moral value of Art was not recognized in the training of the child. The boy who wasted his time in drawing was more likely than not to be brought into personal contact with the strap.

But the teacher of Beaverton School was a man of broader vision than the average pedagogue of his time. Alex. Muir, who gave to Canada the national song, 'The Maple Leaf Forever," saw merit in the budding artist's work and encouraged him in every way.

St. Thomas Smith has had no happier day in his life than the one on which he was presented with his first box of water color paints. He was only eleven years old, and it filled him with joy to be able to reproduce in colors the things he loved in nature. Crude his pictures were, no doubt, but full of portent of better things.

At the age of nineteen he entered the Art School in Toronto where he acquired technique. A master can teach drawing, but he cannot teach color if it isn't there. Later he was in the studio of J. W. L. Forster.

For a time St. Thomas Smith painted heads and portraits on commission, and very creditable work he did. Then he "found himself." Every one who is really in earnest in life "finds himself" sooner or later. His vocation was the painting truthfully of the sky and the waves of which he had such an intimate knowledge.

"I like the Scotch School of Art," he says, "because the artists paint true to nature. When they are impressionists, they are truthful impressionists. They don't paint pink eyes in green cheeks."

Half tone reproductions can give no adequate idea of St. Thomas Smith's paintings. The reproductions tell something of the form, but they cannot tell of the marvellous coloring, the wonderful atmosphere of the pictures, the almost uncanny fidelity with which he has told the story of sullen seas and lowering skies.

His waves are not choppy, irritable and malicious; they are great billows that rear themselves from mighty deeps, awe-inspiring in their majesty. The ship that is tossed in their midst is a toy of a day, the work of frail human hands; the waves are eternal and "yield homage only to eternal laws."

The artist has felt these things, as well as seen them, and has been enabled to give them significance. "Mid-Ocean" (reproduced on this page) reveals the open sea, dark, deep, blue-green. One doesn't need to be told that the season is October. The sky above tells the story—clouds, slate colored and opaque, clouds light and fleecy, scud along, here and there revealing a glimpse of pale blue sky.

All of St. Thomas Smith's summer months are spent beside the sea, down in Newfoundland, at Gaspe, Cape Breton, Prince Edward Island, the Magdalene Islands, and in Great Britain and Holland.

Newfoundland is his favorite camping place because of the deep water effects he so loves to reproduce, which can be seen near the land. At Land's End in the South of England he has found the same effects.

But he doesn't always paint ships, sombre seas and cloudy skies. Sometimes he paints sunsets, gorgeous but never harsh, again, he paints autumn scenes, warm and rich in coloring. Are these colors true to nature? His answer is "Go and see for yourselves."

Last spring he painted a Canadian rural scene, a little house with blossoming tree beside it, vivid green grass, and above, coming up from the lakes in the distance, black, angry thunder clouds.

"I'd be afraid to have it in the house," said a friend, "I'd be afraid I'd be struck by lightning."

Color, color, color! He revels in color. Canadian winter has never appealed to him because of the monotonous whiteness, the lack of color. He once did a winter scene, however.

Coming over to London from St. Thomas on a South-Western Traction car, he was stalled in a blizzard. All is grist to the artist's mill as well as the writer's. He occupied the time in sketching. A magnificent winter scene was the result. The picture, declared by critics and friends to be one of his finest, was unfortunately lost in the Academy fire in Toronto this year.

Though he has travelled much abroad, visited the art galleries, the schools and the studios of Great Britain and Europe, and become well acquainted with many of the notable artists of the day, he has not yet seen the Canadian Northwest, with its vast plains and great mountains.

He looks forward to the Rocky Mountains, expecting to find inspiration in the majestic rocks that "Man hasn't been able to spoil."

And what manner of man is this artist who strives—and very successfully—to "draw the Thing as he sees It for the God of Things as They Are?"

Dark-haired, dark-moustached, dark-eyed, and of medium height. He doesn't affect artistic negligee nor extreme style in dress that might attract attention to himself. Real geniuses don't need to be eccentric.

When at home, he lives in a quaint old red brick house on Wellington street, in St. Thomas.

'Why did you decide to live in St. Thomas?" he was once asked by an interviewer.

"Because I got my wife in St. Thomas," he replied, with a humorous twinkle in his eye, and that was all the inquisitive reporter could get out of him on that subject, or any other subject.

At the Art School in Toronto he met Miss Julia Payne, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Payne, of Talbotville.

They were married and set up their household gods in St. Thomas in 1889. Mrs. St. Thomas Smith has charge of the department of sculpture in Alma Ladies' College. She is possessed of exceptional talent, and in a large American city might make a fortune in her chosen work. A competent critic, her criticism and encouragement have without doubt been of inestimable value to her husband.

Three charming daughters complete the home circle, the eldest, a clever violinist, the second who has a voice of much promise, and the third, still in school, who bids fair to become the artist of the family.

St. Thomas Smith confesses to even neglecting painting for the fascinations of trout-fishing in the inland waters of Newfoundland.

The collecting of quaint old pieces of brass and china is one of his hobbies. On the mantel of the drawing room of the St. Thomas house are the most delightful old Dutch brass lamps, tea pots and coffee urns. In the corner is a cabinet filled with rare old china and other curios.

"Who is your favorite author?" he was asked one day.

'Hans Christian Andersen," came the rather unexpected reply.

Some friends laugh at him for carrying a volume of Andersen's Fairy Tales with him wherever he goes, but they are the friends who have not learned to appreciate the riches of humor and philosophy and gentle irony of the friend of the children who wrote children's(?) stories.

St. Thomas Smith is a delightful conversationalist, and tells in a most interesting and humorous manner of the places he has seen and the people he has met. He talks well about everything but his pictures and himself. He expects his pictures to talk for themselves as well as sell themselves. When he does talk pictures, he talks of art in general, of color in particular and of the work of other artists. He is more apt to show something painted by a friend than one of his own creations.

He has one picture painted by a friend that he values very highly, an old woman with folded hands, sitting in front of a table. The light shining through a window in front of her throws a radiance over her face, plain, strong, and full of lines of sorrow and suffering.

He was showing the picture to a lady visitor not long ago. After duly admiring, she began to moralize: "Youth has beauty, but age has experience. Age is more interesting."

"Not when you are getting there," quickly replied the artist.

He doesn't need to talk. He has scarcely reached middle age.

The water colors of St. Thomas Smith adorn the best homes of Canada, from Atlantic to Pacific. The Premier of Canada, Sir Wilfred Laurier, is one of his patrons, and he has exhibited at all the great American exhibitions.

Great Britain would doubtless appreciate his work.

But even over in Great Britain it is not considered good form to give epoch-making statesmen, poets and others tombs in Westminister Abbey until after they are dead.

The unwritten law for centuries has been: "Give a man his due when he is dead and it can't make any difference to him."

And so, through the centuries the great artists in all lines, with few exceptions, have struggled along amid adverse circumstances.

A great consolation it must be to a genius to know that a laurel wreath will adorn the brow of a bust on the monument erected to his memory some hundred years post mortem.

Let us, as Canadians, write a new law for ourselves—honor our artists, our poets, our musicians, while they are alive. We may erect monuments to dead geniuses and heroes; let us give appreciation and support to living ones.

Like the hero of the farce-comedy, most of them prefer, 'more taffy and less epi-taffy.'

Isabel E. Armstrong.

"Making for Harbour"

Painting by W. St. Thomas Smith

A Dutch Landscape

Mid-Ocean

"Where do you come from?" asked the mice, "And what do you know?" They were so dreadfully inquisitive. "Tell us about the prettiest spot on earth. Have you been there? Have you been in the larder where there are cheeses on the shelves and hams hanging from the ceiling, where one can dance on tallow candles, and where one goes in thin and comes out fat?"

"I don't know anything about that," said the tree; "but I know the forest, where the sun shines and where the birds sing." And then it told them everything from its youth onward, and the little mice had never heard anything like it before.

The following night there came a great many more mice, and on the Sunday even two rats: but they said the story was not funny, and the little mice were sorry to hear this, for now they also thought less of it.

"Do you know only that one story?" asked the rats.

"Only that one," answered the tree. "I heard it on the happiest evening of my life, but I did not then know how happy I was."

"It's a very poor story. Don't you know any one with bacon and tallow candles in it—any story from the larders?"—From "The Pine Tree," by Hans Andersen.

Rich Without Money

THERE are some characters who carry their wealth with them, who are rich without money. They do not need palatial homes or a large banking account. They do not need to buy admission to society—everybody loves them. They are welcome everywhere, because they have that which money cannot buy—a genial, helpful, sunny, cheerful disposition. Of course, everybody wants them, because it is a joy to be with them. Everybody loves the sunshine, and hates the shadows and the gloom. There is no bank account that can balance a sweet, gracious personality. No material wealth can match a sunny heart, an ability to radiate helpfulness and sweetness. But such grace and charms never live with selfishness or selfseeking. It is the people who have something to give, not who are trying to get something, that are wanted everywhere.

A true friend unbosoms freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends courageously, and continues a friend unchangeably.—William Penn.

No branch of art economy is more important than that of making the intellect at your disposal pure as well as powerful, so that it may always gather for you the sweetest and fairest things.

Christmas Weather

FOR centuries the idea has prevailed that "a green Christmas makes a full graveyard."

This is a belief too gruesome for the happy season. Of course, snow, icy landscapes and the chill but exhilarating breezes of winter seem more appropriate at Christmas. We can then gather at the fire, warm our hands, as our hearts should be warmed by the sentiment of the season, and rejoice in the world-wide exchange of good will.

The fact is that, in the middle and southern sections of the country, at least, cold Christmas days are not the rule.

When the boy of the family receives a new and gorgeously painted sled from Santa Claus, and the girl finds in her stocking or nearby, the pair of skates she has been wishing for, nothing short of a blizzard, or blizzard weather, will be satisfactory.

Good, clear, cold days of the old-fashioned kind please the elders best, too, notwithstanding the additional demand upon the coal bins. But are cold Christmases the rule? It seems not.

United States weather records run back about the life of a generation. But there are private records extending still further into the past. And these show that cold Christmas days have not been the rule.

We learn, for instance, that Christmas, 1825, was anything but cold, and the mean temperature was forty-two degrees. Christmas 1830, was even warmer, the maximum temperature reaching fifty-seven degrees, and this was but one degree above that of the preceding Christmas.

On December 26, 1829, thunderstorms occurred in some portions of the South, accompanied by frequent and vivid flashes of lightning. On December 25, 1851, the maximum temperature was forty degrees, but on the following day the mercury fell, until at night it registered only nine degrees.

Then there came the mild fall of 1855, when the weather was so springlike up to December 25 that rosebuds lingered in the gardens. In some places roses were in bloom on Christmas Day.

TOURISTS, THREE SCHNEIDER

Two years later Christmas was memorable because of its delightful weather, and it is related in the diaries of that time that the grass in the fields was green and flourishing when New Year's came.

Much fine weather was reported in December, 1863—the year of the first national Thanksgiving—but the December of the following year presented very different conditions.

"It was a very disagreeable month," states a recorder of facts of time. Snow, rain and fog prevailed throughout the month, and walking was of the worst kind."

While the mean temperature for Christmas, 1869, was only slightly above the freezing point, the month of December was mild—warm at times. On the last day of the month a pansy was plucked in bloom in the latitude of Pennsylvania.

December of 1891 was unusually warm and humid; there was no fall of snow during the month.

The cold Christmas Days of recent years were in 1878, when the mercury went down as low as fifteen degrees in clear weather; in 1884, a partly clear day, when twenty-two degrees was the minimum; 1887, a clear day, with twenty-seven degrees as the lowest; 1890, cloudy, with twenty-four degrees minimum; 1892, snowy, and sixteen degrees; 1896, clear and eleven degrees; 1897, clear, and seventeen degrees.

From these statistics it is very evident that it is not the usual condition for Christmas to be a day of freezing temperature.

After all, it isn't the state of weather that makes a happy Christmas. The enjoyment of the season grows from a contented and charitable heart. Whether the coming Christmas season be one of sunshine or of gloom depends upon those who attune their hearts to its kindly sentiments.

King Edward's Christmas Giving

YOU have often wondered, perhaps, how a king remembers his relatives and friends at Christmas—for a mighty ruler has his circle of personal and intimate friends just as any one else has.

Naturally, however, gifts made by royalty are more expensive as a rule than those exchanged in humbler circles. It is said that King Edward and Queen Alexandra spend between $20,000 and $25,000 each year upon their Christmas purchases.

In order to remember their personal friends with a suitable souvenir of the season, each requires between eighty and one hundred gifts. As these usually take the form of jewelry the cost is heavy.

It is nothing unusual, several days of a week before Christmas, to see the King and Queen paying quiet visits to the stores in Bond and Regent streets, London. They like to mingle with the holiday shoppers and to select their gifts just as other persons do.

When time and pressing engagements do not permit this, the West End shopkeepers send samples of their goods to the royal palace, and from these the King and Queen make their selections.

In choosing Christmas gifts, their Majesties are always careful to make each one appropriate to its intended recipient. Jewelry is the King's most frequent choice, but he also gives away snuff-boxes, smokers' requisites and walking-sticks.

With each gift it is the King's usual custom to send a little note of greeting instead of a private Christmas card and, needless to say, the former is more valued by the recipient than the latter would be.

This practice is also followed by Queen Alexandra.

In addition to jeweled trinkets, however, a common gift from the Queen to personal friends is a photograph of some favorite scene or pet, taken by the Queen herself, daintily mounted and framed, with the royal monogram, "A," surmounted by a crown, on the frame.

Not only do the royal pair send tokens of remembrance to relatives and favorite friends at home and abroad, but they present a Yuletide gift to every member of their household, which is an extensive one.

Of course the gift made to dependents are not as costly nor as handsome as those purchased for relatives and friends, but they are carefully chosen.

Queen Alexandra often follows the custom of Queen Victoria, whose habit it was to present dress goods, shawls, etc., to female members of the royal household. King Edward, too, sometimes includes pairs of good slippers among his Christmas gifts for male servants, but cigarette and cigar cases and pipes are his usual presents to these people.

And, in addition to the members of the royal household, each employee on the Sandringham estate also receives a Christmas gift from the King. Large joints are handed to each man in the several departments, from the highest to the lowest in rotation. Only the primest joints are given to the employees, the other parts—good meat for all that—being distributed among the cottagers on the estate who are not employed by His Majesty, or who are past work.

Then gifts of game are also made to a large number of persons who in any way may have rendered some service to His Majesty. Railway employees, postoffice officials, police and tradesmen are often favored by the receipt of pheasants, partridges, hares or rabbits, bearing a big label, "From His Majesty the King," printed in bold red letters

Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much;
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.
—William Cowper.

LILLIAN RUSSELL TO APPEAR HERE

World Famous Actress to be Seen at Grand Opera House in "Wildfire" on December 23rd.

Messrs. J J Turner & Sons, proprietors of the Grand Opera House, have been successful in securing an engagement extraordinary for the Christmas season in the appearance at the Grand on Wednesday, Dec. 23rd, of the famous American actress, Miss Lillian Russell in her wonderfully successful racing comedy "Wild Fire," assisted by an all star New York cast, including Will Archer, as the jockey in which his work has made him renowned all over the continent. This is Miss Russell's first appearance in Peterborough and it is safe to say that she will be greeted by a crowded house. Her brief Canadian tour embraces only Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and Peterborough, so that this city is especially favoured in seeing this celebrated actress in her equally celebrated play. That plan will open a week from Monday.

FIRE ORIGINATED IN THE AMERICAN HOTEL

Brigade Called and Very Little Damage Resulted.

On Sunday night shortly after nine o'clock the fire brigade received a call to the American Hotel, on Hunter street, where they found a small fire in one of the bed rooms in the back of the house. It was soon extinguished before it did any more damage than burning some paper and the oil cloth.

MEETING OF THE INTHON BIBLE CLASS YESTERDAY

The attendance at the Inthon Bible Class was fairly good yesterday afternoon If the Inthons would use the class motto, "We can if I will," a little more, it should see the attendance jump to one hundred and over. Next Sunday, in connection with the Christmas lesson, a talk on astronomy will be an important feature, and will be given by one of the Inthons.

For a time the Inthons considered the formation of a hockey team, but now they find the great majority of the members are benedicts and the team will be given up. Those who wish may represent the class by joining the Church League, of which Mr. Robertson has taken charge.—Com.

EDWARD O'BRIEN'S SUDDEN DEATH; PASSES AWAY ON HIS WAY HOME

Coroner Dr. Gray Decides Than an Inquest is Necessary and Jury Was Empanelled To-day—Found Dead in a Sleigh.

INQUEST ON THURSDAY

A death that was startling in its suddenness was that of Edward O'Brien, a well known resident of Douro township, who passed away on Saturday evening while on his way home from Peterborough, where he had been on business. The deceased came into the city on Saturday morning in company with several other farmers and spent the day here. Mr. O'Brien during the day traded one of the horses that had been driven in and the new one was harnessed with the other horse. In company with Messrs. John Smith and Guerin, Mr. O'Brien left the city on Saturday night to drive to his home and it is stated that after they had gone about three miles the new horse became ill or exhausted and fell to the ground. They were unable to get it to its feet again and Mr. O'Brien's companions went for assistance, leaving him in the sleigh. When they returned they found him dead. He was taken to a farm house until yesterday morning when Messrs. Lane and Kane were notified and brought the remains to their undertaking establishment.

On hearing the circumstances Coroner Dr. Gray decided that an inquest was necessary, and accordingly a jury was empanelled this morning, and met at 11 o'clock in the A.O.U.F. Hall, Hunter street, where they were sworn in and chose Mr. A E Micks as foreman. The jury was composed of the following: Jas. Bell, Archie Campbell, Jas. Read, John Halpin, Fred Cook, A E Micks, Joseph Hickey, Jas. Murty, J T G Lang, K G Leth, J H Craig, Wm Hudson and J W. Carey.

The jury viewed the remains, after which they were dismissed to meet again on Thursday night at 7.30 o'clock in the Council Chambers. A post mortem examination is being held on the remains to-day.

The deceased was a former resident of Peterborough and was very well known here. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Amelia, living in Rochester, and by two brothers, Michael and Alexander, residing in East City.

"GLOBE TROTTERS" ARRIVE AT LINDSAY; ARE GIVEN ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION BEFORE THEIR IDENTITY IS REVEALED

It will be remembered that on Friday two yooung men, who gave their names as A. R. Fletcher and Frank Hines arrived in the city and spread the story that they were walking around the world on a wager of $5000 undertaking to walk 25,000 miles in two years. They were entertained at one of the local hotels and spent the night there and next morning after calling upon several prominent citizens left for Lindsay. On Saturday morning Al Stevens a theatrical manager and his comedian Dan Fraser arrived in the city and on hearing the story at once stated that the men were members of his company which had disorganized in an eastern town the other night and that their story of walking around the world, was nothing but a fake and that in fact they had started their trip at Campbellford.

The two seem to have taken in the people of Lindsay pretty thoroughly. When they arrived there on Friday night they were interviewed by all the newspapers and told an amazing story of the many stirring incidents that they had experienced while on their way from Labrador, where they stated they had started their walk. They acted as judges in a contest at the Roller Rink that night and were made much of, but afterwards their story was exposed.

PROVISION MADE FOR LOADING AND UNLOADING AT MATTHEWS'

The new siding into the Geo. Matthews Company's yards is now completed and greatly increases the loading and unloading facilities. This is the second siding and was found necessary because of the fact that frequently, when the manufactured products were being shipped there was no room left to unload hogs which were then left in the C. P. R. yards.

A new platform has been built between the two sidings in the company's yard. At the east end it is connected with the pens. To unload from the upper deck of some cars a movable affair has been provided down which the hogs can easily run. This arrangement now allowing loading and unloading at the same time.

Rev. Victor McFadden Will Be Ordained Priest On Sunday

On Sunday morning next at the 10.30 o'clock mass at St. Peter's Cathedral Rev. Victor McFadden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin McFadden, Elm street, will be ordained priest by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor. A special sermon will be preached by Rev. Father Roach, of Toronto. The number of ordinations to the priesthood of the sons of parents of this diocease and especially of the city is ever more increased and another young man is vested with sacerdotal power by His Lordship. The many friends of the candidate who is widely known in the city will congratulate him upon the successful termination of the seminary course.

Whiskey, Upset, Argument And Fight Was Course Of Affairs

Too much "cold tea" and an upset, followed by an argument, resulted in a scrap on the road in the long swamp near Bridgenorth, and one of the party of two received a gash over the eye. According to the report of the affair, the two men had been in the city and had helped themselves too frequently and copiously to the flowing bowl, with the result that the cheery stuff had touched the quarrelsome spot. After an upset one of the men blamed the other for the happening and the statement was used, "You have lived long enough." There was a fight and a jack knife was used, one of the men getting a scratch on the head. The knife had been used to draw a cork, so it is said. At any rate they started for home good friends, but before the journey was ended they were mixed up in a fight that might have proved serious.

Outlook At Cobalt Very Bright; Mr. Otis Kidd Describes Conditions

"The camp never looked in better shape from the point of production than it does just now," said Mr. Otis Kidd, who is visiting his home here for the Christmas season. Speaking to the Examiner to-day in connection with affairs at Cobalt. Mr. Kidd has been a resident of Cobalt for some years, and is thoroughly conversant with the conditions there, being connected with the mining and prospecting business. He is very enthusiastic over the prospects at Cobalt, and says that the outlook is decidedly bright.

There is more money for investment just now than there has been in the last couple of years, and the result is a betterment of conditions generally. In the past two years, although the mines have been operating and the labour conditions were good, there was not much investment going on, but now things are different. "Cobalt is attracting the world," remarked Mr. Kidd. "and has a population in and around the camp, of ten thousand people."

The price of silver is just now remarkably slow, and when it increases it will make a big difference in conditions.

Mr Kidd is a son of Mr. A. R. Kidd, of the Customs House staff.

"QUEEN ZEPHRA" NOW IN ST. THOMAS

Presented by Young People of That Town With Success. Similar to That Here.

"Queen Zephra" which like the "Gingerbread Man" may be termed a fanciful fairyesque opera was produced in St. Thomas on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week and will also be presented several times this week. According to report it made the same hit as when produced by Peterborough young people last year. Everything was practically similar to that which was so delightfully enacted at the Grand on several occasions. Even to the shower of perfume the confetti and the dance of the Blackbirds which the St. Thomas Journal considers the best dance in the performance were presented and the whole account of the production reads familiarly.

IT PAYS TO BUILD WELL.

The people of Canada do not yet appreciate the importance of our great transcontinental railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific, nor comprehend the idea of the great part it will play in the building up of Canada. From varying motives the project is attacked. It is to be expected that rival enterprises do not take kindly to what is regarded as a strong competitor, but which is in reality only a co-worker in dealing with transportation problems beyond the ability of one, or even two, transcontinental lines to satisfactorily solve. But we should not expect patriotic Canadians to oppose for party political reasons an enterprise so closely associated with the promotion of the interests of Canada. Objection is levelled against its cost. Extravagance in construction is charged. To meet this and other objections, Mr. Charles M. Hays, President of the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been talking to the New York Times. In the course of an interview he takes the opportunity to refute the charges of extravagance levelled, especially against the eastern or government section, from Moncton to Winnipeg. He says:

"Bear in mind, please, that railways are not now built as the earlier transcontinental roads were built, up hill, down dale, on an unballasted roadbed of mud. Such uneconomic methods were permissible when there were a mere handful of ranchmen and trappers to serve, and when the promoters' objective was first of all to earn the land grant on which they issued their bonds. What we require to-day and what the travelling public means to have is a first class roadbed with such low gradients and wide curvature that our trains can be run at very high speeds with perfect safety.

"We carry our road from Winnipeg over the Rockies to Prince Rupert with a maximum gradient of 2½ feet to the mile going west, and 26 to the mile going east. The immense economy in hauling freights with gradients so remarkable, every railway man must recognise. We shall be able to put two thousand tons of freight into Prince Rupert from Winnipeg behind a single engine."

To show the advantage gained from the expenditure of money liberally to secure a practically perfect line, Mr. Hays points out how much better railway work such a line can do. He claims that the same engine can haul up the maximum grade of the Grand Trunk Pacific nearly four times more freight in a train than the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, of Union Pacific, over five times more than the Santa Fe. Here is the comparison with American roads:

G T. Pacific	26	14	2,041
Great North'n	116	50	572
North'n Pacific	116	50	572
Union Pacific	116	50	572
Santa Fe	185	76	376

"You can read in these figures," said Mr. Hays, "the reason for our so-called generous expenditures. The INTEREST on the cost of such a line will be returned to us TEN TIMES OVER in the ECONOMY of our operations and in the INCREASED SAFETY of our passengers." Mr. Hays is very optimistic over the finacial prospects of the road. The opening of the Panama Canal will, he predicts, divert a great portion of the wheat export trade to the Pacific coast, and will make Prince Rupert one of the great grain ports of the world. He says:

"The volume of traffic coming out of the new northwest, if we may judge from the way settlers are already swarming in, will throw far more business upon our existing lines than they can possibly handle. The present cultivated area is but six million acres. As yet we have but scratched the surface. We shall require very shortly to do what the Canadian Pacific is already doing in Manitoba, that is, double track our road to enable us to handle the traffic. Thus the diversion of a large portion of the far western wheat trade to the Pacific Coast will advantage every section of our road; it will even ensible us to give settlers much lower rates, because we shall even up our loads, sending full cars both east and west instead of only east. While we send cattle, grain and minerals west to Prince Rupert, we shall haul back coal the coal and the lumber which the settlers on that three hundred million-acre farm need."

"For the first time," says the New York Times truly, in its comments on Mr. Hay's statement, "a railway is to be built on this continent in the English fashion, that is to say, as nearly perfect as the state of the art and natural difficulties permit. The grades are so low that a locomotive can draw four times as much as on existing railways, and the cheapness of the freights will correspond."

Everything converges to the justification of the action of the Liberal Government—first in undertaking this great railway enterprise and secondly in constructing it not only to last, but to give the best possible service. It will, when completed in 1911, be one of the largest and one of the best railways in the world. Its solidity of construction, its easy grades and its generous curves, will permit economical operation and lower rates, and thus contribute to furnish the farmers of the northwest a larger profit on their crops. This saving will more than meet the increased interest charges, necessarily paid upon the additional cost of more than ordinary excellence of construction.

The reduction in freight rates stipulated by the Liberal Government in connection with the Crow's Nest Pass Railway subsidy, saved the farmers of the west in five years in freight rates more than the total subsidy.

THE COST OF WAR.

Few people have any conception of the costliness of war between two of the great powers. Fortunately for mankind, the expense of military campaign keeps pace with the increasing deadliness of the weapons of war employed. In a very real sense "money makes the mare go." A realization of the ruinous cost of a great war is a powerful influence for peace. National prides and jealousies are always easily aroused, and, the war spark once falling among the tinder, one nation after another would find itself ablaze. Dr. Schaffle, the former Austro-Hungarian Minister of Commerce has made a computation of the probable cost of a war which would draw most of the European powers into the conflict. His figures are somewhat startling, reaching about $30,000,000 a day. The first two months of the world's war would require cash expenditure of 20,000 millions of francs—$4,000,000,000—this money being required for the cost of mobilisation, transportation and other initial expenses. All the powers, big and small, would have to pay their share toward the $4,000,000,000, but aside from that they would have to face the daily expense of keeping up an army and making actual war, as follows:

Germany over ...	...$4,000,000 per day
France over... ...	... 4,000,000 per day
Great Britain... ...	... 4,500,000 per day
Austro-Hungary over	2,000,000 per day
Russia..	... ... 4,750,000 per day
Italy over	... 2,000,000 per day
Spain...	... ... 1,750,000 per day

These he shows to be moderate estimates, and he points out that the nature of such a demand upon the ready cash of the world makes it unthinkable that such a war could last more than a brief time. It is conceivable that even the strongest of powers might early be compelled to make terms because of its inability to finance its army and navy. It is the consideration of such a situation which plead even with statesmen, not of the peace-loving kind for a more humane and reasonable method of settling the difficulties which arise between nations.—Exchange.

The countries of Europe spend nearly twenty-five million dollars per day to provide means for killing each other.

U. S. CURRENCY METHODS.

Nothing, says the Finance Chronicle, more striking illustrates the non-adaptability of United States' currency methods than monetary developments during the past year. The President's address to Congress reiterates the necessity of reform, and the Monetary Commission sitting this month at Washington may well have been struck with the fact that the country's circulation at the close of November this year had reached the high mark of $3,118,000,000. This means that, despite general business activity being still below normal, circulation is almost $110,000,000 greater than a year ago—and nearly $260,000,000 more than at the unprecedentedly active year-end of 1906. National bank notes, it is true, account for but a small part of the year's increase, but that they should have increased at all is remarkable. Canadian banks, with a note currency that adapts itself readily to various requirements, had at the beginning of November $1,250,000 less in circulation than a year earlier.

There is daily accumulation of proof that Canada has one of the best banking systems in the world.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Don't put off till to-morrow, the buying of Christmas presents, that can be done to-day.

The Ottawa Journal puts it very neatly when it says:—"The proposal to advertise Canada by means of moving pictures is based, of course, on the assurance that Canada will not stand still long enough to have any other kind of pictures taken."

The Ottawa Journal works up a "tiny" independence. It calls a post office overplus of a million dollars a year a "tiny surplus." Of course the deficit of nearly a million a year in the post office department under Conservative rule was a "tiny" deficit, looked at through the partisan hair that persists in adhering to its journalistic glasses.

One would think from the fuss our Yankee cousins are making over President Roosevelt's proposed African hunting tour, that the lion he may kill, will be the first one slain by a white man. For years Britons have been killing lions in Africa, as nonchalantly as they kill rabbits and their feats have not been sung as Iliads. Gentle Livingstone, bagged his quota and made less "copy" of his exploits in this direction, than he made over the discovery of a new plant.

Let him that can, take his memory back a generation or so note the contrast. Then we had none; now we have three transcontinental railways. Our trans-Atlantic shipping interests were small. Now we have one of the best equipped routes of all, and the launching of a new big liner for the Canada route by the White Star interests, is regarded with no surprise. Trade and travel follow the shortest route, and the line of least resistance, which is the Canada route, the nucleus of an all-red, round-the-globe line.

The London Advertiser says that 'Guelph is trying to hold the fat stock show, but Guelph will never be large enough to comfortably hold the crowds that want to see the show. The exhibition has outgrown the little city, and the government should act accordingly." Guelph, with a population of between 8,000 and 9,000 certainly cannot expect to have hotel accommodation to an extent to meet the demands of the large and increasing attendance the Fat Stock Show attracts. The exhibition is growing faster than the city.

Negro Eloquence.

Some years ago one of Texas' widely known statesmen who is now dead was passing along a street in Dallas when an old colored man who had once belonged to him approached, took off his hat and passed a hand over his white wool as he asked:

"Marster, gin de old man 50 cents."

"Dan, you are a robber."

"How?" asked the astonished darky, opening his eyes, around which roughshod age had walked.

"Didn't you see me put my hand in my pocket?"

"Yes, sah."

"Well, you old rascal, you rob me of the pleasure of giving you money without being asked."

The old man received a dollar. Bowing almost to the ground, while tears came out and coursed through the aged prints around his eyes, he replied:

"Marster, wid—wid such a heart as you hab and wid Abraham and Isaac and de Lord on your side I don't see what can keep you out of heaven."

Sitting Bull.

To look at Sitting Bull one would say that he was always quiet and self contained. In fact, he did usually keep himself under control, but he was cruel and almost heartless. He had practiced cruelty to animals and men from his childhood and as long as he lived; he was full of passion and often very angry. He was always imperious and insolent toward our generals, the Indian agent and other friends of the great father at Washington, whom he claimed to hate. He had great talent and ability to plan campaigns and battles and wonderful influence in bringing Indians together. Notwithstanding all this, he was afraid of death, and, though he planned the greatest victory which the Indians ever gained over white men, Sitting Bull himself was a coward and disgraced himself even before his own people by running away in the very face of success.—General Howard in St. Nicholas.

Folklore Stories.

The Journal of American Folklore has some interesting folk tales of the Nez Perces Indians:

"Once the sun fell down from the sky just about sunrise. Mole caught it and held it up until people got there and helped him to shove it back. The sun had meant to roll along on the ground instead of in the sky. It was from holding up the sun that Mole's hands are bent so far back.

"Coyote and Cloud ran a race. Cloud bet storm and Coyote clear weather. They started far away to the south, and for awhile Coyote was in the lead. Then Cloud made fruits of all kinds to grow in front of Coyote, and he, looking back and seeing Cloud far behind, stopped to eat. In this way Cloud caught up and won. This is why we have storms in winter time."

Long Suffering Bill.

A correspondent sends the following to a remote rural organ of the people:

"Our esteemed fellow citizen, Mr. William M. Puckleton, has had several new 'No Trespassing" signs erected on his place. We have had the pleasure of perusing the one facing the Hedgeville pike. It reads:

"Notis.—Trespassers will be persekuted to the full exten of 2 mean mungrel dogs wich ain't never ben overly sosibill with strangers an 1 dubbel barl shotgun wich ain't loaded with no soft pilliers dam if I ain't gettin tired of this helraisin on my property. Yurs respectful.

"BILL PUCKLETON."

In the Customary Place.

A well known English bishop some time since lost his third wife. A clergyman who had known the first wife returned from Africa and wanted to see the grave. He called at the cathedral and saw the verger.

"Can you tell me where the bishop's wife is buried?"

"Well, sir," replied the verger, "I don't know for certain, but he mostly buries 'em at Brompton."—Detroit Tribune.

ATTORNEY AMUCK.

Lawyer Arrested at Kenora on Charge of Rowdyism.

Kenora, Dec. 14.—One of the most sensational and disgraceful scenes that ever occurred in a Canadian court of justice was enacted on Saturday afternoon during the preliminary trial of the poker players—Martin Schwieg, Samuel Farquhar, George Archambault, Jr.—for conspiracy.

N. Hagal, K.C., arrived Friday night to defend the prisoners, and Saturday morning was suffering from indisposition. After adjournment for luncheon, he delayed court some little time by his late appearance, and during the examination of witnesses he had numerous disagreements with Crown Attorney MacKenzie and the presiding magistrates, Vereker and Belyeau. He subsequently was ordered out of court, and, refusing to go, was roughly handled by Chief of Police Gordon amidst great excitement.

When detained in an ante-room, he kicked several panes of glass out, and for a time pandemonium reigned. Afterwards the court adjourned till Monday. Martin Schwieg meantime was committed for trial, and Archambault and Farquhar were remanded.

Heavy Snow In Montreal.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—Thirty hours' continuous snowfall in Montreal and throughout a large portion of the Province of Quebec is giving the railroads and the municipal authorities a severe battle to keep open the means of transportation. The Canadian Pacific has half a dozen giant snowplows at work on its lines, between Montreal, Smith's Falls and Quebec, and the other railways are kept equally busy.

In Montreal it is costing the city more than $1,000 an hour to keep the streets open, without counting the cost to the Street Railway Co.

The McGill Observatory records show a snowfall of over fourteen inches, an unusually heavy one for this season of the year.

Germany Awaits Result.

London, Dec. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A Berlin despatch states that the German Government is awaiting the result of the debate in the French Senate with regard to the proposed Franco-Canadian commercial treaty.

Should the Senate, as expected, ratify the treaty, then there is little doubt that Germany will try to come to a similar arrangement with Canada.

It is believed that, supported by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the present Canadian Cabinet will find a modus vivendi which will be acceptable to the commercial interests of Germany.

Shot In Hotel.

Winnipeg, Dec. 14.—Arthur Cunningham, an Irishman, was fatally shot in the basement of the Oriental Hotel last night.

Proprietor John Colt heard a shot and hurried to the basement, but on the stairs they were halted by a man who threatened to shoot. Calling the police, they found Cunningham lying on the floor with a wound in his head. He had a ticket for Dryden, Ont.

Cunningham made a statement to the effect that he was held up, shot and robbed in the hotel basement.

Two Burned In Home.

Brunswick, Vt., Dec. 14.—Mrs. Laura Smith, housekeeper for James Gilkey, a wealthy farmer here, and her two-year-old daughter, were burned to death early yesterday in a fire that destroyed Mr. Gilkey's farm buildings on the North Stratford road. Mr. Gilkey escaped with difficulty.

Robbed In Hotel.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—Jewelry to the value of $250 was stolen from the trunks of Mrs. H. G. McLachlan and Miss McLachlan of Arnprior, while stopping at the Queen's Hotel last week. The ladies left for home Saturday leaving the case in the hands of local detectives.

Killed at Kenora.

Kenora, Dec. 14.—Thomas McKay, aged 25, a native of Wick, Scotland, was instantly killed on Saturday. He was walking on the track with two friends, when a freight train came along. He stepped on to the other track and was struck by a west-bound train.

Bomb Works Havoc.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Two buildings were wrecked, several persons are believed to have been killed and windows were shattered for a block around by the terrific explosion of a bomb in an alley in Wabash avenue, near 16th street, last night.

Women Barred.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—The Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association held its annual meeting on Saturday. S. J. Mathewson was elected president. A motion to admit women to membership was voted down.

Eczema, Salt Rheum.

Eczema or Salt Rheum, as it is often called, is one of the most agonizing of skin diseases. It manifests itself in little round blisters, which contain an extremely irritating fluid. These break and subsequently a crust or scale is formed.

The intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when the part is exposed to any strong heat, are almost unbearable.

The pre-eminent success which Burdock Blood Bitters has met with in permanently curing a disease of such severity is due to its wonderful blood cleansing and purifying properties.

No other remedy has done, or can do, so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture, as our thousands of signed testimonials can testify to.

Mrs. John O'Connor, Burlington, N.S., writes:—"For years I suffered with Salt Rheum. I tried a dozen different medicines, but most of them only made it worse. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle and before I had taken half a dozen doses I could see a change so I continued its use and now I am completely cured. I cannot say too much for your wonderful medicine."

Rolled Pennies With Nose.

New Brunswick, N.J., Dec. 14.—Alleging that their brother Henry, a freshman at Rutgers' College, was brutally beaten, Harry and Samuel Jacobson, druggists at Elizabeth, came here Saturday and demanded an investigation. They said young Jacobson was compelled to roll pennies across the main street of the college town, with his nose, and that he was then subjected to a beating with fence pickets. The boy, they say, is at his home in a serious condition. The faculty are investigating.

The man offers no explanation of his act except that he wanted to see Miss Corelli. He has been remanded.

EX-CONSTABLE IN COURT.

Simcoe, Dec. 14.—Chief of Police Malone came up for a hearing at 10 o'clock Saturday morning before Magistrates Beemer and Earle. The prosecuting attorney asked that the hearing be remanded for one week as the crown was not ready to proceed, the principal witness, Constable Wilkins, still being unable to give evidence.

The defence held that Magistrates Beemer and Earle had disqualified themselves from acting on account of the motion made before the county sessions last week by Magistrate Beemer and seconded by Magistrate Earle, that Malone be removed from the list of county constables. Mr. Kelly argued that the court was disqualified by reason of bias, and he would not ask for bail as he had intended.

The magistrates gave their reasons for their course before the sessions, saying that they were not biased in the matter against Malone, but that they were acting for the good of the public.

The case was remanded until next Saturday at two o'clock, when it is possible that it will still be remanded.

Queenstown, Dec. 14.—Joseph Devlin, Nationalist member of Parliament for Belfast, arrived here yesterday on the steamship Cedric from New York. He received an enthusiastic welcome.

Mr. Devlin spoke in the highest terms of the success of his mission to the United States, and declared that the Americans have guaranteed $100,000 to the Nationalist fund.

"Man" Was a Woman.

Butte, Mont., Dec. 14.—The death at Manhattan of "Sammy" Jones, aged 30, disclosed the fact that instead of being a man, as everyone for the past 18 years had believed, Jones was a woman.

She chewed tobacco and drank and associated freely with men as a cook.

Vanity of Men.

In a woman's club, over tea and cigarettes, a group of ladies cited many, many instances of the foolish vanity of males.

"Take the case of bees," one said. "Because the queen bee rules the hive, because she is the absolute mistress of millions of subjects, man up to a few hundred years ago denied her sex. He called her the king bee.

"Pliny wrote somewhere, 'The king bee is the only male, all the rest being females.' And Moses Bunden, beekeeper to Charles II., stoutly denied, in order to please his royal master, that the large bee, the ruler of the hives, belonged to the gentler sex.

"Even Shakespeare couldn't bear to think that the bee of bees, the largest and wisest and fairest, the hive's absolute lord, was a female. No, all the proofs notwithstanding, Shakespeare called her a male. Don't you remember the lines—

"Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom,
They have a king and officers of sorts."

—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Casualties Expected.

During one of Speaker Cannon's bitter political fights in his district in Illinois the opposition resorted to desperate tactics. Among other things friends of Uncle Joe were summarily dismissed from positions they held in the public service. Some of his friends became alarmed at this, and one of them called on the speaker at his residence and said, somewhat excitedly:

"Joe, Smith and Jones have just lost their positions in the postoffice. What are we going to do about it?"

Uncle Joe took another puff at his cigar and then answered, with a benevolent smile: "Nothing. If you go into battle, you have got to expect to have some dead and wounded."

It Was All Within.

A practical joker carried an onion in his pocket to the depot when bidding farewell to a young lady and took a bite now and then to induce tears. Before the train departed he had eaten the entire onion. The young lady, perceiving the situation, remarked, "Ah, you have swallowed your grief!"—Harper's Weekly.

Men of Yesterday and Today.

In our great-grandfather's young days a man was usually not only considered, but really was, elderly at forty, old at fifty and a gouty, flannel swathed wreck at sixty.—London Throne and Country.

LIBERATED PRISONER VISITS HIS CAPTOR

James Murray, Arrested by P. C. Newhall a Year Ago, Calls at Police Station

After serving his term of a year in Central Prison, Toronto, James Murray, whom the citizens of Peterborough will remember having been arrested at the C. P. R. station for drawing a revolver on P. C. Newhall, was given his liberty last week. One of his first acts upon gaining his freedom was to pay a visit to the man who captured him a year ago. Murray, alias Gallighan, walked into the police station and shook hands with the officer, with whom he had a pleasant chat, apparently forgetting the threat he made when caught last year.

Murray it will be remembered, was supposed to have been an accomplice of Burke, the man charged with the theft of money from the till of the store at Buckhorn.

SATURDAY'S MARKET WAS VERY LARGE

Prices Seemed to Suit the Citizens—Fowl Plentiful.

The market on Saturday was one of the largest of the season. There seemed to be plenty of everything, particularly meat and fowl. Eggs were rather scarce, but butter was fairly plentiful, and was selling at 25 and 28 cents. There were many sleigh loads of beef, the price being 4 1-2 and 5 1-2c. Pork sold at 10 and 11 cents, and lamb at 9 and 11 cents. The price of the best turkeys was from $.30 to $.76. There was not much change in the price of geese and chickens. On the whole the market was a good one and the citizens took advantage of it.

Splendid Meetings In The Farmers' Interests Held At Lakefield Last Thursday

Valuable Addresses by Men Well Versed in Dairying, Fruit Growing, Breeding of Horses, Etc.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MET

The dairy cow, the horse, poultry raising and fruit growing were the subjects of practical discussion at the meetings of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute held at Lakefield on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, Dec. 10. There was a large attendance, particularly at the evening meeting. From the interest that was taken in the questions discussed, it was evident that the farmers of that locality are anxious to know all that is practicable for application on the farm. In addition to the addresses much valuable information was brought out in the questions that were put to the speakers and in the latters' replies. At the afternoon meeting, the chair was occupied by the president of the institute, Mr. J N Telford, and at the evening meeting, by Reeve Moore of Lakefield.

The Dairy Cow

The first topic discussed was "The Dairy Cow; Her Summer Feed and Winter Care." This was handled ably by Mr. W H Kydd, of Simcoe, a well known and most acceptable institute speaker. He pointed out that the subject is a most important one to Ontario. One of the greatest industries of the province is dairying. To make the business profitable, our farmers must keep profitable cows but there are more cows that are not profitable than those that are. To show the difference in the value of cows, Mr. Kydd referred to a report of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington that estimated that one-third of the cows of that country are kept at a loss, one-third pay their way and one-third are kept at a profit. Experiments in Wisconsin have shown that some cows are worth at least four times as much as others in the same stable or in the same neighbourhood. A certain dairy paper in Ontario sent a man to a section of the province to make an investigation along similar lines. He estimated the cost of production on 20 farms in one locality and offset it with the returns received for the milk, which was supplied to the same cheese factory. This investigation showed that most cows are kept at a great loss.

The average cow gives only 3,000 lbs. of milk a year. As no man can keep a cow for less than $30 a year, there is no profit in this. In Denmark, a test of 438 herds showed an average per cow of 7,000 lbs. a year. This indicates that there is something wrong in Ontario.

Our farmers should weigh each cow's milk to determine whether she is worth keeping or not. Some may say that this requires too much time and labour. This is not so. It only takes one-quarter of a minute each time for each cow. The testing must be continued throughout the year. It is the cow that gives an average flow of milk for ten months out of the year that makes the money and not the one that gives a large flow for a short time and then falls off to almost nothing for the rest of the year.

To have good cows, breed from the best. Select the best performers and raise heifers from those. Cows have as much influence on the progeny as the sire if the breeding is just as strong. Use bulls that have pedigrees that are unbroken pure ancestors.

In respect to the question, "Which is the best breed?" Mr. Kydd said that there is no best breed. Each one is the best for a particular purpose and for certain environments. When choosing, the farmer must know what he wants his cow to do. As the district around Lakefield goes in more or less strictly for dairying, and particularly for the production of milk for cheese factories, Mr. Kydd stated that the Holstein and the Ayrshire were the two best breeds for the purpose. If the farmer's land is level and he has lots of good pasture, he probably would have better results from the Holstein; if hilly, and rocky and where the cows have to rustle for their summer feed, the Ayrshire would prove most profitable.

Some breeders lay great stress upon the conformation of the dairy cow but Mr. Kydd said that there is no sure test of the milking qualities of a cow except by milking her and testing for butterfat. In conformation, there are a few points that should be considered in all dairy cows. They should have a big heart girth, with the ribs sprung well, but not flattened at the back. The skin should not be hard or papery but intermediate and mellow. The milk veins should be twisted and they should extend as far forward as possible. Large milk wells are not necessary if the veins branch profusely and have many small wells. There should be a good nervous system to aid in the manufacture of lots of food. This is indicated by the links of the backbone being long, plenty of width between the ribs and good length of tail. These things mean a big spinal column, with a tremendous quantity of nerves coming from the brain.

"There would be more good cows in this province if they were better fed," said Mr. Kydd. "It pays to pasture in some districts, but not in others. In sections where the climate is dry and in seasons of drouth and on small farms, green crops should be grown for feeding in summer." In Mr. Kydd's practice, he cuts first in spring fall wheat that was sown the previous autumn, next peas and oats from successive plantings, and later corn and clover. Summer silage is an important feed. Have a silo for this that is rather narrow so that not too much silage is exposed to the air at one time.

Mr. Kydd advised having the stable light and with a temperature in winter that will not go down to freezing. It should be well ventilated. Keep the cows clean; use a brush and comb if it can't be done otherwise. Have salt in front of the cows all the time, because some cows use more than others. Water once a day in winter. Turn the cows out at the warmest part of the day and give them water that is freshly drawn from the well. Where it is practicable and possible, it is better to have the water in the stable.

Fruit Growing

Some general remarks on fruit growing were made by Mr. A. B. Cutting, of the Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, Peterborough. He pointed out that this publication is anxious to aid the farmer in the care of his orchard, as well as in general farming and dairying. Mr. Cutting said that most of the orchards in the country would be made to give three or four times present profits by giving them more attention in matters of cultivation, fertilizing pruning and spraying. There rob the trees of moisture and plant are too many orchards in sod which food and which harbours insects and vermin. Intelligent and regular pruning would do much to bring these orchards into a greater state of productiveness. Spraying is the exception and not the rule in this country. This is essential to the production of fruit of high quality. Codling moth, bud moth, oyster-shell scale and many other insects are ruining many of the trees. Apple scab and other fungous diseases also are prevalent. While each orchard pest requires special treatment at a particular time, most of them can be controlled by spraying four times with Bordeaux mixture and Paris green; first, in spring before the buds begin to swell; second, when the buds begin to break open; third, immediately after the blossoms fall; fourth, ten days to two weeks later.

In reply to a question asking for the best variety of red raspberries, Mr. Cutting recommended Marlboro for early, Cuthbert and Herbert for general crop, the latter being particularly valuable for cold localities. In respect to a similar question on strawberries, the speaker stated that there is no best variety. Some standard sorts do well in some localities and not in others. Owing to local conditions, some varieties that yield well on one farm often prove of little value on farms adjoining. Williams is the great commercial berry of the province. Clyde is excellent for light soils in dry season. Warfield is one of the best for canning, but requires moist ground. There are hundreds of others. When selecting, the farmer should choose those that have done best in his own neighbourhood with conditions similar to his own.

The Brood Mare

The afternoon meeting was concluded by Mr. Kydd with a short talk on the brood mare and her foal. The brood mare should have plenty of exercise almost up to time of foaling. When the foal comes, the mare should be kept quiet for two weeks at least before again working. She should foal in the stable in a box stall and not in the open field. There is less danger of trouble by the former method. Mr. Kydd also gave some general instructions on the feeding of mare and offspring.

The Statutes of the Farmer

At the evening meeting Mr. D. Hughes-Charles said that there is too much talk about the boys leaving the farm. He said that this should not be, that the farmer is as well off as the men of the city. He referred to the differences between city and farm life. The physician requires years of experience and study; they have nasty drives and often hard times. The lawyer must study and practise for years before receiving much remunerative returns; he has an unsavoury reputation. Store keepers work early and late and have to give lots of credit which oftentimes much loss. Banking is not what it is cracked up to be. Many farmers put their sons there because they think they can do nothing else. The clergyman's life is not a bed of roses, no man should enter this vocation without feeling himself "called" These are only a few instances.

The ideal life is on the farm. Conditions there are constantly improving. The farmers are the backbone of the country. They must be fond of their work and take pride in it. The large house of the farmer is a mistake. It means too much work for the women. Every farm home should have a library of agricultural books. Farmers labour too much because they do not put enough brains into their work. They have the brains and the brawn. It requires only application to make the most of them.

Barns and stables should be clean and well lighted. Cleanliness and tidiness is a part of the ideal farm. Have stock of the best. Included in this, should be one or more combination horses for riding and driving. The girls and boys should ride more. Farmers should keep cattle that pay not cows that give only 2,000 or 3,000 pounds of milk a year. Young farmers should think wisely and think long before deciding to go to the town or city. In conclusion, Mr. Hughes-Charles wisely said that most retired farmers are "tired" farmers.

Poultry Raising

The subject of an interesting address by Mrs. Colin Campbell of Windsor, was "Poultry Raising." Is it a profitable or a losing business? In theory, many persons consider poultry raising a gold mine but in practice, it is not always so. Successful poultry keeping depends upon the industry and ability of the person who undertakes it. No one should go into it unless interested.

The building for a poultry house should be situated some distance from others and on a dry site and well drained. There should be no trees nearer the building than 20 feet and these should be on the south side. Keep it in winter at about freezing point, free from draughts and dampness. Give a little more warmth at night. Do this by using burlap curtains in front of their rooms, which should be on the level. Hang the curtains on a wire at the ceiling so that it may be pulled to one side during the day. Have it extend across the pen and deep enough to go two inches below the dropping board. Keep the floor clean if wooden. A dirt floor is probably the best. Put on four inches of cinders, beaten down then three or four inches of gravel, and some straw or chaff on top. Have a dust box on one corner. The best breeds for farmers are Rocks, Wyandottes and Orpingtons.

If the object is to secure eggs in the winter, make the conditions as near as possible to those of summer. Give green food or substitutes, such as roots and cabbages. Hang these on nails high enough to cause the fowls to jump for it so as to give them exercise. Keep the birds busy. Give meat but no decayed food. The best grain is wheat. Barley and oats come next respectively but they have too much hull. These three make a good mixture. Feed most grain in the litter on the floor. Have grit and broken oyster shells available. The heaviest grain feed should be given at night and a mash in the morning. Mrs. Campbell said that she realized $1.25 per hen last year at her own poultry yards.

Drop Stitches

An interesting talk was given by Mr. Kidd on "Dropped Stitches" He said that Canadians did not appreciate their country sufficiently. The Province of Ontario is the seed bed for everything in agriculture and live stock. The great prairie country of the West, with its enormous grazing tracts is a wonderful part of the Dominion. British Columbia is a coming Province. The Maritime Provinces and Quebec have a history to be proud of.

The farmers of Ontario lack co-operation. It means more money in all lines of agricultural endeavour, particularly in fruit-growing. In respect to the latter, it affords a greater range of markets. The growers can plant the same varieties for that market. They can grow low-headed trees which saves labour. They can pack uniformly and get the big prices. Mr. Kidd referred to the success of the co-operative fruit-growers' association in Norfolk County, which has 152 members. Potato growing should be carried on co-operatively to get carloads that are uniform in variety.

Regarding the question of the boys leaving the farm, Mr. Kidd stated that many farmers are not treating their sons fairly. the boys should be paid so much money so as to give them a feeling of independence. The daughters also are not treated properly in this respect. Mr. Kidd advised our young farmers to take a one or two years course at some agricultural college and then return to the farm with higher ideals and newer methods of practise.

Mr. E. M. Elliott, of Peterborough in a short address, remarked that farming is one of the most intricate of all occupations. Compared with banking, mining, business and so forth, agriculture is supreme. The speaker said that there should be more farmers in our legislatures and parliaments.

At the evening meeting a number of musical selections were enjoyed. These included a male chorus and quartett, and a number of instrumental selections. The Women's Institute held an interesting meeting in the afternoon and entertained the visitors by serving refreshments between the two meetings.

MRS. W. T. BURNS

RESTORED TO HEALTH BY VINOL

"I caught a severe cold which it seemed impossible to get rid of. I became much run down, lost my appetite and flesh and felt nervous and irritable. Vinol was recommended, and certainly worked wonders for me; it increased my appetite and cured my cough and nervousness. I consider Vinol a wonderful remedy." Mrs. W T. Burns, Memphis, Tenn.

Many people are in just her condition—all run down, hardly able to drag about, don't know what ails them. This is probably caused by a cold or cough which is hard to cure, overwork or too close confinement to business, and such people need Vinol.

Vinol is not a patent medicine, but contains the medicinal curative elements found in fresh cods' livers, with all the oil eliminated and tonic iron added.

We ask every run down, nervous, debilitated, aged or weak person in this place, and every person suffering from stubborn colds, hanging-on coughs or bronchitis, to try Vinol on our offer to return money if it fails to give satisfaction. OBITUARY.

MR. JOHN FRANCIS.

After a few days' illness John Francis, who resided at the corner of Thomas and Bolivar streets, died Saturday evening at ten o'clock. He was taken ill a week ago Friday night but at first nothing serious was anticipated until during the week he became worse. He was in his 40th year, and leaves a wife and three small children to mourn his loss and to these is extended the sympathy of the community. The deceased came to Peterborough from Hastings about two years ago and engaged in the moulding shop of Green's foundry, where he proved to be a capable employe. He was a prominent member of the Hastings lodge of Oddfellows, and the Peterborough lodges will take charge of the funeral on Tuesday afternoon. Interment will take place at Little Lake Cemetery.

REV. DR. GALBRAITH

Rev. Dr. Galbraith, a retired Methodist minister, who is a brother of Mrs. Charles Crowe, East City, died in Toronto on Saturday. About four weeks ago Mr. Galbraith was seized with an attack of paralysis, from which he partially recovered, but he suffered a relapse some two weeks ago and did not rally till the end came. Mr. Galbraith entered the Methodist ministry as a young man in 1861, and was ordained in 1865. After supplying a number of country posts he was appointed first to Hamilton, then to a church in Montreal, and then to Stanstead, subsequently to Montreal and later to Kingston. Following this he went to Brockville, Orillia, Wesley Church (Toronto), Berkeley Street Church (Toronto) and later to Elm Street (Toronto), from which charge he retired owing to ill-health. On recovering his strength Mr. Galbraith embarked in private business in Toronto and in Belleville and the good practical ability that he brought to bear did much to establish the success of the ventures with which he was identified. Deceased was twice married. By his first family he left two children. His second wife was Miss Bredin, of Kingston, who died some years ago, and two children survive. A son, Bredin Galbraith, is the well known runner who represented Canada in the Olympic games in London. The remains will be interred at Belleville.

NATURE A VERY SKILFUL PHYSICIAN

Puts Up Her Medicines in Most Tempting Form.

Have you ever tasted anything more delicious than the fresh, ripe, luscious fruits? These are Nature's medicines.

A regular diet without fruit is positively dangerous, for the system soon gets clogged with waste matter and the blood poisoned. Fruit Juices stir up Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, making them work vigorously to throw off the dead tissue and indigestible food which, if retained, soon poison the blood and cause Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and a host of other distressing troubles.

But there is a quicker way to stimulate the organs to do their work properly. Take one or two "Fruit-a-tives" tablets every night, besides eating some fresh fruit every day. "Fruit-a-tives" combine the medicinal properties—many times intensified—of oranges, apples, prunes and figs, with the best tonics and internal disinfectants added.

Their action on Bowels, Liver, Kidneys and Skin is as natural as Nature's own, but quicker and more effective. Sold by all dealers—25c. for trial box—50c. for regular size — 6 boxes for $2.50. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

DESIROUS OF FORCING ELECTIONS

British Lords May Precipitate Appeal to People.

WILL MR. ASQUITH RETIRE?

Premier's Wife Is Quoted as Saying That Her Husband Will Accept a Peerage and Leave Leadership of Government to Chancellor Lloyd-George—Suffragettes May Gain Victory as College Graduates.

New York, Dec. 14.—A cable despatch to The Sun from London says that since Mr. Asquith has expressed his intention of clinging to office, despite the rebukes of the Lords, the upper House may endeavor to force an election in the spring in connection with the budget.

It is anticipated that some of the heavy burden of the new taxation, which is inevitable, may be of a Socialistic nature. The Lords, as is well known, always pass finance bills formally and without modification. Their power to amend or reject has not been exercised for generations, just as the Sovereign has never used his constitutional right of veto.

It is suggested that the Lords might refuse to approve some objectionable form of new taxation in the next budget and thus compel the Government to appeal to the country immediately. It would depend upon the nature of such interference as to whether the country would approve of such an exercise of long dormant power by the peers.

Peerage For Asquith.

London, Dec. 14.—A curious report is given currency by a usually well-informed correspondent of a provincial paper to the effect that Mrs. Asquith has expressed her confidence that her husband will accept a peerage at the general election, thus leaving the leadership of the House of Commons to David Lloyd-George.

In view of Mr. Asquith's declamation against the House of Lords on Friday, Mrs. Asquith would appear to have been talking somewhat at random if she really made such a statement. The Premier's program speech on Friday has not improved the Cabinet's position.

The House of Lords has given judgment in the appeal brought before it by Miss Chrystal Macmillan and a number of other women graduates of Scottish universities who claimed that their degrees conferred the franchise on them.

The Lord Chancellor's judgment, in which the other law lords concurred, was to the effect that from the earliest time to the present day women had been under disability in regard to voting in Parliamentary elections, and, if that legal disability were to be removed, it must be done by an act of Parliament.

"We'll live to fight another day," was Miss Macmillan's only comment when she heard the decision.

Meanwhile some of the opponents of woman suffrage are coming seriously to fear that the disability will be removed. As David Lloyd-George, President of the Board of Trade, stated at the Albert Hall meeting last Saturday, there is a majority in the present Cabinet in favor of women suffrage, and it is well known that A. J. Balfour's sympathies lie in the same direction.

Last week saw the formation of two new organizations, one in favor of, the other against, the movement to extend the vote to women, and it has further been marked by the acrimonious discussion of the scenes which disgraced the Albert Hall meeting.

Banquet to Rutherford.

Stockholm, Sweden, Dec. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Dr. Leffler, the well known mathematician, gave a luncheon on Saturday in honor of Profs. Lippmann of Paris and Rutherford of Manchester, two Nobel prize winners. Covers were laid for 120 guests, representing the scientific world.

M. Tolle, Minister of Foreign Affairs, welcomed the two guests of honor. Referring to Prof. Rutherford in a cordial speech, the Minister said he was a young explorer in the real of that new and marvellous science, which is neither physics nor chemistry, but a combination of both, and in view of this fact he ventured to hope they might again welcome Prof. Rutherford there as the winner of another Nobel prize. He drank to the welfare of French-British science.

Attorney Cleared by Jury.

San Francisco, Dec. 14.—A verdict of not guilty was returned by the jury Saturday at midnight in the case of Attorney Frank J. Murphy of counsel for Abraham Ruef, who was charged with attempting to bribe Juryman Kelly to vote for a verdict favorable to Ruef.

PLAYHOUSES HOLD SHOWS ON SUNDAY

Two Big Montreal Theatres Break the Law.

SEVENTY-FIVE KEEP OPEN

Large Number of Small Picture Shows Have Been Running on Sabbath and In Protest Academy and Francais Open Their Doors With Similar Entertainment—Police Secure Evidence For Prosecution.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—The proprietors of the Academy and Francais, two leading theatres of the city, carried out their threat yesterday of opening their doors for Sunday performances as a protest against the moving-picture shows running every Sunday.

The performances were of the nature of songs and moving picures, but the patronage accorded was not heavy. Two hundred were present at the first Academy show, and 300 were at the Francais.

The police were out in force at each theatre and collected evidence for the threatened action against the proprietors for violating the civic bylaw.

Seventy-five moving picture shows do a thriving business here every Sunday, in addition to Sohmer Park, which puts on a straight vaudeville show.

Venezuelan Ship Seized.

Willemstad, Dec. 14.—The Dutch cruiser Gelderland came into this port yesterday morning towing the Venezuelan coast guardship Alix, with the Dutch flag flying and a Dutch crew on board. The Gelderland captured the Alix off Puerto Cabello on Saturday. At the time the Alix was lying close inshore, and notwithstanding the threat which the Venezuelan Government had made to fire upon any of the Dutch warships committing a hostile act, the Gelderland steamed at speed towards the guardship and sent an officer and guard in a launch to seize her. This they did without resistance, and no shot came from the forts on land.

The crew of the Alix were put ashore and the Dutch officer and marines remained on board, the Gelderland finally taking the Alix in tow and steaming away with her prize.

Muzzle For Alarmists.

London, Dec. 14.—Lord Robert Cecil's public meeting bill aims a death blow at the policy of the militant suffragettes, as it provides, first, that any one at a lawful public meeting who acts in a disorderly manner for the purpose of preventing the transaction of the business for which the assembly was called shall be guilty of an offence and liable to a fine not exceeding $25 and imprisonment not exceeding one month; secondly, that any one offending under this section at a political meeting during the progress of a Parliamentary election shall be guilty of an illegal practice.

Heretofore the law did not provide any remedy against the breaking up of public meetings or the prevention of speakers being heard unless an actual assault occurred.

Panic In Theatre.

New York, Dec. 14.—An audience of 500 persons was thrown into a panic Saturday night and a score were injured, several, it is believed seriously, when the balcony in a moving picture show house on the Lower East Side collapsed.

Firemen and police reserves were rushed to the scene and a dozen of the victims who had been buried in the debris of the collapsed gallery were dug out and attended by ambulance surgeons.

Morgan Helps 'Frisco Churches.

New York, Dec. 14.—Bishop William Ford Nichols of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of California, before leaving this city for the Pacific coast yesterday, announced that J. Pierpont Morgan had contributed $100,000 for the re-building of the Episcopal churches of San Francisco, destroyed by the earthquake three years ago.

Bishop Nichols has accumulated a fund, including Mr. Morgan's contribution, of nearly $200,000.

Woman Found Dead.

Chatham, Dec. 14.—The body of Mrs. Restume, a widow, who kept house for a man named John Cogan, was found dead in her bed at one o'clock yesterday morning, when Cogan returned from the country, where he had been since Friday.

The doors of the house were all locked and Cogan had to gain entrance by a window.

Jumps Bail.

Belleville, Dec. 14.—The grand jury at the County Court on Friday brought in a true bill against Ernest Prickett of Deseronto for seduction. The young man was allowed out on bail. Saturday when the case was called Prickett was missing, and his bail of $500 was estreated by Judge Fraleck.

Bonaparte Will Retire.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 14.—Attorney-General Charles J. Bonaparte on Saturday indicated that he would not be a member of President Taft's Cabinet, when, in response to an enquiry on the subject, he said that after March 4th next, he positively would retire from public life.

Disaster In the Black Sea.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 14.—A telegram received here from Sebastopol reports that a Turkish steamship bound from Constantinople foundered in a storm in the Black Sea. Details are lacking, but it is believed that the crew and 50 passengers were drowned.

Fred Cook's New Venture.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—Fred Cook, Canadian correspondent of The London Times, leaves to-day for England with Lord Northcliffe, to discuss with the proprietors of that newspaper the establishment of an enlarged Canadian news service, of which he will be in charge.

KING IS WELL AGAIN.

Slight Touch of Influenza Has Passed Away.

Brighton, Eng., Dec. 14.—King Edward will return to London to-day to resume his social engagements. The King was not in the best of health when he came to Brighton, but he seems to have entirely recovered.

For some days there has been some of the usual wild talk in regard to the King's health, which the cancelling of a few of his engagements always lets loose. The truth is the King had a slight touch of influenza following a severe cold. For a short time it was feared that he had an attack of gout and throat trouble, but now all is well.

The King is an excellent patient so long as he is kept amused, though he is apt to get nervous about himself. It may be noted that not a single extra insurance on the King's life has been done by Lloyd's, where there are always a large number of policies of indemnity against loss which might be occasioned by his death. The bulk of these policies are held by hotel-keepers and theatrical managers.

Lady Laurier's Auto Burns.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—Five automobiles, including the motor car presented to Lady Laurier by Lord Strathcona a year ago, were destroyed in a fire on the premises of the Canadian Cycle and Motor Co., on Sparks street, early yesterday. Lady Laurier's car was valued at $8,000. Another valuable car lost was one owned by T. L. Willson, the calcium carbide king. The damage to the building, which was constructed of stone, was slight, but the five automobiles destroyed were valued at $30,000. Lady Laurier's car was uninsured.

Creemore Man Killed.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—W. C. Perry, manager of the Parkdale branch of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., received word yesterday that his father-in-law, George Hines, had been killed in an explosion in Cobalt on Saturday. He received no further particulars, beyond the fact that arrangements were being made to ship the body to Creemore, where deceased formerly lived, on Monday. Mrs. Perry left the city yesterday for Creemore. Mr. Hines has been working in the silver fields for almost two years.

Scotch Folk For Canada.

London, Dec. 14.—A party of Scotch farm laborers and domestic servants sailed on the Empress of Britain on Saturday.

C. M. Hays sailed on the Baltic.

Hon. Rodolphe and Alphonse Lemieux were passengers on the Amerika, not as intended, on the Campania.

Rush Work on the U. S. Navy.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 14.—Considerable interest and speculation was created Saturday by the posting of notices at the navy yard, engineering department, and which it is said will be followed by similar orders in the other departments, for work to be rushed without interruption for 24 hours each day.

There is no explanation of the order further than faster and better results can be secured.

Girls Sleep In Barns.

Kingston, Dec. 14.—Four wayward girls have been sleeping in barns the past few nights. They were discovered by the police after having been reported missing by their parents. They decided to transfer their trunks home. They quarrelled with their parents over going out at night.

No Arbitrary Settlement.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The House by a decisive vote Saturday refused to further consider the bill providing for arbitrary settlement of disputes between employers and employes.

The bill providing for the protection of all conditions in United States was passed by a slim majority.

QUARTETTE OF CHILDREN CREMATED

Four Little Ones Perish in a Fire Near Ottawa.

PARENTS HELPLESS TO AID

While W. J. Scharfe and Wife Are Milking House Catches Fire From Stove-pipe and Babes, Ranging from Four Months to Four Years Lose Their Lives In Flames—Eldest Called For "Daddy."

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—The four children of W. J. Scharfe, a farmer of Hawthorne, a small place on the Russell road, ten miles from the city, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Scharfe House Sunday morning.

Scharfe rose at six o'clock, and having lit the fire proceeded to the barn, where he was joined by his wife shortly after. While they were engaged in milking the cows the house caught fire from the stove-pipe.

When discovered the upper portion of the building was in a mass of flame. Scharfe made frantic efforts to rescue the children, who were sleeping upstairs, but was driven back by the flames and smoke. He could hear Ruby, the eldest of the four children, aged 4 1-2 years, calling "Daddy, daddy," but he could not get to her. The other children who perished were Ethel, aged three; Willie, aged two, and Dorothy, a four-months-old infant.

CANAL WILL NOT HOLD.

French Expert Says Panama Project Is Unsafe.

Paris, Dec. 14.—M. Bunau-Varilla, an eminent French engineer, predicts disaster for the great Panama Canal unless the site of the Gatun Dam is changed. He says:

"It is doing a service to the United States to affirm that the plan being followed will almost infallibly end in the greatest disaster in the history of great public works ever recorded. The canal, as conceived, will exist or not according as the Gatun Dam holds or does not.

"Now, I, with all the French engineers who have studied the Panama Canal question, have the absolute conviction that the site of the Gatun Dam will result in certain destruction. I raised the first cry of alarm in a letter to President Roosevelt on March 5, 1906, and not only is my conviction not modified but it has just received an ominous confirmation in the accident which occurred at the end of November."

TWENTY BLOWN UP.

Many Are Buried Under Rock In Panama Canal Explosion.

Colon, Dec. 14.—A giant blast of dynamite, already prepared for firing, was prematurely exploded in the workings at Bascobispo on Saturday.

Thirteen bodies have been recovered, but it is believed a score or more are under the masses of rock and earth thrown up.

The charge consisted of fifty-one holes, sixty feet deep, and spread out over a large section of territory. The last hole was being charged by J. J. Reidy of Minneapolis, an experienced powderman, when it exploded. The others were exploded by the concussion Reidy was blown to pieces. The other American dead include J. J. Kope, Philipsburg, N.J., steam shovel engineer, and J. T. Hummer, Dunellen, N.J., steam shovel craneman.

Bascobispo cut is about thirty miles from Colon, and the shock of the explosion was distinctly felt here.

Tea For U. S. Fleet.

Colombo, Ceylon, Dec. 14.—The United States Atlantic fleet under command of Rear Admiral Sperry was sighted at seven o'clock yesterday morning. The fleet left Manilla December 1.

The sixteen vessels are to remain here for six days to take on coal and give the men and officers an opportunity for shore leave. Colombo is the first stop on the homeward stretch.

The Colonial Secretary of Ceylon has received instructions from London to extend such hospitality to the American visitors as King Edward would wish to have shown the United States. The Legislative Council has voted an appropriation for entertainments.

It is planned, among other things, to present five pounds of tea to each officer and one pound to each man in the fleet.

New Bells Blessed.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—The blessing of two bells in St. Patrick's Church yesterday constituted a very interesting function. La Charlotte, a bell weighing 2,260 pounds, cast in Whitechapel in 1774, for Notre Dame de Montreal, and removed to St. Patrick's in 1840, broken and recast and now to be replaced in the belfry, was blessed amid appropriate ceremonies. Then a second bell, the Holy Name, weighing 1,096 pounds, was also dedicated in the evening. Bishop Casey of St. John, N.B., and Dr. D. J. O'Sullivan of Vermont were the two chief figures at the ceremony.

Widow Stabbed.

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 14.—Mrs. Father Brandt, widow of a former prominent physician of Lelellewn, near here, was found on the kitchen floor of her home Saturday stabbed to death with a butcher's knife.

The case is shrouded in mystery, as the home bears no evidence of having been robbed and the wound is of a character, the knife having entered the throat and emerged at the back of the neck, that it is not thought it could have been self-inflicted.

Not Protected Enough.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—The Montreal Woollen Mills Co., in business since 1879, on the canal bank, has decided to go into liquidation, claiming that they are not sufficiently protected.

A large number of hands are thrown out of work.

BOUT WAS RATTLING GOOD GO, SAYS STAR OF HURTUBISE-BURNS MATCH

Cyclone Burns, the English champion seemed to have "bitten off more than he could chew" at Riverdale Rink last night, when he tried to toss Gene Hurtubise, the Peterborough French-Canadian, three times in an hour or forfeit $100. The Peterborough giant replaced the injured Turk, Hassan Abdaliah, and the result was a great struggle. Hurtubise took no chances. He hugged the floor or his opponent like a leech the entire hour. He did not attempt to do any work himself, and as a result Burns was unable to get more than one tumble. He grabbed this after 28 minutes of the hardest sort of work, but got another he could not claim at the call of time. He had the Peterborough man in a position that meant a fall, but he couldn't pin him down. The crowd, which favoured Hurtubise against the far-famed Englishman, cheered mightily as the last ten seconds ticked away, while Burns threw his weight down upon Hurtubise's left shoulder and strove mightily to force it to the mat.—Toronto Star.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE O.R.F.U. HELD ON SATURDAY

The annual meeting of the Ontario Rugby Union was held in Toronto on Saturday night when the officers for next season were elected. J C Sherry of Toronto and formerly of Norwood, was elected president and E Roy Clarke of the T A A C secretary treasurer. Dr. A. W. MacPherson, of Peterborough who was nominated for the president declined the honour.

The most important business was the consideration of the amendment to place an age limit of 21 on the junior series. This was thrown out by the the meeting the members present feeling that it would confer a hardship upon the teams in small towns. It was however to abolish permits allowing senior men to drop back into a lower series.

The entrance fee will henceforth be $2 instead of $1 and the annual subscription for each senior club $10 and for intermediate and junior clubs $5.

MATCHED RACE WILL BE EXTRA FEATURE OF MATINEE

A special event has been arranged for the Turf Club's matinee on Christmas Day in a matched race that should provide some excitement. The agreement was made on Saturday according to the report. It is a three cornered event with Queen's Barron against Prince Hal. Mr. Jas. Elmhirst's horse and Bourbon Brooks which is owned by Messrs Wm and Henry Elmhirst Dr. Johnston accepted the challenge of the Elmhirsts and will race them best three in five half mile heats. Bourbon Brooks was recently purchased from Dr. J U Simmons of Frankford and the three should make an interesting go. The purse is twenty-five dollars a corner.

"CAN I GET WELL?"

If Your Trouble comes from the Kidneys, or from Kidney Poisons in the Blood,

YES!

And if you have been ailing a long time don't lose your courage. It takes a little time—takes some constitutions longer than others. But Doan's Kidney Pills will gradually drain the poisons out of your system; the pain in your back will stop; the sediment in the urine will cease; there will be no rheumatic pains; you will feel freer and brighter, and when the last of the poisons have gone you will be well.

There is no way of getting the kidney poisons out of the system except through the kidneys, and no medicine so effective in taking them out as Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mr. W. Perkins, South Maitland, N.S., writes: "I feel it my duty to let you know of the great cure I have obtained by using Doan's Kidney Pills. For six months I could not obtain a good night's rest, had to get up four or five times to urinate, and the urine was very thick and red. I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was right and fit again. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

BOXING.

New York, Dec. 12.—Word comes from Sydney, Australia, that the betting on the Burns-Johnson heavyweight championship fight to be decided there on Dec. 26th, is at even money.

While Burns has a strong following in Australia, Johnson has made many friends since his arrival at Sydney, because of his hard training and general appearance.

In Austral a the opinion is prevalent that the fight will be on the level, and that each man has an equal chance of winning.

• • •

The Burns-Johnston fight is to take place in Sydney, Australia, on the 26th of December at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. The result will be known in Peterborough on Christmas night, as we are between 14 and 16 hours ahead of Sydney in the matter of time. The fight will take place in a 16-foot ring, the referee not to break the men, who are to fight themselves free; they are to fight to a finish; either man can wear fingerless kid gloves or soft bandages next to the hands, but not both; Burns to receive $30,000, win, lose or draw; Johnston to receive $5,000 and expenses, win, lose or draw.

Mr. Chas. A Barber has been appointed assistant secretary of the Peterborough Hockey Club, and has consented to accept the position, which he should fill with every satisfaction.

WRESTLING.

Pete Sanigan, the hustling manager of the Eurekas, drifted into The Star office yesterday, bewailing the loss of Andy Kyle, the Eurekas' great junior defence man. Cyclone Burns, the big wrestler, was there—a lithe, active-looking chap of 198 pounds.

"Mr. Sanigan, this is Cyclone Burns," said the sporting editor. "You are both sporting men, and will be interested in each other. Mr. Sanigan is manager of the Eureka hockey team, Mr. Burns, and—"

But the sporting editor got no further. The cyclone title caught Pete's ear.

"Say, have you signed up with any team yet?" he demanded, grasping Burns' hand. The fair-haired wrestler is a quiet fellow and slow-spoken. "If you haven't, don't overlook us; we're going to deliver the goods," continued Sanigan, and the sporting editor's morning class of runners, boxers, and hockey players made a noise like comedy, and Pete backed up.

The following letter has been received from Charlie Kaiser, the Oswego, N.Y., welter weight wrestler, who defeated Gene Hurtubise some time ago, as Conkle's unknown:

Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—My challenge to Mr. Hurtubise which appeared in the Examiner has not been accepted and I don't think Mr. Hurtubise wants any of my game. If he doesn't, let him say so. If he does, I will agree to throw him twice in one hour, if there is at least $100, and will agree to weigh less then 160 pounds. Hoping that this challenge will make Mr. Hurtubise come to time.

Yours very truly,
CHARLES KAISER.

RUNNING.

Toronto, Dec. 13.—There is two thousand dollars of Dorando money at the King Edward Hotel. It is a little commission from New York. The man with the yellowbacks came to town yesterday and wants to bet that amount at even money. In New York the odds are 2 to 1 and 3 to 2 on Dorando, but this wise guy figured that in Toronto, the Indian's home town, even money or better could be secured.

Preparations are being made by some local sportsmen to cover this sum. There will be a lot of real Italian money to bet on Dorando too. An Italian wholesaler on York street has $750 subscribed by his countrymen men to wager on Dorando, and there will be more Monday.

Toronto will be represented in New York by a score or more well-known sportsmen. P J Mulqueen, president, D'Arcy Hinds, secretary, Tim O'Rourke, Pat O'Keefe, and several more of the Irish-Canadians are going down, and so are Lou Scholes, Jack Allison, Harry Rosenthal, and J B Reed. Bob Patterson and some more of the enthusiasts are talking of a jaunt. Those who are going leave Sunday night at 5.20 p.m. If Toronto sportsmen were confident that Longboat was right they would "bet their heads off," but Tom Flanagan's silence perturbs them. Not a line has come from Flanagan's pen since he left. If they only knew it Genial Tom were wagering his own greenbacks on the redskin, they would be satisfied. Until they do know, but little money will be bet. "If it were 15 miles I would bet everything but my birthday suit on Tom," remarked one man who likes his little wager. "He would eat the Italian, but at 26 miles—well, I don't know, if Longboat can last the route, that's all!"

At a meeting last night it was agreed that Tim Hurst would referee the race.

Homemade Ring Game.

With very little trouble you may construct this game from strong cardboard. Upon the top of the four cardboard posts should be fastened hooks, each being of such a height that when the ring is permitted to swing forward upon the length of its cord it may be possible to encircle the hook with the ring.

READY TO PLAY.

The players swing the ring in turn. The object of the game is to encircle the four posts, which, by the way, should be numbered 1, 2, 3, 4. First No. 1 post must be encircled, then Nos. 2, 3 and 4 in order. The player gains another turn every time he swings the ring over a post, but if by chance the ring should encircle the wrong post he must begin over again with No. 1 post. He who first places the ring over the four posts in proper order wins the game. — Philadelphia North American.

Harry's Arithmetic.

I'm glad I have a good sized slate.
With lots of room to calculate.
Bring on your sums! I'm ready now.
My slate is clean, and I know how.
But don't you ask me to subtract.
I like to have my slate well packed,
And only two long rows, you know.
Make such a migerable show.
And please don't bring me sums to add.
Well, multiplying's just as bad.
And, say, I'd rather not divide—
Bring me something I haven't tried!

Able to Hear It.

Joseph Medill of the Chicago Tribune was somewhat deaf, although his ability at times to hear what was said in an ordinary tone of voice was frequently remarked. It is related of him that he dropped into the business department of the office one day to make an inquiry about something that had occurred to him, and a young man who had been in his employ only a few months undertook in a loud tone of voice to enlighten him.

"What did you say?" asked Mr. Medill, putting his hand to his ear.

The young man repeated the question in a still louder voice.

"I can't hear you," said the editor.

"Oh, chase yourself around the block, you old granny!" muttered the impatient employee just above his breath.

"I am not an old granny," said Mr. Medill, turning away, "and I shall not chase myself around the block."

The fresh young man made immediate arrangements to say goodby to his job, but the great editor probably thought that the lesson he had received was sufficient and did not disturb him.

A Famous London Tavern.

The Mermaid was the name of a famous London tavern frequented by noted literary men and actors during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. All the wit and talent of the time assembled there for convivial enjoyment. Authors have made it the scene of great mind combats between such men as Shakespeare, Ben Johnson, Beaumont, Fletcher, Selden, Carew, Donne and others of reverential memory. It was the gathering place of the celebrated Mermaid club, the origin of which is ascribed to Sir Walter Raleigh. The Mermaid tavern was located in Bread street and was handily reached from three thoroughfares, so that it has been often referred to in various ways. The Mermaid in Bread street, the Mermaid in Friday street and the Mermaid in Cheap street were, however, all one and the same. It was the nearest to Bread street. The Mermaid was destroyed in the great London fire. There were other Mermaid taverns, one in Cheapside and another in Cornhill, but they had no such associations as clung to that of Bread street.

Origin of the Word "Bogus."

The word "bogus" is said by Dr. Ogilvie to be derived from Boghese, the name of a notorious American swindler who about the year 1835 flooded the western and southwestern states with counterfeit bills, sham mortgages, etc. Others connect the word with "bogy," a scarecrow or goblin, and so applied to anything fictitious or chimerical.

Lowell in the "Biglow Papers" says: "I more than suspect the word to be a corruption of the French bogasse." This bogasse was the sugar cane as delivered in its dry, crushed state from the mill, also called can trash and fit only for burning, being synonymous with useless rubbish.

Again, according to Brewer, there is in French argot or thieves' slang a word "bogue," which signifies the rind of a green chestnut or the case of a watch, and this also brings us to the idea of an outward seeming without any solid or reputable foundation.—Kansas City Journal.

The Queerest Salad.

A gourmet as he mixed a salad of chicory said: "The world's queerest salad, and possibly its most delicious one, is eaten by the Inoits of northwest Greenland. It is a salad of undigested moss from the stomach of a fresh killed reindeer, a bitter, sharp, stimulating salad, as good for the digestion as an electrical massage. The Inoits live almost exclusively on fish; hence salads are a favorite dish with them. But no salad in their minds compares with that which they wrest from the slaughtered reindeer. They say this salad is crisper, tenderer and more appetizing than any other, and they say it wards off indigestion. They fight for it, they spend their last penny on it, quite as the Indians do with firewater."—Exchange.

Too Much For Him.

Smithson used to labor under the impression that he was a born humorist, but he has given up trying to be funny now.

He called one day on an old school friend and was shown into a room where his chum's sister was busy arranging a quantity of dried grass which she had collected.

"What a quantity of dried grass you have collected, Miss Ritchie!" he said. Then his humor burst forth. "Nice room for a donkey to get into"—

"Make yourself at home, Mr. Smithson," said the girl pleasantly.

When he arrived home all the humor was crushed out of him forever.—London Scraps.

In the Same Boat.

The stranger advanced toward the door. Mrs. O'Toole stood in the doorway with a rough stick in her left hand and a frown on her brow.

"Good morning," said the stranger politely. "I'm looking for Mr. O'Toole."

"So'm I," said Mrs. O'Toole, shifting her club over to her other hand.—Everybody's.

Matrimony.

Youngly—Did you ever notice that the matrimonial process is like that of making a call? You go to adore, you ring a belle and you give your name to a maid. Cynicus—Yes, and then you're taken in.—Boston Transcript.

The Extremes.

Lobster and champagne for supper—that's high jinks. Sawdust and near-coffee for breakfast—that's hygiene. Between these two eminences, however, there's room for some genuine living.—Life.

"The poet is born, not made," sayeth the proverb. In other words, it isn't his own fault.

A Precaution.

"Young man," said her father, "I don't want you to be too attentive to my daughter."

"Why—er—really," stammered the timid young man, "I had hoped to marry her some"—

"Exactly, and I'd like to have you marry her, but if you're too attentive to her you won't have money enough to do it."—Liverpool Mercury.

Almost Qualified.

"Help you!" scoffed the irate housewife. "Well, I guess not. I only assist invalids."

"Well, mum," responded Beefsteak Ben as he tried to remove the bulldog from his shins, "I'll be an invalid if I stay here much longer."

The Poor Milkman Again.

The milkman was boiling over with indignation.

"And you mean to say my milk don' look right?" he snapped. "Why, lady this can of milk is a picture!"

"Ah, yes," laughed the keen house wife; "a fine water color."—Exchange.

Restless.

Caller—So your cook has passed away to a better place? Hostess—Yes, but I don't know if she'll stay. Poor Bridget was very hard to suit.—Boston Traveler.

True Both Ways.

"The die is cast!" hissed the villain.

Then, shaking their gold locks, the chorus bounded on.

"It seems," the critic murmured, "that the cast is dyed too."—New York Press.

A BARGAIN SALE.

The Stocks Attracted Her, and She Bought Them While Cheap.

"I have done more or less speculating all my life," said Jones, "but I have made up my mind now to give it up. One speculator in the family is enough, and my wife seems to have a system that is a sure winner. Some time ago the general situation looked bearish to me. I hesitated a few days, but the more I thought it over the more I became convinced that the market was in for a big slump. Conditions were right, the trade was nervous, corn injured, the big steel trust was facing a strike, and I thought I saw certain signs that indicated that several of the big pools were getting tired of the load that they were carrying and were preparing to stand from under.

"Well, I put out a pretty stiff short line for me, and then the market, as if only waiting for me to get in, commenced booming. The result was that I got badly pinched before I could let go. Misery loves company, as the old saying goes. Besides, I had to account to my wife for the glum face that I was wearing, so I made a clean breast of the whole matter.

"'Mercy!' she cried. 'I don't see how you lost. Why, I made several hundred dollars!'

"'You did!' I almost yelled.

"'Why, yes,' she answered innocently. 'You said one morning at the breakfast table that stocks looked like a big sale, and you know I dearly love a bargain sale, so I bought some X. Y. Z. stock with the pin money that I had saved.'

"'I remember making the remark,' I said grimly, 'but I am not aware that I ever mentioned X. Y. Z. as being particularly desirable.'

"'Of course you didn't,' she answered. 'I looked over all the stock that they had for sale and found I could buy X. Y. Z. for 40 cents, so I took that. You'll let me know when they have another bargain sale, won't you, deary?'

"Now, in the face of that, how can a man sit calmly down and reason out which way the stock market is going?"—Detroit Free Press.

Misplaced Sympathy.

A sympathetic Frenchman unluckily bought an almanac that gave the dates of the world's chief events. From that day on he lived a life of mourning. Thus on April 30 he had crape on his hat.

"Have you lost a relative?" a friend asked. "Not exactly," said he. "But today is a sad anniversary for the French people. On April 30, 1524, the Chevalier Bayard died." On May 2 he had crape on again. "Still mourning Bayard?" said the friend. "No," said he, "but don't you remember that on May 2 a great and charming poet, Alfred de Musset, breathed his last?" On the 6th of the same month, "Whom are you mourning for now?" "For an honest man, General Cavaignac." On the 30th, crying terribly, he said: "Ah, Joan of Arc! On this date, in 1431, a handful of Englishmen dead a miserable bishop put the gallant maid to death." On July 13 he took a bath in memory of the assassination of Marat. On the 16th Beranger's death gave him a fatal shock. On the 18th, having read of Napoleon's departure to St. Helena, he felt better, but on the 26d the bombardment of Dieppe by the English, in 1694, confined him again to his bed. He was taken with a fever and died on the 22d, muttering, "In a month the massacre of St. Bartholomew!"—New York Sun.

Eloquence of the Welsh.

Here is a little story of an Englishman in Wales: "On the comperative qualities of the English and Welsh tongues let me tell of the Welshman who saluted me in the Welsh. I was compelled to confess ignorance. 'Ah,' he said, turning fluently enough to English, 'you should learn the Welsh! My wife was English, and she can speak conversations now quite well.'

"I acknowledged my shortcomings and admitted that I had always understood the Welsh to be a remarkably eloquent tongue. 'Yes, yes, it iss so,' said the native. 'In Welsh a man can express exactly what he means. As for the English, I call it not a language at all—only a dialect.

"'You haf noted that an Englishman or a foreigner in speaking his language waves his hands and arms about to help out the meaning of the words, but a Welshman who can speak Welsh well he hass no need to move his hands. In the Welsh he can say all that he means.'"—Chicago News.

Fife Wheat.

Years ago, about a century, David Fife, a Scotchman of Otonabee, Ont., sent to a friend in Glasgow for a small bag of seed wheat to try in a cleared patch of the backwoods. The friend obtained some seed from a vessel just in from Dantzig. Unfortunately it was a fall wheat and reached David Fife in the spring. Nevertheless David Fife sowed it in spring. One can guess how feverishly the backwoods farmer watched for the growth of his experiment. Only three wheat heads survived till the fall, but those three wheat heads were entirely free of the rust that had ruined his neighbor's crops, and those three heads really represented a new variety of wheat, a fall wheat turned into a spring wheat. David Fife treasured the three heads and planted them in spring. Such was the beginning of Fife wheat in America.—Agnes C. Laut in Outing Magazine.

Vanity of the Peacock.

Our favorite and much petted peacock, says a correspondent of the London Spectator, can be kept happy any length of time looking at his reflection in the window pane or in a looking glass. He comes in daily to tea, making no mistake about the hour, and spends much time en route in gazing at himself as he appears in the glass of the French windows by which he enters the room. If I am sewing and do not speak to him when he comes into the room, he will gently put his head quite close, almost touching my ring or needle, for he likes bright things, till I have to give up working and talk to him as with a small child whom one is afraid of pricking.

The Language of Science.

"I must say," remarked the plain, everyday man, "that I feel as if I had a cold in the head, and I'm so hoarse I can hardly speak.

"I see," answered the scientist. "You are suffering from a slight coryza, causing congestion of the mucous membrane and suffusion of the optical organs and inducing a somewhat phlogistic condition of the epiglottis. Perhaps, however, you had better send for a physician."

"Send for a physician? No. I don't want a doctor. Send for an interpreter."—Minneapolis Journal.

Priority.

The wagons of "the greatest show on earth" passed up the avenue at daybreak. Their incessant rumble soon awakened ten-year-old Billie and his five-year-old brother Robert. Their mother feigned sleep as the two white robed figures crept past her bed into the hall on the way to investigate. Robert struggled manfully with the unaccustomed task of putting on his clothes. "Wait for me, Billie," his mother heard him beg. "You'll get ahead of me."

"Get mother to help you," counseled Billie, who was having troubles of his own.

Mother started to the rescue and then paused as she heard the voice of her younger, guarded, but anxious and insistent:

"You ask her, Billie. You've known her longer than I have."—Everybody's.

Her Luck.

By a strange coincidence a much married woman lost three husbands in succession through fatal accidents in the mine. Naturally her case excited much interest, and she had many sympathetic callers, to all of whom she made the same reply.

"Ah, yes, it's very hard," she said, "but in the midst of my sorrow I've always had somethin' to be thankful for. None o' my husbands lived long after I'd insured 'em, as some poor souls' husbands do!"—London Graphic.

Exclusive to the Last.

An instance of exclusiveness maintained under difficulties is reported from the ladies' cabin of an Atlantic liner. All were sick except one lady and a cat, which wandered uneasily about. The lady ventured to stroke the cat, remarking, "Poor pussy." The cat was inclined to respond and elevated its tail in token of good will, when from a neighboring berth came in choking tones the words, "Excuse me, that is a private cat!"—Argonaut.

That Family Skeleton.

Mrs. Whistler—Tell me, Mary, why it is that you always cry so when papa sends you to bed in the dark when you are naughty? There's no such things as ghosts, and the dark doesn't hurt you, does it? Little Mary—No, mamma, but I'm afraid of that skeleton Mrs. Jones says we got in our closet.—Baltimore American.

Wind Blows Branch on His Head While He Was Sawing.

Examiner Special.

Lasswade, Dec. 12.—An accident which might have proved fatal, and ended in only a few bruises, happened to Mr. Alex. Ferguson, of Coe Hill, employed by Mr. E. Forbes, foreman of the Forbes camp, last Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Ferguson, being one of the sawyers, was working in a dangerous position. The wind was very high and caused a limb to fall which struck the unfortunate man on the head and shoulders rendering him unconscious for a few minutes. Mr. Ferguson was delayed from work for a couple of days, but is able to work again.

The advertisement contest was won by Miss Hazel Deane, and the consolation by Miss Linda Hall. In the book guessing contest, first prize was awarded to Miss R Crawford, and the consolation went to Miss Crowe.

Misses McCaw and McKee rendered a piano duet in a very pleasing manner. Mrs. R J Devey gave a very entertaining reading, and Messrs. McLaren and Redgrave presented a dialogue.

ELECTRIC ENGINE BEING TAKEN TO ITS DESTINATION BY EASY STAGES TO DELIVER IT SAFELY

Precautions Being Taken to Hand it Over for Service in Good Condition—First of its Kind Constructed in Canada.

REPLACES STEAM ENGINE

The electric engine, which was fitted with motors, etc., at the C. G. E. Works, has left the shop and is being taken in easy stages to its destination, Shawenegan Falls, Que. The first idea was to load it on a flat car and a skidway was built up to one, which had a capacity of fifty tons, but the engine weighs about fifty-six tons, and as soon as the front wheels rolled on to the car they cut through the boards and it was evident that the load was too heavy. Yesterday the engine was run out on to one of the C. P. R. sidings, where it was run up and down by the yard engine to make sure that it was in good running order. The intention is to take behind a way freight, leaving it off at Havelock, Smith's Falls and other places at similar intervals, as an extra precaution to have all the parts in good order when delivered.

As stated before, it is the first electric engine constructed in Canada. It is learned that in Schenectady there are some fourteen hundred of them turned out in a year. It has two trolleys when in operation and there are four motores that provide the motive power. Two men are required to run it, and it is understood that its rate of speed, with thirty freight cars as a load, is about thirty miles an hour. There are two head lights, a bell and compressed air whistle, and many other intricate parts. Experts from Schenectady were brought here to do the wiring and assembling.

Counter Action In The West Peterborough Election

The Contested Case Comes Up at Osgoode Hall Before Justice Britton---Mr. Burnham's Attorney Says: "I Have Nothing."

The West Peterborough contested case came up yesterday at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, before Mr. Justice Britton, under the Summary Election Trials Act. Argument offered by Mr. Watson in behalf of Hon. Mr. Stratton showed that there had been no reasonable effort to serve notice upon Mr. Stratton within the time allowed by law, during which time he might easily and readily have been served. For some purpose of their own the pursuers failed to avail themselves of the opportunity for personal service and then had recourse to the substitutional process under an order of the court. This service, which was made upon the respondent's business manager, Roland M. Glover, was made within the ten days of limitation during which it was possible to reach the respondent himself, and was contrary to the express provision and intention of the statute, and hence illegal and of no effect, and the petition became consequently null and void.

Mr. Watson, K.C., desired to put Hon. Mr. Stratton in the witness box, but the petitioner's attorney objected.

The Toronto World gives the following relation of the proceedings:

G. H. Watson, K.C., and J. Grayson Smith appeared for Mr. Stratton, who was also present.

Mr. Watson stated that while he had filed ten preliminary objections to the protest he proposed to take up the eighth, which argued that no service in accordance with the act had been made. The order made on Dec. 2 by the court, authorising the service on a subatitute, was void, as the proper procedure in case there was legal difficulty in reaching Mr. Stratton, was to have applied for an extension of time for service. If reasonable efforts to reach the respondent then failed, an application for an order of substitution would have been regular. He had filed an affidavit by Mr. Stratton, which showed that no reasonable effort at personal service had been made.

Mr. Stratton had been at Toronto and Peterborough a great part of the time, and in Toronto at least half a dozen days, on which service could have been made. Under such circumstances the service must be personal or the writ becomes of no effect. The error was definite, clear cut and fatal. This was established in the Montmagny judgment by the supreme court.

Counsel set forth that this was the time to raise the legality of the alleged service. He asked that he be allowed to put Mr. Stratton in the witness-box, when E. Jones, counsel for the petitioner, J. H. Burnham, could cross-examine him.

Mr. Jones objected that such a proceeding was irregular and was not a proper suggestion from a litigant who was attempting to nullify proceedings on the ground of irregularity. Moreover, the affidavit and the proposed examination of Mr. Stratton were without notice to the petitioner.

"Perhaps you will concede there was no personal service?" suggested Justice Britton.

"I conceive it to be my duty to concede nothing," replied Mr. Jones. "If he intends to rely on sheer technicalities he must be met by them."

Mr. Watson closed by moving for an order quashing the protest. By failing to serve Mr. Stratton personally, the petitioners "for reasons best known to themselves, have," Mr. Watson continued, "allowed the case to fall."

J. E. Jones, for petitioners, said the respondent had abandoned six or seven of his preliminary objections, and now spring the plea of lack of personal service upon Mr. Stratton. This was insufficiently specified in their notice of objection. It was not covered by the mere mention of the term insufficiency of service. The specific nature of the insufficiency must be given. If they meant personal service it was necessary to say that, but they purposely refrained from stating that because they knew that Mr. Stratton would then have been personally served within 24 hours. Counsel for the respondent appeared before the court after serving them with a deceptive notice. Was the court going to encourage that sort of deception? It was dishonest with the court. It was an attempt to jolly from day to day.

The order granted for substitutional service on Dec. 2 was valid. Under this order service had been regularly made on Roland Glover. It had evidently reached Mr. Stratton, as he was present to answer it.

Under Sec. 19 of the act under which the respondent raised his objections there was no authority for the procedure of the respondent's counsel.

Judge Britton said that Mr. Jones was entitled to an adjournment to examine the affidavit. The latter declined to accept this on the ground that the affidavit could not be introduced under the notice of objections served upon them.

Justice Britton said: "I will look into the cases."

Mr. Watson made another application for permission to place Mr. Stratton in the box, but was not allowed to do so. He turned smilingly to Mr. Jones, and, holding out his hand, said: "Perhaps you have the order of Dec. 2 with you."

Mr. Jones snapped his hand bag with the words: "I have nothing."

"My learned friend has nothing," said Mr. Watson.

The court then adjourned.

Stay of Proceedings.

2:30 p.m. Special Despatch.

Toronto, Dec. 15.—Mr. Justice Britton this morning granted a stay of proceedings in the West Peterborough Election petition finding the final decision on the preliminary objection. He also extended the time for the taking of proceedings by either party including the filing of a cross-petition if the present petition be maintained.

Young Man To Be Blacklisted; Has Been Addicted To Use Of Liquor

A young man, who was found lying on the corner of George and Simcoe streets at 11:30 o'clock last night, in a helplessly intoxicated condition appeared before Magistrate Dumble at police court this morning.

When he appeared this morning, P. C. Meagher testified that he was addicted to the use of liquor and had been for some time. Magistrate Dumble considered that the best thing under the circumstances was to have the young man black-listed so that the hotel men could not sell him any more liquor.

Another Saturday Night Fray; End Of Nose Was Bitten Off

It looked like a big night to more one party last Saturday night, judging from the results that were chronicled in Monday's papers. The latest affair that has come to light was somewhat similar to that which occurred on the Chemong road within a mile of Bridgenorth. It took place somewhere on the same road so the report goes. Two neighbors had been in the city during the day and towards evening started to drive home. Apparently they had drunk not wisely but too well of that stuff which transforms memory to a fume and numbs the other sections of the brain. At any rate somewhere along the road a quarrel was started during which one of the men is said to have bitten a piece off his companion's nose. The affair has been kept quiet but it is vouched for by persons living in the vicinity of the section where the two men reside.

THE ISOLATION HOSPITAL MATTER.

A school inspector buying disinfectant for use in the Queen Alexandra School means that scarlet fever is, what may be regarded as, epidemic in the northern part of the city, and that, unless the greatest precautions are taken there is danger of its invading the school and closing it and also closing or impairing the usefulness of the Normal School, affiliated with it for pedagogic purposes. The danger arises from the fact, that, in default of an isolation hospital, there is no properly recognized means of isolation, the only known safe way of dealing with infectious or contagious diseases. Such diseases cannot be cured in the ordinary sense of the word. The most that the most skilful physician can do is to steer the patient past the cemetery gates, if he can, in all cases, do even that. Fortunately the type of scarlet fever prevalent in the northern part of the town is of a mild type but, on that account, in one way all the more dangerous. The symptoms may be so obscure as to render identification difficult. An example of its dangerous character in regard to spreading infection is furnished locally. A case of unidentified character was admitted to a hospital. Scarlet fever developed, and the disease was communicated to a convalescent patient in the private ward adjoining. The nurse in attendance took the disease and by her it was communicated to another nurse. This indicates the danger of any hospital having anything to do directly or indirectly with the treatment of patients affected with contagious diseases. This is doubtless the reason why the law explicitly forbids the admission of such patients into general hospitals. And it also indicates the necessity for the provision of an isolation hospital. The city authorities have had the matter in hand for four or five years, and the project is still in the nebulous stage. The city council is simply wasting time in coquetting with the hospitals in order to effect some alternative arrangement. This cannot be done, and its failure can be no more strongly emphasized than by the fact that the hospital authorities refuse to even negotiate upon the subject.

An isolation hospital would, of course cost money. So does the treatment of patients in their homes cost money, and, besides, works hardships on the inmates. Private houses have to be quarantined for six weeks, at least, and, in case of another case developing, six more weeks, with the accompanying loss and inconvenience and above all, the danger of spreading infection. That the disease as it exists here at present is a mild type only adds to the danger. The milder the type, the greater the carelessness. With an isolation hospital the patient can be immediately segregated, the danger of the disease spreading reduced to a minimum and the chances of the patient's proper treatment and recovery, greatly enhanced. Dr. Fredericks in a recent letter to the press cites a case of real hardship. To quote his statement:

"Take concrete examples of recent date, an honest hard-working woman with a family of five children, two of them bread-winners. Each of the latter were taken from work to nurse others ill with scarlet fever, in order that the main bread-winner might stay away from the family for the public protection. Think what this would mean to you in the same circumstances.

"Away from her family for three months.

"Board to pay for three months.

"Two bread-winners less for three months."

If the city in such a case should, as it is morally, if not legally bound to do, make compensation, the cost of this haphazard and dangerous way of dealing with scarlet fever is much greater than the maintenance of an isolation hospital. If such a hospital were in existence a patient on being attacked, could at once be removed to it, the house disinfected and free from quarantine with twenty-four hours, all danger of infection practically removed, and the public perfectly protected. Last year there were forty-three cases of scarlet fever in the city. With proper isolation these might have been confined to half a dozen.

It would seem that the city authorities should take some decided stand upon the question of an isolation hospital. They should either definitely decide to go on with the work, or definitely decide to abandon it. In the latter we should know where we are; but the city could hardly know the extent of the responsibility it assumes. It assumes a great responsibility in paltering with the matter, much less abandoning it. It assumes the responsibility of permitting and courting conditions that facilitate the spread of disease with all its consequences; it assumes the responsibility morally, if not legally, of compensating citizens for loss of time under quarantine and for other expenses. More than that, it assumes the responsibility of paying heavy damages for death resulting from neglect of duty and failure to comply with the requirements of the law. The Examiner is informed that recently a municipal corporation in the west of this province, had to pay damages in a suit at law, on account of neglect. This shows that corporations are liable for damages for consequences of neglect ind ealing with infectious diseases as they are liable for damages on account of defective streets or pavements.

There is no use trying to negotiate with the hospitals, the law has closed that door of escape. The only way is to meet the responsibility face to face. If an isolation hospital is the only solution of the problem the city authorities know their duty.

The proverb says that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

THE CHRISTMAS STAMP.

The King's Daughters of Peterborough have received a supply of the Christmas stamp, whose sale is intended to help finance the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, the only hospital that receives consumptive patients from every part of Canada. These stamps are a little larger than the ordinary stamp, printed in red, and bearing the "red cross" on a maple leaf with the legend "Merry Christmas" above and "Happy New Year" below, the whole framed by the words "Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives." The idea of this stamp originated in Denmark, from which it has spread to Canada among other countries. The Muskoka Hospital stamp serves the double purpose of providing funds and placing the name of this grand institution prominently before the public at a season when hearts are especially open to charitable influences and subject to generous impulses. Not that it requires much generosity to purchase a stamp for one cent and place it on every article of correspondence post card, letter or parcel. The Christmas Free Hospital stamps are sold at one cent each, put up in envelopes containing 10, 25, 50 or 100 stamps. These stamps do not pay postage, they do not carry any kind of mail but any kind of mail will carry them. By buying a stamp its price is added to the fund of a hospital which provides for the treatment of consumptive patients whom no other hospital will admit, and who have no means of payment for treatment, even if admitted. By helping the funds of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, one is helping to give treatment to some unfortunates we know, for we have them in every community, who from lack of such an institution are slowly dying, day by day. The King's Daughters will help you to put the Christmas stamp on all your Christmas correspondence.

Put this stamp with message bright,
On all the mail you send;
Every penny aids the fight,
The dread White Plague to end.

Do your Christmas buying promptly and be sure to include in your purchases a supply of the Muskoka Free Consumptive Hospital stamps.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The good old Globe has the "spelling reform" bee in its bonnet, One is not, therefore, surprised at its perpetrating this atrocity "The difference between Dorando and Longboat is that one is real dago and the other is only an Onondaga."

Whether or not Owen Sound will abolish local option at the January elections, it will certainly elect an anti-option mayor. Both candidates are "damp" on the temperance question, so that from the "dry" point of view the election of a mayor will be the choice between two evils.

The Toronto News ventures the statement that "in order to effect a thorough exposure of corruption all over Canada, the Opposition would need a fund of hardly less than half a million dollars." How much does the News allow for the exposure of the corruption of its own party? If it would as frankly confess the political sins of its own party, as it recklessly assumes the guilt of its opponents, the expense would be sensibly lessened—"but if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself."

The Boston Herald, in discarding its so-called "comic" supplement, declares that "henceforth it will cease to issue its weekly array of illustrations and embalmed humour, and who may venture to say what it will lead to? . . . . The comic supplement has sown the seeds of idleness, duplicity, irresponsibility and dishonesty in many an impressionable child's mind, and the fond father or mother who purchased the Sunday supplement has alone been to blame. The influence of these sheets has been essentially immoral, for they have ever idealized the vapid, stupid, vulgar and demoralizing."

The Mail and Empire proposes an examination test for candidates for municipal office, with the Railway and Municipal Board, which recently turned over Toronto bound hand and foot to the Toronto Street Railway Company, as examiners. The proposition is impracticable and unconstitutional to boot. The principles of British liberty forbid the destruction of the time honoured right of the wrong man thrusting himself into the square hole in all walks of human activity—the pulpit, the bar, and parliamentary and municipal life. The privilege of making fools of ourselves, and of helping others to do the same, is our most cherished right.

The vagaries of the isothermal lines are the making of the Canadian West. Westerly of Winnipeg they take a sharp curve northward, and modify the climate of the northwest so that on the Peace River, within the same latitude as the southern part of Greenland, wheat and other cereals can be grown and ripened. We can hardly comprehend how we are widening out. Only a few years ago Edmonton, now a busy city of 20,000, was a solitary trading post, and it was some years less when it had only one newspaper. Hon. Mr. Oliver's Bulletin. Now Edmonton and vicinity have five live newspapers and recently a newspaper has been established in the further north, at Athabaska Landing, under the shadow of the 60th parallel of latitude, and on a level with the northern part of James' Bay. We have newspapers in the Yukon, almost within the Arctic Circle, and the time may not be far distant when a newspaper, say the Post, may be established at the North Pole.

HOW TO MAKE THE BEST REMEDY

Fine Recipe For Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble Gives Prompt Relief.

FIX THIS FOR YOURSELF

The following prescription for the cure of rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles has no doubt been filled millions of times, viz.: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at little cost and are mixed by shaking well in a bottle.

The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime, drinking a full tumblerful of water after each dose. It is stated that this prescription is a positive remedy for kidney trouble and lame back, weak bladder and urinary difficulties, especially of the elderly people, and one of the best things to be used in rheumatic afflictions, relieving the aches and pains and reducing swellings.

A well-known authority states that his mixture acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, cleanses these spongelike organs and gives them power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood which is the cause of rheumatism.

If your back or sides ache and you suspect kidney trouble, it would be wise to try this for a few days.

TEMPEST AND SUNSHINE

Tempest and Sunshine," a play from the book of the late Mary J. Holmes, has been read by thousands of people and which is dramatized by Miss Doran, for the Partello Stock Company, deals principally with rural life in Kentucky. The play shows a pretty picture of life in a small town in Kentucky. Such picturesque dress, manners, environment, cannot but be apart more than a little in book or upon the stage, portrayed by competent cast. The dialogue sparkles pleasantly. The character of Fannie, enacted by Alice Kennedy, the brightest star in repertoire. This play will be given to-night by the Partello Stock Company at the Grand Opera House. The author, Mary J. Holmes, passed away recently at the age of seventy-nine, at Brockport, N. Y. She wrote some interesting books during her life time and Tempest and Sunshine is considered the best of her writings. You have all read the book, now see the play.

CHINESE SMUGGLERS AT NIAGARA

Big Gang Said to Be Operating Near Chippewa, Ont.

EIGHT NEARLY DROWNED

Word Has Come to Canadian and U.S. Secret Service Men That Two Whites and Six Chinamen Were Almost Swept to Death Over the Falls Recently — Capture of Gang Is Expected in Few Days.

Niagara Falls, Dec. 15.—The secret service men in the employ of the Canadian and United States Governments are on the trail of a gang of Chinese smugglers who are said to be operating between Chippewa and La Salle.

The detectives have just discovered that a party of six Chinamen and two Americans narrowly escaped being swept over the Falls one night last week when the engine of a gasoline launch which was conveying them to the United States failed and the party were nearly carried to death.

Another smuggler on shore at Chippewa heard their cries and in another launch went out and towed the disable boat to the shore, where the Chinese shipped in the efficient launch and landed at La Salle. The authorities say they will make important arrests in the next few days.

Aid to Education.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—Lord Grey delivered quite an important speech last evening before the Montreal Technical Institute.

His Excellency regretted that the British North American Act prevented the Federal Government from coming in aid of higher education, as can be done under the English constitution.

He also said that a forward step would no doubt be made at the Imperial Educational Congress to be held in London during the summer of 1911, as he believed that some steps would then be taken so that the educationalists of the different states of the empire may be brought into closer touch the one with the other for the advancement of education generally, and especially higher education.

Defaulter Gets Respite.

North Bay, Dec. 15.—At the High Court of Justice, which opened here yesterday before Justice Teetzel, the case of William Martin, Jr., charged with embezzlement of funds belonging to the Town of North Bay, while acting as tax collector came up.

Justice Britton's decision was read in court yesterday afternoon, and was to the effect that Martin may be allowed his liberty under bail of $10,000 to appear at the autumn assizes in North Bay in 1909 for sentence.

Burns His Millions.

London, Dec. 15.—A special despatch from St. Petersburg to The Daily Mail relates that dying Moscow millionaire, name Petroff, has his whole fortune withdrawn from the banks and the bank notes brought to the sick room. They were then piled before him and set on fire.

Petroff summoned his relatives and showed them the ashes, congratulating them on having escaped the evil of wealth.

King at Buckingham.

London, Dec. 15.—King Edward arrived yesterday in London, greatly improved in health. He held an investiture at Buckingham Palace, during which he walked briskly about the rooms, and conversed freely and animatedly with those present.

Upon the advice of his physician, the King has given up his visit to Lord Burton in Derbyshire, because of the inclement weather, and returns to Brighton to-day.

Perjury Charged.

Brockville, Dec. 15.—Patrick Brady surrendered himself in the county judge's Criminal Court yesterday and pleaded not guilty to a charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed in taking the oath to vote at the Dominion election in Brockville on Oct. 26. He was admitted to bail.

Sent Up For Trial.

Kenora, Dec. 15.—Martin Schwieg, Samuel Farquhar and Geo. Archambault, Jr., were sent up for trial for defrauding a prominent citizen. Bail was fixed at $300 each.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Dec. 14.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were large—105 carloads, as follows: 2115 cattle, 22 hogs, 690 sheep and 17 calves.

Exporters.

There were a few loads of exporters reported as selling at $5.40 to $5.50 per cwt., but we are inclined to think they were bought for the Christmas market of the Dominion. Bulls sold at $3.75 to $4.25.

Butchers.

Choice Christmas cattle sold at from $5 to $5.60, with a few picked, prime lots at $5.75 to $6. Loads of good heifers and steers, $4.75 to $5; medium to good, $4 to $4.50; common, $3.50 to $3.75; cows, $2 to $4; canners, $1.50 to $2.60.

Milkers and Springers.

A few milkers and springers sold at $35 to $55 each.

Veal Calves.

A limited number of veal calves sold at $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

About 700 sheep and lambs were on sale. Lambs were firm, selling at $5.25 to $5.55 per cwt.; sheep, $3.25 to $3.40 per cwt.

Hogs.

Gunns, Limited, reported selects at $6, fed and watered at the market, and $5.75 to drovers, f.o.b. cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 12 were 3418 cattle, 1218 sheep and lambs, 2313 hogs and 267 calves. The offerings for local consumption this morning amounted to 1158 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 204 calves.

Altho the supply of cattle was much larger than a week ago yet the undertone to the market was strong and prices for the ordinary stock showed an advance of ¼c per lb. The quality of the stock of feed was all that could be desired by both local and out-of-town buyers for the Christmas trade, there being some extra choice beeves, which brought fancy prices. The demand was active for all top quality grades and a brisk trade was done in the morning, but the common and inferior cattle moved rather slowly, of which the offerings were smaller than usual. Messrs. Johnston and Bessner, one of ourleading wholesale butcher firms, bought two extra choice mast-fed cows, weighing 2370 pounds, at 6c per lb. Two others, weighing 2270 pounds, at 5¾c, and five heifers, weighing 2175 pounds, at 6c. Mr. William Masterman of the Masterman Packing Company, was on the market as usual, and operated freely in cattle and hogs. There was also a number of buyers from Ottawa and Quebec, who bought a number of carloads of choice cattle and lambs. On the whole the trade was very satisfactory to all concerned. Ordinary choice cattle sold at 5¼c to 5½c; good, at 5¼c to 5c; fair, at 5c to 4½c; common, at 3½c to 3¾c, and inferior, at 1½c to 3½c per pound.

A much stronger feeling prevailed in the market for lambs, on account of the continued small offerings and prices scored a further advance of ½c per lb. The demand was good from local and outside buyers and an active trade was done with sales of choice lots at 6½c to 6c, and good at 5½c to 5¾c per lb. There is no change in the condition of the market for sheep, prices being firmly maintained under a fair demand and small supply, and sales of choice stock were made at 4c, and culls, at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. The offerings of calves were not large, but the quality of the stock was something extra and in consequence the demand was good and higher prices than usual were paid. Some extra choice stock sold at 6½c to 6c and good at 4½c to 5c per lb.

There were no new developments in the live hog situation. Receipts were larger than they have been of late, for which the demand was good and prices ruled firm, with sales of selected lots at $6.60 to $6.75 per cwt., off cars. Cable advices received on Canadian bacon last week were weak and noted a further decline in prices of 1s to 2s per cwt., but this fact seems to have but little influence on the local market these days.

WILL CANADA WITHDRAW?

J. H. Mackinder In London Sees a Real Danger of It.

London, Dec. 15.—H. J. Mackinder, addressing the Compatriots' Club yesterday, said the tendency of the younger generation in Canada was towards independence, though they hardly realized the fact at the moment. There was a strong feeling almost throughout the Dominion against annexation with the United States, but there existed also a standing temptation to give that power commercial terms which must end in political union. If such a coalition were formed it would arouse European hostility, a hostility not active, perhaps, but still real. In self-defence the coalition would be compelled to take over the command of the ocean, and the powers of the Far East, instead of looking to Britain, would look to America. Could Britain, in such circumstances, retain India and South Africa? As Lord Milner said, the Dutch would be loyal for reasons of policy, not sentiment. If Canada parted from Britain the empire would end, and the attraction for the Dutch would disappear.

PACKING COMBINE POSSIBLE.

Consolidation of Western Plants Is Object of Conference.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Whether there will be a new corporation consolidating the packing plants of Western Canada, as reported from Winnipeg Sunday, could not be confirmed here yesterday, although it was ascertained that a secret meeting of men said to be interested in such an enterprise was being held.

Those participating in the conference were said to be R. M. MacLeod, a capitalist of Winnipeg; A. W. Anderson, and J. Herbert Anderson of Spokane, Wash.; E. C. McDonald, assistant Attorney-General of Washington; O. W. McConnell, Attorney-General of Montana, and Albert Galen of Helena, Mont. It was said that only one of the conferees is directly interested in the cattle industry. J. H. Anderson, said to be a promoter, said:

"It will be impossible to say anything of the proceedings as yet, and it is probable that nothing whatever will be made public. I cannot say, you know, what is the nature of the conference."

A Waterways Commission.

St. John, Dec. 15.—A. P. Barnhill, one of the best known lawyers in New Brunswick, and John Keefe, a prominent merchant, have been named by the Federal Government to represent Canada on an international commission, which will deal with the matters of obstructions on the St. John River. Their counsel will be Hon. H. A. McKeown, lately Attorney-General, and Hon. W. P. Jones, formerly solicitor-General of New Brunswick.

Hurrah For Eve!

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCullough of Evanston, the only woman justice of the peace in the United States, in a woman suffrage address Sunday denounced Adam as a loafer, painted Eve as the mother of all arts and science and declared that the history of the human race showed that woman was the originator of most of the good things of the world for which man now takes credit.

Ferry Suddenly Quits.

New York, Dec. 15.—Patrons and employes of the five lines of ferryboats running from Broadway, Brooklyn, to Manhattan Borough, found to their surprise yesterday morning that the system had suspended operations.

Victim of Explosion Dies.

Virden, Man., Dec. 15.—Mike Farrell, 16, a victim of Saturday's coal oil explosion, died yesterday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Schurman are improving, though the former is badly burned.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Is without an Equal for COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS and all Affections of the THROAT and LUNGS.

All the most serious affections of the throat, the lungs and the bronchial tubes, are in the beginning but colds or coughs. Too much stress cannot be laid on this fact, and neglect to cure the cold very often causes years of suffering and in the end comes "Consumption." Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe.

Mr. J. L. Purdy, Millvale, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled with a hard, dry cough for a long time, especially at night, but after having used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for a few weeks, I find my cough has left me. To any person, suffering as I did, I can say that this remedy is well worth a trial. I would not be without it in the house."

So great has been the success of this wonderful remedy, it is only natural that numerous persons have tried to imitate it. Don't be humbugged into taking anything but "Dr. Woods." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 50 cents.

Eating Carelessly

frequently causes stomach troubles, but careful eating will never right them. When your stomach is out of condition, it needs help that no food can supply. It must be thoroughly cleansed, settled and strengthened. Food never does this.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

are the greatest stomach medicine human skill ever compounded. Don't attempt to cure your stomach by dieting. You will half starve and get little benefit. Give Beecham's Pills a chance and you will again know the pleasures of a sound digestion. Appetite will return and the stomach again work without any discomfort. The skin will clear, the face plump out, while people will remark "How well you're looking." These are facts, not fancies. Prove it yourself.

ASKS ELECTORS TO BE LIBERAL

In Their Voting on the Exhibition Grounds By-law—The Example Toronto Has Set.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir—Would you kindly allow me a little space to reply to a letter in your daily of the 10th inst. re-"Exhibition Grounds" Now sir, that letter, (I hope it is not intentionally misleading, but from lack of knowledge of the proposition). The proposition is for the city to buy the Exhibition Grounds and Turf Club Grounds for a park for the South End of the city and allow the Industrial Fair Board to erect suitable buildings for fair purposes and only to be used by them for exhibition purposes one week in the year for their accommodation, and if something like this is not done, it will be very difficult for the Fair Board to make their exhibition the success they and all our best citizens wish it to be. As at present our buildings through age are becoming old and dilapedated, and as the present grounds are only under a short lease we do not feel justified in spending large amounts in repairing the old buildings or erecting new ones. Now sir, we have a precedent to show that it would be to advantage for the city to purchase the grounds. We will take the city of Toronto and their National Exhibition, acknowledged to be the greatest on the continent. The city owns the Exhibition Grounds and Buildings, erected at a very large expense, and in each and every year they are spending enormous sums on new and additional buildings as required. and Toronto people look on this as one of their best investments from a financial standpoint, as the city receives a large dividend every year from the profits of the exhibition directly, to say nothing of the immense business done by the business houses in all lines during the two weeks of the fair.

We hope the electors will take a broad and liberal view of the whole matter and by their votes for the by-law instruct the City Council to purchase this desirable property for a park and place of recreation for the citizens; at once while it can be obtained, and surely the south end citizens should be given some consideration, as at present they have no park, while all other parts of the city have been provided with splendid parks. At the present time no part of the city is building up as rapidly as the South End.

Yours,
WM. COLLINS.
(A Fair Director.)

Address Of Much Interest On Raising Profitable Horses

Given by W. F. Kydd at Meeting of Farmers' Institute at Ennismore—The Kind of Horse to Raise.

MEANING OF THOROUGHBRED

Mr. W. F. Kydd, of Simcoe, has an address which is modestly styled, "Am I raising the most profitable horse," and the lucid and explanatory way in which he treats the subject is a revelation. He spoke on it at the afternoon meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute at Ennismore on Wednesday and even to the layman let alone the farmers among whom the horse has a place of great importance his talk was absorbing and his explanations full and clear. Those who heard Mr. Kydd listened to a practical masterpiece for what he said was of real worth and the information imparted was of unmistakeable value. It was generally voted by by Mrs Kydd's auditors that the address was the best they had ever heard on the subject discussed. While some of the principal points are expressed below o fully appreciate the address one would have to hear as given by Mr Kydd, for many of the incidental details brought up during the questioning by the listeners were very instructive.

Mr J. N. Telford, president of the Institute, was in the chair.

The Horse to Raise

The question of the most profitable horse to raise was the first one that came up for consideration.

It costs $100, it would be safely safe to raise a colt until it was four years of age. Now, would the average horse of that age, the kind of animal generally reared on the farm, sell for that much money. Generally it would not.

Mr. Kydd is apparently no lover of bronchos as a horse, for agricultural purposes and he spoke of them as "rubbish" and deprecated the bringing of them to Eastern Canada.

It was admitted that the kind of horse which was spoken of above as being raised on the farm would not bring $100. Considering that it took that much to raise the horse from a foal until it was four years of age it would be disposed of at a loss.

At a low average of $210. So it was affirmed that horse raising gone in for intelligently was a profitable business and paid just as well as any other department of farming.

As soon as a farmer gets a good mare, the first time he is offered a good price he takes the money and away it goes to the city. And what had he left at home? The poor broken down mare that was not fit to breed from.

Speaking of the stallion, Mr Kydd told of the great mistake of breeding to a cheap stallion as more money was lost in the stock than in what was saved in the service.

Be Wary of "Imported"

The speaker wished to warn young breeders against the word "imported." It only meant that the horse to which the term was applied was brought from another country into this, and the British breeders often disposed of "importeds" because they were too inferior to the those worked on the farm as geldings.

Mr. Kydd here gave his further reasons why he thought the draft horse, generally speaking, was the most profitable one to raise. If a lighter and higher class horse received a blemish when a colt, it practically clipped the selling price in two. This could not be said of the draft horse, which was for utility rather than mere show.

And then the draft horse was more docile and easier to break. But it was a good thing that there were lots of farmers who did not raise draft horses for the users of carriage horses must have their demands met.

"But for goodness' sake get off that general purpose horse."

The use to which the general purpose horse is put was described. No horse used in the field for hard work could be expected to be of any use for road purposes. But there was some object in raising a horse of medium weight that could be used in the cities for carriage or express purposes. Horses of this class brought a good figure when sold and the call for them was good.

What Thoroughbred Means

There was great stress put on the word "thoroughbred." But what did thoroughbred really mean? It simply meant a runner. That was the only horse that was entitledt o be called a thoroughbred.

Speaking of light horses, Mr Kydd gave very valuable information as to the breeding to get the most desirable carriage horse.

Too Many Draughtbreeds

There were five breeds of draught horses in this country; the Clyde, Shire, Suffolk, Punch and Belgium. And there were too many. There was too much breeding of a brood mare to different kinds of stallions.

Which is the most profitable draught horse to raise, the farmer would ask. The answer was the one that would be the most profitable to him, the one with the highest market value. Farmers were advised to stick to the breed and the type as much as possible. Suppose a mare was three parts Clydesdale such a mare should be bred to a pure bred Clydesdale. That would be improving the type.

Strong Points and Defects

To the young man who knew little of the defects of horses, the speaker had something to say. He brought out the different defects and strong points of a horse using a well outlined chart figure to do so.

The head noted the disposition of the animal. The horse with the big broad forehead and mild eyes was of a good disposition. The horse with the narrow forehead and eye sunk back in its head was of a mean disposition and had little intelligence. It was hard to break and hard to manage.

The Foot

After the head came the feet of a horse. In the first place the foot should not be too small in proportion to the body. A foot like that possessed by a mule was a drawback. A horse's foot should flare a little to allow for the weight to rest upon it. And a horse's foot does expand a little when the horse stands on it.

What does a blacksmith do with the frog of a horse's foot usually? Pares off a big chunk the first thing he does. The frog does not need paring except when it is diseased. It sheds itself naturally and if a superfluous piece is showing, it can be cut off with a jack knife. The speaker wished it to be understood that he did not want to be unnecessarily severe with the blacksmith. A separate chart was used to explain the function of the parts of the foot. The foot was the most important part of a horse's anatomy.

The blacksmith used the rasp too freely on the outside of a horse's foot. It was an easy matter to do too much paring for who could tell where the skin ceased and the hoof began.

W.F.M.S. COLLECT A LARGE SUM

Total Amount Gathered by St. Paul's Missionary Society is $624.36—Annual Meeting Held.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

The 33nd annual meeting of St. Paul's Women's Foreign Missionary Society was held on Friday afternoon last. After the opening exercises and prayer by Mrs. McPherson, Miss Dickson, the president, gave an interesting address on "Practical Enthusiasm for Mission Work." The secretary's and treasurer's reports, and reports from the Fraser Mission Band, and The Faithful Workers' Mission Band were read.

Mrs. Goforth, of Honan, China, gave a most interesting address, telling of the great change that has taken place in China during the twenty-one years since she and Mr. Goforth went there as pioneer missionaries. During their early work they were met with great suspicion and opposition, but to-day Mrs. Goforth with her children can travel alone to any part of their field in safety. They have accomplished wonderful work in China. Mr. Goforth is at present conducting great revivals in Manchuria.

Report of Secretary

Another year in the history of our auxiliary has closed, and in reviewing our work, we find much to encourage us to renewed effort.

Our meetings have been held regularly on the 2nd Friday of each month, with the exception of August. The regularity of our meetings we consider important, as our absent members may be with us in thought and prayer at this hour. Our average attendance for the year was 58.

The January meeting as usual, took the form of a united prayer meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary societies. This year we again followed the United Study Course, and in the study of "Gloria Christi," we have seen a summing up of the marvellous progress made in non-Christian lands, through the inworking of the Gospel of Jesus Christ; not alone through the preaching of this gospel, but through its practice by means of educational, medical and industrial effort, have come a great upheaval of ancient superstition, and a revolution in social, moral and religious ideals. A study of the mighty works of God in His world through his own appointed plan of Christian Missions, has been our privilege this year.

Our society was asked to provide clothing for a boy and girl, aged 15 in the school at Ahousaht, B. C., and a bale of suitable clothing valued at $63.65 was forwarded.

On the 27th and 28th of May, the Peterborough Presbyterial held its annual meeting in St. Andrew's Church, and those of our members who attended these meetings were greatly profited especially in hearing Dr. Chone Oliver, and Rev. Dr. R. P. Mackay.

The repacking of the clothing from the Presbyterial of Peterborough, for Ahousaht was, this year, in charge of a committee from our auxiliary, and on Sept. 3rd a bale of clothing weighing 1,100 lbs. was sent forward. The society take this opportunity of expressing their gratitude to the ladies who undertook the laborious work.

In October our annual thank-offering meeting was held. Mrs. Burns, president of the Peterborough Presbyterial, gave a most helpful address. Our thank-offering amounted to $450.45, the largest in the history of our auxiliary.

This year we again subscribed for the "Interior," and the "Missionary Review." The Interior is sent to India, and is a paper much appreciated by our missionaries there. The Missionary Review comes to us every month, as well as the Foreign Tidings, and is for the use of the members of the auxiliary. This magazine is full of most interesting and helpful missionary news, and we would like more of the ladies to avail themselves of the privilege of reading it.

Death has once more visited our auxiliary, and a rare sweet spirit has been removed from us in the person of Mrs. D. H. Moore, who had always evidenced a very practical interest in the work of this society.

The year is past, and whatever has been done in His name, to Him we ascribe the Glory. We feel grateful that we are privileged to be co-workers with Him, and we would humbly ask for help and guidance in the coming year, that at its close it may be said truly of each member, "She hath done what she could."

Since writing this report sad news has come to us, and it is with deep sorrow, that we record the death of a former highly esteemed secretary, Mrs. McKay, of Harriston. To her sorrowing mother and husband, we extend our deepest sympathy, and our prayer is, that the God of all comfort may bind up their bleeding, broken hearts, and pour balm into their wounded Spirits.

The treasurer's report of the missionary accounts showed receipts to the extent of $624.36, and expenditures of $37.86, leaving a balance in the bank of $586.50.

Officers Elected

The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Miss Dickson; Hon. Vice-President, Mrs. Innes; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Rogers; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Pogue; Secretary, Mrs. A. P. MacLean; Literary Secretary, Miss Laidlaw; Treasurer. Mrs. McKee; Librarian, Miss N. Davidson; Organist, Miss Simpson.

Executive Committee. — Mesdames Robt Hall, R. R. Hall, Wm. Davidson, Harstone, Boyce, Ferguson, Mowat, Hill, Munro, Shook and Turner.

DISCRIMINATING LADIES

Enjoy Using Herwicide on Account of Its Distinctiveness

The ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide speak of it in the highest terms, for its quick effect in cleaning the scalp of dandruff and also for its excellence as a general hair-dressing. It makes the scalp feel fresh and it allays that itching which dandruff will cause. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely cures dandruff, as it destroys the germ that causes it. The same germ causes hair to fall out, and later baldness; in killing it, Herpicide stops falling hair and prevents baldness. It is also an ideal hair dressing, for it lends an aristocratic charm to the hair that is quite distinctive. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to the Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes — 50c and $1. McDermid & Jury and 3 boxes for $1.25.

TWO PETERBOROUGH BOYS MEET AT PACIFIC COAST

Danny Simons as "Timothy D. McGee" Recognized by His Old Friend Fred Lynch.

A New Westminster despatch says: A pleasing feature of the appearance here of the "Little Johnny Jones" company which entertained so many of the citizens last night, was the recognition of the genial Irishman with the big laugh, "Timothy D McGee," by an old friend and fellow lacrosse player, Fred Lynch, of the Beaver cigar factory. The proper name of the comedian is Dan Simons, and he hails from Peterborough, Ont., and there learned and played the game that has made New Westminster famous. Fred Lynch played in the Peterborough team at the same time and was somewhat surprised when his old friend made his bow to the large audience of last night.

MAY DIVERT GRAIN TRAFFIC TO PACIFIC

President Hays of Grand Trunk Pacific Says He Will Do It With His Low Grades---One Engine Over Rockies---Expects to Have Line Open to Prince Rupert in Autumn of 1911---Short Way to the Orient.

(Special to the New York Times.)

Montreal, Nov. 28th—In an interview here C. M. Hays, President of the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is financed by Messrs. Rothschild in London and Speyer Brothers in New York, gives an account of his observation during a tour of inspection which took him to Prince Rupert, the western terminal of the new Canadian line.

In answer to questions Mr. Hays said—

"We are doing very well, indeed. The various contractors are in good spirits and well abreast of their dates. Indeed, the financial disaster in New York a year ago was for us a blessing in disguise. Large numbers of men have come north seeking work. Labour is abundant and is more productive, at lower wages. Already our trains are running regularly over the whole section 600 miles west of Winnipeg into Alberta. The newly arrived settlers have harvested a great wheat-crop—great both in quantity and in quality, greater still for the price it is bringing. At our Pacific terminal, Prince Rupert, from which I returned this week, good progress is being made with the grading of the first hundred miles east, and I see no reason to doubt that by autumn of 1911 our first train will break through to Ridewater, passing from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

High Cost and Low Grades

Asked about alleged "generous expenditures" on the road, Mr. Hays replied:—

"A number of amiable and glib gentlemen hunting seats in the Dominion Parliament have been talking about the matter on the stump. The Canadian voter has replied to them. The Dominion Government is, as you know, our partner in the enterprise, and to denounce Ministers for reckless extravagance is all right and proper from the standpoint of an opposition. But our expenditures have not been excessive nor beyond the measure of our obligations to the Government and the community.

"Bear in mind, please, that railroads are not now built as the earlier transcontinental roads were built, up hill, down dale, on an unballasted roadbed of mud. Such uneconomic methods were permissible when there were a mere handful of ranchmen and trappers to serve, and when the promotors' objective was first of all to earn the land grant on which they issued their bonds. What we require to-day and what the travelling public means to have is a first-class roadbed with such low gradients and wide curvatures tha tour trains can be run at very high speeds with perfect safety.

"We carry our road from Winnipeg over the Rockies to Prince Rupert with a maximum gradient of 21 feet to the mile going west and 26 to the mile going east. The immense economy in hauling freights with gradients so remarkable, every railway man must recognize. We shall be able to put two thousand tons of freight into Prince Rupert from Winnipeg behind a single engine.

"Of the seven great railroad systems which to-day cross the Rockies and reach the Pacific, the Union Pacific with grades of 116 feet eastbound and 105 west-bound, comes nearest to us. I will tabulate for you the grades of our six competitors and the dynamics of an engine on each.

Railroad	Max. Grade	Tractive Gross Resistance in Pounds per ton	Capacity of Engine in tons
Grand Trunk P.	6	14	2,641
Great Northern	116	50	572
Northern Pacific	116	50	572
Union Pacific	116	50	572
Santa Fee	185	76	376
Canadian Pacific	127	86	293

"In other words, the same engine could haul up the maximum grade of the Grand Trunk Pacific nearly four times more freight in a train than either the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, or Union Pacific, over five times more than on the Santa Fee, and about seven times more than can be hauled up grade on the Canadian Pacific. These are very remarkable figures, I am aware, an dI accept the responsible for putting them on record. You can read in these figures the reason for our so-called 'generous expenditures.' The interest on the cost of such a line will be returned to us ten times over in the economy of our operations and in the increased safety of our passengers.

"We expect that our easy gradients, which are due not only, or chiefly to our 'generous expenditures', but to our possession of the Yellow Head Pass through the Rockies, will in a few years twist around a great portion of the wheat export trade of the Northwest, and with the opening of the Panama Canal in 1914 send wheat to Europe (let alone to Asia) by way of the Pacific."

Mr. Hays proceeded:—

Divert Wheat Traffic to Pacific

"At present the wheat crop is either hurried to the ports on the great lakes, Duluth, Fort William, and Chicago, during the few weeks between threshing and the closing of lake navigation in November, or it is held up for six months in elevators at a considerable cost, or again, if it is carried through to the Eastern seaboard in winter, when the St. Lawrence route is closed by ice, the long haul through heavy snows makes the operation difficult, costly, and even disastrous both for the railway and to the farmer. West-bound from Saskatchewan and Alberta to Prince Rupert, the grades are easy; there is very little snow in winter, so that when the Panama Canal opens in six years I look to see Prince Rupert one of the very great grain ports of the world. I have more than once ventured the prediction that in my lifetime we shall haul to the Pacific as much grain as we shall haul to the Atlantic."

Mr. Hays declared that this diversion of traffic would not seriously diminish the earnings of the Eastern Division of the Grand Trunk.

"The volume of traffic," said he, "coming out of the new Northwest, if we may judge from the way settlers are already swarming in, will throw far more business upon our existing lines than they can possibly handle. The present cultivated area is but six million acres, a mere patch this on a farm of three hundred million acres. As yet we have but scratched the surface. We shall require very shortly to do wha tthe Canadian Pacific is already doing in Manitoba, that is, double track our road to enable us to handle the traffic. Thus the diversion of a large portion of the far western wheat trade will advantage every section of our road; it will even enable us to give settlers much lower rates, because we shall even up our loads, sending full cars both east and west instead of only east. While we send cattle, grain and minerals west to Prince Rupert, we shall haul back east the coal and thel umber which the settlers on that three hundred million acre farm need.

"When Prince Rupert has been connected with Sydney across the Pacific by a good line of steamships— and that will come soon—the connection will have been completed of the two very finest harbours in the British Empire. So at least a friend of mine assures me, who has recently seen both. He even gives the palm to Prince Rupert. Our route cuts off to the Far East—say Yokohama — 1500 miles from New York, compared with the San Francisco route, and 500 miles over the Vancouver route, and the saving of two or three days will often decide the choice. The climate of the place is neither hot in summer nor cold in winter; the mercury rarely, if ever, goes to zero. We shall sell the site of Prince Rupert to the public next spring, probably in May. We own three-quarters and the Government of British Columbia one-quarter.

"Already there are a couple of very comfortable hotels, a weekly newspaper, The Empire, and some two thousand people. I believe that town will in its early and rapid growth outstrip anything thus far on the Pacific. It is a back door to a great continent. Vancouver to rock its cradle had some 50,000,000 of people, Prince Rupert has 100,000,000. To-day Canada's people instead of emigrating across the border are being recruited by daily additions from the south of the line."

Music and Drama

New York Press—A young woman was dining recently at the Waldorf Astoria with a party of seven or eight friends. The orchestra played a tune which wa sfamiliar, but the name had escaped her. "What is it?" she asked. None knew. A waiter was summoned. "Garcon, what is the name of that tune?" Garcon didn't know but would find out. He was gone so long that all reference to the subject was completely forgotten. Near the end of the dinner he reappeared, and without any preliminary whatever walked up to the young woman and exclaimed: "Love Me and the World is Mine!" Everybody was startled. She nearly fainted at the declaration. But the humour of the situation quickly dawned upon the party, and the waiter escaped with his life and a fee.

TWO POPULAR SONGS

Two songs that have been published by the Cohan and Harris Company of New York and which are considered among the best in the popular line are "Love Days" and "Meet Me in Rose Time Rosie". The latter has met with particular favour in its presentation on the vaudeville stage and was also the hit of the Cohan Minstrel show. The other is a pretty waltz song something like "School Days", but with a much prettier melody. Some of the bars are especially tuneful and the whole number is one that is sure to appeal to popular fancy. It has already had a large sale.

"THE CRYSTAL"

To the Public of Peterborough City and County:

The management of "The Crystal," which, after a year and a half of operation, has just undergone enlargement and improvement, desires to thank the public for its kind and constant patronage.

We promised at the outset that this entertainment would be maintained under conditions that would invite the confidence of the most refined and scrupulous, and we are greatly gratified to realize that it has come to be recognized as a place of innocent recreation, where ladies can attend or send their children, for a half hour's amusement, which they know beforehand will be of a clean and wholesome character.

The patronage of the families of Peterborough, which has been constant and growing, as they have had experience of what "The Crystal" offers them, is a source of pride which we shall always endeavour to deserve.

We have taken pains to secure the best results attainable in the movable picture art from the capitals of Europe, and the public of Peterborough may always and confidently rely upon the best that is procurable in this kind of entertainment, conducted, as is our chief aim, upon lines that will instruct and amuse, and yet not offend the most fastidious taste.

With the enlarged seating capacity that has just been provided, and new daily attractions, we desire to wish our patrons, one and all, a "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year."

ASKED FOR FARES TO TORONTO

An unusual request for assistance was made to Mr. F. W. Miller yesterday. A young woman asked him for a ticket for her husband and herself to go to Toronto, stating that they had no money and her husband wished to return to work in Eaton's. She stated that he had not been working during the last six months, which was the time they had lived in Peterborough. She stated that they had lived with friends and had paid nothing for their board. As yet they are still in Peterborough, and as far as Mr. Miller is concerned, they are very likely to remain here.

A VERY ODD EFFECT IN JARDINIERES

A novelty in jardinieres may be seen in the window of Belleghem's furniture store, Hunter street. It was primarily an ordinary jardiniere obtained at the pottery by Mrs. Wm. Taylor and the work was done by her. Putty was placed on the outside and a conglomerate collection of things were placed all over it, with seemingly a haphazard plan, which resulted in a bizarre effect, but it is very unique and well done. On it there are military buttons, here and there a medal, strange coins, a little piece of mirror, brass bon ton tongs, bearing Long's and Hooper's names, and many other articles. The inside is painted in a tasty colour and the whole effect is a pleasing one.

FASCINATING STORY OF SILVER

Three Months Makes Discouraged Prospector Half a Millionaire.

The man who told me the story of the discovery of silver at Gow Ganda is to-day half a millionaire. He was a discouraged prospector 120 days ago.

As he told me the story, says a newspaper correspondent, simple in detail but fascinating in interest, I stood within ten feet o' a slab of pure silver two inches wide, which seemed to blaze from the vein like a flame in the grate frozen solid by the frosts of winter. That vein meandered back through the rock for 150 feet, and one could walk for that distance along a seam of silver. The pay streak will be stripped farther, of course, as development goes on.

But this is not all that this young prospector has unearthed. He and his partner, on four claims, can point out four other veins which carry silver in the same phenomenal values.

With the glamour of wealth in its native hills casting its spell upon me, I listened to Alfred L. Reeve tell of the memorable Aug. 4, 1908, when Gow Ganda, rival of Cobalt, was revealed to the world.

Two prospectors were sleeping upon a little point of rock about half way up the west shore of Lake Gow Ganda on August 4. They were Alfred L. Reeve and Samuel L. Doble. Throwing their blankets aside they rose and replenished the camp fire. After eating a few beans which they had left and picking the spare bones of a "Whiskey Jack" they prepared to strike into the woods on their last chance.

About 300 feet distant was another little camp fire, over which Charles Mann and Wilfrid Ryan boiled their tea in a dinged and blackened pail.

Reeve shouted across to the Ryan party: "Hope you find silver galore to-day, fellows," and Mann saluted back: "Same luck to you."

Both parties were then swallowed up by the forest.

That afternoon both struck rich veins of silver over a mile apart.

VENEZUELA SEEMS TO BE ABUSED

Acting President Will Uphold Country's Dignity.

FACTIONS DEMONSTRATIVE

Gomez Declares Country In a State of Defence and Says Capture by Holland of Vessel Alexis Is an Invasion and Act of Aggression—Castro's Friends Are Excited Over the Turn In Affairs.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 13, via Port of Spain, Dec. 15.—The news of the capture of the Venezuelan coast guard ship Alexis by the Dutch cruiser Gelderland on Saturday reached Caracas yesterday morning. A big crowd at once assembled in the Plaza Bolivar and demonstrated in support of the Government. A decree issued by acting President Gomez places the republic in a state of defence. The acting President tells of the seizure of the Alexis and continues:

"I consider these acts a true invasion of Venezuelan territory and an aggression against the Venezuelan Government. They constitute a grave offence. The national sovereignty is threatened and the territorial integrity, honor and dignity of the fatherland is in danger.

"I decree the nation in a state of defence, and consequently the Executive assumes and will exercise the extraordinary faculties conferred upon him by the Venezuelan constitution."

The news that the republic had been placed in a state of national defence against Holland ran through the city like wildfire, and in a few moments there was an enormous crowd in front of the Yellow House, the executive mansion, to greet acting President Gomez. Gomez made his way across the plaza to the Yellow House and was received with enthusiasm. The Yellow House was crowded with a numerous assemblage of the most distinguished citizens of Caracas.

Speeches were made demanding that all political prisoners be set at liberty and that the existing Government monopolies be abolished. Threatened danger from without had a double effect on the people; they demanded measures of protection, but at the same time they insisted upon the termination of one of the most unpopular courses of the Castro Administration, the maintenance of Government monopolies in the necessities of life.

Foreign Minister Paul made a speech in reply for the acting President. He exhorted the people to trust Gomez to solve the difficult problems confronting Venezuela to-day and prayed them to help him carry his burden of tremendous responsibility.

Meanwhile a crowd of citizens, including a large number of students, went to the office of El Constitutional, the organ of President Castro, and indulged in a counter-demonstration. The feelings of this crowd were plainly hostile to Castro and to the steps taken by Gomez. A pitched battle ensued between the employes of the paper and the crowd on the streets. Many shots were exchanged, and the fighting lasted for five minutes. Several men were wounded and one has since died. The police were summoned and appeared on the scene armed with rifles. The crowd then dispersed.

Greater Toronto.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—East Toronto with a population of 7,000, Deer Park with 4,000, and East Wychwood join the greater city to-day.

The City Council yesterday consented to the annexation of West Toronto with 12,336 population, Bracondale, and Wychwood with about 7,000 population.

Of all the populous suburbs only North Toronto remains outside the limits.

Greater Toronto has 338,813 people, and is growing at the average rate of 14,000 yearly. In ten years it will be a city of half a million.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—W. L. Mackenzie King left yesterday afternoon for New York, whence he sails on Wednesday for England by the Lusitania.

He is en route to Pekin to attend, as one of the British delegates, the international conference, which will consider means for the suppression of the opium traffic. He is accompanied by F. W. Giddens, his private secretary.

PARDON IS IMPROBABLE.

Dollman, Nolan and Walsh Will Stay In Prison.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—The reports that a number of Irishmen in Chicago have started a movement to ask Sir Wilfrid Laurier to intercede with the Governor-General to pardon the three Irishmen, Karl Dollman, John Nolan and John Walsh, who were given life sentences in Kingston for conspiracy to blow up the Welland Canal at Thorold in 1900, were brought to the attention of the Canadian authorities yesterday.

No hope was held out that the appeal would be granted, if only on the ground that in the appeal opportunity is taken to argue that the three convicts were "victims of the secret service system of Great Britain," and to allege that the men in question were "pigeons" of British detectives. This is treason and felony.

Dollman, whose real name is kept a secret by the officers of the crown, was leader of the clan in St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City, which was identified with the conspiracy. The attempt, as is well known, failed.

GOV. SWAYNE BAFFLED.

Realizes That Hindus Will Never Go With Him.

Vancouver, Dec. 15.—Col. Swayne, governor of British Honduras, came to the conclusion yesterday, that there is no chance of taking British Columbia Hindus to Honduras. He will leave for the east in a few days.

He is very strongly of opinion that even indigents should not be deported because of the bad effect the move would have on the unrest in India.

Col. Swayne will on his return to Ottawa enter into negotiations with the Dominion Government for an extension of the Elder-Dempster Steamship Co.'s service between St. John, N.B., south as far as Belize, capital of Honduras. Great quantities of fruit will be brought north as return cargoes. Flour and pork can be sent from Canada.

Three Treaties With U. S.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—Before the present session of Congress expires the State Department will submit to the Senate for ratification three treaties affecting Canada.

One will provide for the submission of the treaty of 1812 to The Hague tribunal for the purpose of discovering the respective rights of Canada, Newfoundland and the United States in the Atlantic fisheries. A second treaty will provide for the delimitation of all water boundaries, and will determine all questions relative to the ownership of rivers common to Canada and the United States, and to the use of Niagara Falls for power purposes.

The third treaty provides for the settlement of certain outstanding claims.

Perils of Workingmen.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Between 30,000 and 35,000 deaths and 2,000,000 injured is the accident record in the United States during the past year among workingmen, according to the Bureau of Labor.

The most exposed factory class are the workers in iron and steel. Fatal accidents among electricians and electric linemen and coal miners are declared to be excessive, while railway trainmen were killed in the proportion of 7.46 deaths per 1,000 employes.

Prince Regent's Position.

Pekin, Dec. 15.—Statutes fixing the official status of Prince Chun the Regent were published yesterday. The prince is given an annual salary of 150,000 taels, about $165,000, and is made commander-in-chief of both the land and sea forces of the empire.

The edict provides also that a palace be built for him near the site of the late Dowager's winter residence.

Waterbury, Conn., Dec. 15.—Governor-elect George L. Lilley announced yesterday the appointment of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., as an aide-de-camp on his staff, with the rank of major.

THE SENSATIONAL HAINES TRIAL BEGINS

Six Jurors Are Selected to Try Brother of Murderer.

MEANT TO DEPEND PETER

Defence of Author Charged With Being Accessory to Crime Will Be That He Drew His Revolver In Fear That Violence Would Be Done His Brother by the Crowd at the Club House Wharf.

Flushing, N.Y., Dec. 15.—When court adjourned last night, after two long sessions consumed in wearisome examinations of talesmen, six jurors sat in the jury box competent to try Thornton J. Hains, a short story writer, on charges of being an accessory to the killing of Wm. F. Annis, an editor, shot down at the Bayside Yacht Club last summer by Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., of the U. S. army.

Difficulties of securing a jury because of opinions formed of the case were apparent in the examination of talesmen, and Justice Crane last night directed a new panel of 100 talesmen to be drawn and a night session to be held. Justice Crane hopes that the trial may be concluded by the end of the week.

Interrogations of talesmen by Hains' counsel indicate that the defence will be based principally on the proposition that Thornton Hains, fearing that his brother's life was in jeopardy from the crowd at the clubhouse before the shooting of Annis, drew his revolver and held the crowd back. His act was one of defence and not of offence, according to his counsel.

John F. McIntyre, of counsel for Hains, announced last night that Hains would take the witness stand in his own defence. He will likely tell of those events at Fort Hamilton which led up to the separation of Capt. Hains and his wife, and to the tragedy at the Bayside Yacht Club. Mr. McIntyre will offer in evidence the alleged confession made by Mrs. Claudia Hains to her husband.

Thornton J. Hains took a lively interest in the examination of talesmen yesterday and frequently chatted and smiled with his counsel over some of the answers of prospective jurors.

After the adjournment of court he was manacled to a deputy sheriff and taken in an automobile to the Long Island jail. Gen. Peter Hains and Mrs. Hains, father and mother of the defendant, returned to New York following the afternoon session of court.

Police Save Healer.

Macomb, Ill., Dec. 15.—Declaring at a meeting Sunday night that the late President McKinley was an anarchist, that he had turned more people loose to prey upon society than any man in the world, and that the assassination of McKinley was all right except that it did not happen soon enough, the self-styled "Divine Healer" Schlatter, only escaped personal violence from a mob through intervention of the police.

The officers escorted Schlatter to an hotel and to the first train out of town, followed by citizens threatening to do him violence if he did not leave at once. Schlatter went to Quincy, Ill.

Stratford Church Dedicated.

Stratford, Dec. 15.—The magnificent new church of Zion Lutheran congregation, which was erected at a cost of $18,000 was formally dedicated Sunday. Rev. Mr. Hamfeldt and Rev. Mr. Stempfler of Toledo, Ohio; Rev. Mr. Conkle, Guelph; Rev. Mr. Gruhn, New Hamburg, and Rev. E. Hahn, Wellesley, assisted in the dedication. Rev. Dr. Gandier, principal of Knox College, preached the anniversary sermon at Knox Church.

Owe Ten Millions.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 15.—Declaring that David R. Francis, Murray Carleton, James Campbell, Judge Henry Priest, Brown Bros., of New York, and other stockholders of the St. Louis Transit Co. owe that corporation more than $10,000,000, as the result of the sale of the company's common stock in 1899, J. Brooks Johnson applies to the Circuit Court for a receiver for the company.

"Black Hand" Vengeance.

Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 15.—Following the receipt of threatening Black Hand letters, John Onelli and Antonia Rogers were attacked and terribly injured at Hastings, Pa., late Sunday night. Onelli was stabbed in the spine, causing paralysis, and Rodgers' eye was gouged out with a knife. Three Italians were arrested and identified.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—It is now certain that James A. Ellis, city treasurer, will be an Independent Conservative candidate in the Ottawa bye-election. Mr. Ellis has been three times mayor of Ottawa, and won for himself some reputation as a campaigner during the fight for public ownership of lighting, which he won.

THREE WINS FOR THE PACIFICS PUTS THEM IN SECOND PLACE

As the result of last week's campaign in the Peterborough Bowling League, the race has tightened up considerably, and the contest is becoming exciting. The Pacifics, by taking three games from the Examiner B, gained on the Bankers. The Men of Money dropped one to the Frontenacs on Monday night, and the Pacifics are now in second place, just one game behind the leaders. The Belmonts also improved their position by taking three from the Midgets, who were thereby ousted from second position and sent down the line to a tie for fourth place with Lockworks and Examiner A. The Iroquois bumped the unlucky Grays thrice and moved up into their notch with the Belmonts, while the Lockworks took two out of three from the Hams and climbed a little. The B. A. C. slumped, losing three to the Examiner A, who were thereby enabled to climb over their team mates, the B's into fourth position. The Examiner B's, Frontenac, Hams, Grays, B. A. C., and Midgets were the losers of the week.

TURF CLUB MATINEE HAS BEEN CHANGED TO CHRISTMAS DAY

The Turf Club has decided to change the date of their matinee from the 24th to Christmas afternoon. When arrangements were being made for this affair it was thought that it would be better to hold the matinee on the day before Christmas, but when the members of the committee commenced to sell tickets they were told that they should have chosen Christmas afternoon. It was stated that the people would be too busy on the 24th to attend the matinee, whereas there would not be much doing on the holiday. The Turf Club felt that most of the people would not like the races being held on Christmas day, but they found that the fact was exactly the reverse, and naturally decided to hold the matinee on the day on which the citizens would be able to attend. The track is being put in good shape and it is expected that some rattling heats will be seen.

TRACK AND FIELD CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED AT LOCAL Y.M.C.A.

Last night a very enthusiastic meeting was held in the Y. M. C. A. for the purpose of forming a track and field club.

Mr. C. E. Sisson acted as chairman, and made a few remarks on the necessity of such a club. He pointed out, that in the past very little had been done to promote athletics in this city, and very little encouragement was given to men who showed signs of developing into good athletes. He also said there was plenty of material to work on, and there was no reason why the Peterborough Y. M. C. A. could not produce some champions on track and field. Some of the best athletes in the city are members of the Y. M. C. A., as was shown by the recent Harriers' meet and the Examiner Road Race, and, no doubt, a strong club could be formed.

It was unanimously decided to form a club in the interests of athletics, and the club would be called the Y. M. C. A. Track and Field Club.

On account of the short notice that was given of the meeting for last night, it was decided that another meeting would be held on Thursday evening of this week, at 7.30 p. m., for the election of officers for the year.

The Physical Committee wish it understood that every member of the Y. M. C. A. who is interested in athletics, is cordially invited to attend the organization meeting on Thursday, and help by their presence and interest to foster this particular branch of sport.

Mr. G. Evans was elected secretary pro tem.

The Northern District May Play Senior This Year

Joe Hay, proprietor of the Peterborough Bowling Academy, while in Toronto yesterday, was talking over the hockey prospects with Secretary Hewitt, of the O. H. A., and that official stated that it was altogether probable that at to-night's meeting of the O. H. A., the executive would use their prerogative to form a new senior district, composed of Midland, Barrie, Orillia and Collingswood. These teams had decided to play intermediate, but it is likely that the executive will place them in the senior series. The other senior group will consist of T. A. A. A., Simcoes, Osgoode Hall and Kingston—Stratford having dropped to intermediate rank.

Big Race Takes Place In New York To-night

The eyes of the athletic world will to-night be turned on little old New York, where Tom Longboat, the Indian racing machine, and Dorando, the Italian runner, who made Johnnie Hayes look smaller than a piece of Limburgher after a German picnic will chase each other around Madison Square Garden for a little over 26 miles—to be precise 26 miles 385 yards. On this side of the border they can see nothing but Longboat and he will go to the tape to-night a favourite in the betting, although why it is hard to see, in view of the defeat the Indian suffered recently, at the hands of Smallwood. It looks rather like knocking home industries, but the swarthy little Italian looks like bad medicine from here and it would not cause much surprise if he breezed home a winner, although Longboat, if in shape, and his backers say he is, will give the Dago something to speculate over.

PHILLIPS DECIDES TO JOIN WHITCROFT'S SEVEN

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 14th—Tom Phillips, the highest-priced hockey player in Canada has accepted the terms of only play in the Stanley Cup matches against the Montreal Wanderers for the Stanley Cup.

Phillips, who leaves for the East to-day states positively that he will only play in the Stanley Cup matches returning to Vancouver again in January.

LAST NIGHT'S GAMES IN TOURNAMENT AT P.B.C. ALLEYS

That there is comparatively little difference when they are bowling in form between the tail-enders and the first division clubs in the ten pin league was evidenced in last night's fixture at the P.B.C. when the Grays and B.A.C. rolled three games that would have reflected credit upon any of the top clubs in the league ace. Both teams were in splendid form and furnished an exhibition that has seldom been excelled since the opening of the league. The work of the Grays was the real surprise of the night, the tailenders breaking their losing streak by capturing the second game by a five pin margin. They lost the first and final contests by a narrow margin and there was only a difference of 37 pins between the two in all three games.

The games were one and all of a close and exciting nature and the rooting was of a strenuous kind, the large number of enthusiasts present following the play with the keenest attention.

Bruce had the best score of the evening, but he had to extend himself to the limit to beat out Fred McFadden by seven pins, while Jack Sullivan was very close on the heels of the flying leaders.

To-night's programme will be a very attractive one and will bring together the Belmonts and Bankers in the first game of a double header. The Iroquois and Frontenacs will follow on the completion of the first game.

Last night's scores follow:

B. A. C.
McCrea	137	140	161	438
Best	154	175	132	461
Bruce	187	165	154	489
	478	480	447	1385
Grays
McFadden	169	163	147	479
Parker	122	140	139	401
Sullivan	134	162	141	437
	455	465	427	1347

Majority for B.A.C., 38 pins.

BASKET-BALL.

The local Y. M. C. A. are sending the following team to Lindsay to-night to play the senior aggregation of that place: Forwards, Henry Cressman, Max Dobbin; centre, P. Wallace, defence, George Martin, Norman Lees. The local boys are in good shape and expect to bring home the long end of the score.

TOM PHILLIPS TELLS A HOCKEY STORY OF WHITCROFT

The Edmonton Bulletin tells the following Tom Phillips story about Fred Whitcroft:—

Tommy Phillips, the noted hockey player who last season drew down the highest salary ever paid a hockey player in Canada when he got $1,000 for ten weeks' work with the Ottawa team, is probably the most sought after hockeyist in Canada to-day.

Phillips states now that he will not play hockey this year. If he adheres to this decision his retirement will be a distinct loss to the game. He was the best left wing that the great winter pastime ever saw. He is a marvellous stick-handler, a speedy skater and a remarkable shot, and it is no wonder that the most noted of that great Kenora Thistle team which once held the Stanley Cup should be so much in demand right now. Most of his old team-mates are still playing the game.

"Nibs," as Phillips was familiarly known, is a personal friend of Fred Whitcroft, who is captain of the Edmonton team on its Stanley cup invasion this winter, and last season, when the Ottawas were on the road, he used to relate some of Whitcroft's romances.

"Fred has his fellow Munchausen lashed to the third rail," ruminated Phillips. "He told us more hair-raising experiences than would fill a twenty-volume encyclopedia. Most of Whity's stories were of the Jesse James variety. Once he claimed he was playing for a team in Northern Ontario. The rink was about as big as a minute and there was a bundle of money as big as a hay stack on the game. Lots of blood was spilt, also some bad language and Whitty drove home the deciding game 10 seconds before full time. The crowd was so sore they went outside and shot half a ton of lead into the rink as well as being half shot themselves. Then the players thought it would be safer to slip out of the rink with as little noise as possible and used a snow chute for the purpose. The chute dropped them onto the frozen surface of a creek, and without waiting to get their clothes at the hotel all skated to the next town, ten miles away, and caught the train there. Fred was a dandy to make the time fly on long trips."

Draw Up Schedule To-morrow Night

There will be an important meeting to-morrow night, when the schedule for the season will be drawn up. Every club that intends to play in the League this season is asked to send representatives or else to arrange to be represented by proxy as no club will be included in the schedule unless it is represented.

At present it looks as if there will be seven teams in the League race—Fairfields, Belmonts, T.A.A.A., Y.M.C.A., Rough Riders, West Ends and Scratchonas.

Mercantile League Schedule For The Season

A meeting of the Mercantile League was held last night in the G. T. R. freight office, at which a large number were present. The following schedule was drawn up:

Jan. 4.—C. G. E. vs. Quakers.
Jan. 11.—Auburn vs. Ackermans.
Jan. 18.—G. T. R. vs. C. G. E.
Jan. 25.—Quakers vs. Auburns.
Feb. 1.—Ackermans vs. G. T. R.
Feb. 8.—C. G. E. vs. Auburns.
Feb. 15.—G. T. R. vs. Quakers.
Feb. 22.—Ackermans vs. C. G. E.
Mar. 1.—G. T. R. vs. Auburns.
Mar. 8.—Ackermans vs. Quakers.

HOCKEY

The Belmonts will have a strong team in the senior city league series and promise to make things lively for the rest of the outfit. The Belmonts have signed Rose, Myers and Thornton last year with the High Lifes; Harry Clarke, with Stratheonas last season; Wareham of the Rough Riders; Deyell, who has played the game in Port Hope, and who will be a candidate for goal, and other good men. They will take a lot of beating when they get into shape.

* * * *

The Chieftains had their first practice of the season last evening at the Brock street rink between six and seven o'clock, when a big bunch of players were out in uniform and a lively practice was indulged in. The Chieftains promise to cut a swath in the junior City League this season as they are going at a rapid clip and promise to be much faster than they were last year.

RUNNING.

The returns of the Dorando-Longboat race will be bulletined to-night at the Oriental.

Come to Many Peterboro' People

There are days of dizziness, spells of drowsiness, headache, sideache, backache.

Sometimes rheumatic pain after urinary trouble.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills.

Mrs. A. Graham, 547 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says: "My back was so weak and tender that I could not turn in my bed. A heavy dull pain had settled across the small of it and caused me almost constant suffering. I became weak and languid. I was run down generally and had little ambition to move around. Headaches were frequent and often accompanied by spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes and I would be unable to see. I had tried numerous remedies without getting results. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at McDermid & Jury's Pharmacy. I tried them and soon found relief. The kidneys were quickly regulated, and each and every symptom of kidney trouble was quickly cured. I am glad to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, as I believe them to be the best and most reliable of all kidney remedies." Sold by dealers. Price, 50 cents. The R. T. PHILOMATHEAN SOCIETY HOLDS DEBATE

Conclusion is That South Africa Offers More Advantages Than Australia.

The regular meeting of the Collegiate Institute Philomathean Society took place yesterday evening. The first item was the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, and a small amount of business was transacted. The programme proper opened with a delightful piano solo by Mr A. Primeau. Then followed a very interesting debate—Resolved that Australia offers more advantage to colonists than South Africa. The speakers of the affirmative were Miss K Leary and Mr. K. Corkery, and those on the negative were Mr. P. Smythe and Miss M. Anderson. All the speakers acquitted themselves most creditably, the judges deciding in favour of the negative. The next numbers were a vocal solo by Miss E. Jayes and a reading by Mr. Armstrong, both of which were heartily appreciated. The concluding item was the criticism by Mr. Pettit, and the meeting was then brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

The public buy "Salada" not alone for its superior flavour and drawing qualities, but because they know it to be absolutely cleanly and healthful; prepared and put up by machinery without the contamination of human handling.

REPEATED THEIR CONCERT LAST EVENING

Children of Separate Schools Won New Laurels.

Last night the Separate school children repeated their concert which they first presented on Friday night, and to an audience that filled every available seat in St. Peter's school hall. It was again demonstrated that the children's effort was the most entertaining that has ever been seen in the hall, and their teachers and friends may well feel proud of their ability. In the cantata, which is one of the numbers in the second part, Miss Marie O'Dette played the part of "Trixy" and Miss A. Milloy was "Teddy." This was one of the best numbers of the whole concert. One of the other surprises was the hidden band which supplied the music which seemed to be played by the children in one of the choruses. Theirs, however, were toy instruments.

CLOSING OF THE NORTH WARD SCHOOL

Prevalence of Scarlet Fever Causes This Action of School Board.

On account of the continued prevalence of the scarlet fever in the northern part of the city, the Board of Education have deemed it advisable to close the Queen Alexandra school for the balance of the term. Through fear of contagion a large percentage of the pupils has been kept at home during the past few days, and, as the school is disorganised on this account, and as the term ends within a week, it was thought wise to be on the safe side and to close the school.

When school re-opens in January, it is hoped that the epidemic will have disappeared, since the fever is of a very mild type.

FLAGMAN AT AYLMER STREET

C. P. R. Crossing Provided With Protection for Citizens.

Yesterday morning a flagman was stationed at Aylmer street crossing of the C. P. R., and that protection which the council and citizens have been continually petitioning for is now provided. The arrangements made with the Company or rather ordered by the Railway Board was that the city was to pay one-quarter of the cost. To a reporter yesterday the flagman stated that he did not know how long he was to be engaged. The city clerk wrote the C. P. R. on the advice of the council asking why they had not carried out their part of the affair and demanding that the protection be provided.

Examiner Special.

Hastings, Dec. 16.—The community sympathizes with Mr. Bert Gillespie, of Percy, in his loss, by fire on Wednesday last, of his house, barns, implements, etc. The fire started in the house and had gained considerable headway before it was discovered. Mr. Gillespie, with the assistance of one of his neighbours, succeeded in saving his stock, but lost almost everything besides. The insurance, which amounted to $2,400 does not nearly cover the loss.

The first local concert of the season was held on Friday night in the town hall. The local talent was assisted by Miss Julia Choate, violinist of Peterborough. The proceeds went to the building committee for the purpose of defraying the expenses in connection with the erection of new sheds at the Presbyterian Church.

The snow storm of Sunday was just sufficient to make sleigh-riding a great pleasure, and the merry ring of the sleigh bells reminds us that Xmas will soon be here again.

The many friends of Mr. J. A. Fife, of Edmonton, Alta., congratulate him on his appointment to the position of public school inspector of the Strathcona district. Mr. Fife is an old Asphodel boy, and is a brother of Mr. Duncan Fife here.

The regular meeting of the council was held on Friday, Dec. 4, at which several important items of business were transacted, and a number of accounts ordered to be paid.

Mr. Duncan Fife attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. W. Drummond, on Saturday, the 5th.

Several entertainments have recently been given in this vicinity under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. May. The concerts have been fairly well patronized, and consisted of moving pictures, stereopticon views and illustrated songs. One set of pictures which were particularly admired were scenes from the "Life of Christ," representing His journey from the manger to the tomb.

The residence of Mr. J. Hore, which has been undergoing a complete renovation is again ready for occupation, and the family are getting comfortably settled in their new quarters.

Percy township has lost one of its oldest settlers in the person of Mr. John Brooks, who passed away at his home on Wednesday last, Dec. 9, at the ripe age of 76 years. Mr. Brooks is survived by a number of sons and daughters, who mourn the loss of a kind and loving father.

Considerable excitement was created Thursday last, when a constable from Toronto, and the chief from Port Hope, came into town in search of a horse thief. The thief was traced to a farm-house nearby, where both he and the stolen animal were captured. The owner of the horse came on the scene and identified the animal as his property. The thief, who gave his name as George Brown, was arrested and placed in custody awaiting his trial.

AN ORANGEMAN FOR 72 YEARS

Death This Morning of Mr. Wm. Hiram Moore at Residence of His Son—Captain of Royal Engineers at One Time.

FUNERAL AT GANANOQUE

At the ripe old age of eighty-nine years, there passed away this morning at six o'clock, Mr. William Hiram Moore, at the residence of his son, 191 King street. The deceased was born at Clarendon, Que., on May 4th, 1819. He spent thirty years of his life at Gananoque, and has only been residing in Peterborough for the past year.

Mr. Moore belonged to a family prominent in the early history of Eastern Canada, and which at one time were the owners of four townships in Quebec, to the north-west of Hull. These four, which included the present town of Hull, were colonized by the Moores. About the time of the burning of the Parliament Buildings at Montreal, Mr. Wm. Moore went to that city and was drafted into the Royal Engineers, and later became their captain. His father was a Colonel in the British Army.

Surviving the deceased are two sons, N. A. Howard Moore, 191 King street, city; Wm. Howard Moore, Vancouver, B.C.; and two daughters: Mrs. James Darragh, Ottawa; and Mrs. Henry Hill, Lansdowne, B.C. His wife pre-deceased him 36 years ago, but he has one brother, George, now residing at New Orleans, La.

He was an Orangeman for 72 years having joined on July 12th, 1836.

The funeral was held this afternoon at 13.30 o'clock to the G.T.R. Station, the remains being sent to Gananoque for burial.

INSURANCE AGENCY

—T. O. Rush, general insurance broker, represents the foremost companies in the world in their respective lines. In fire insurance the Liverpool, London and Globe and the Hartford of Connecticut; in the life department, the Sun Life of Canada, the most progressive, giving better returns to its policy holders than any other company on the American continent. In accident insurance, the Utopia of Perth, Scotland, the wealthiest company the world knows, issuing a policy that no other company assumes to issue. With the representation of this strong combination, Mr. Rush feels that with confidence, he can defy competition upon fair and just lines, without having to resort to misrepresentation to secure business.

Vice-President: Herb Dicks.
Rec. Sec.: Wm. Stevens (re-elected).
Fin. Sec.: H. H. Hillier (re-elected).
Treasurer: J. J. Hartley (re-elected).
Tyler: George Smith.
Deputy: Wm. Moore.
Alternate: B. M. Frederick.
Auditors: J. J. Goodwin and Jas. Wilson.

The Union is in better shape to-day than it has ever been, and the outlook for the coming year is decidedly bright.

FIRE ON THE BESSIE BUTLER WAS SPEEDILY EXTINGUISHED

Fire broke out last night in the kitchen room of the government steamer "Bessie Butler," doing damage to the extent of from 950 to $100. The "Bessie Butler" just concluded her work of repairing booms between Lakefield and Young's Point and other upper lake work, and was to have been tied up to-day. About eight o'clock yesterday evening, two of the crew who were on board, noticed the fire and hastened to extinguish it. This was speedily done before any serious loss was sustained.

Forty Dollars And Costs For "Beating Up" His Companion

The aftermath of the fracas on Saturday night on the road in the long swamp this side of Bridgenorth, was a police court case this morning, in which Magistrate Edmison imposed a fine of forty dollars and costs, which was paid in court. The charge was laid by Mr. George Cochrane, who had been informed of the affair at a late hour Saturday night. The second party to the fight was present, bearing more than one memento of the fray through which he had passed. There was a cut under his right eye and the left was badly discoloured. There was also a scratch under one of his ears. It is stated that the scene of the scuffle had many blood spots, which were seen in the snow on Sunday morning.

Only the evidence of the two young men was heard. The wrangle was the outcome of the upsetting of the cutter in which they were driving home. It was stated that there was no evidence to show that the defendant had used a knife.

ANOTHER SECTION OF TRENT VALLEY CANAL UNDER CONTRACT

The Dominion Government's promise to push to completion the work on the Trent Canal is rapidly being fulfilled. During the past year tenders have been called for and contracts let for several sections, and the last to be let is Number 7, Ontario-Rice Lake Division. This section extends from Rice Lake to Healey Falls, a distance of about twenty miles. The contract is to Mr. Randolph MacDonald, Toronto who also has the Rosedale section to the north.

Section No. 7 includes the construction of a dam and lock at Hastings, new guide piers at the G. T. R. bridge above Hastings, a swing bridge and guide piers at the Narrows (Trent Bridge), and the dredging of the Trent River from Hastings to Healey Falls to produce a 9-foot draught. The work will likely begin in the near future and will give employment to a considerable number of men.

With the letting of this contract there remain only two—Numbers 4 and 6—on the Ontario-Rice Lake Division, that have yet to be tendered upon. The surveys have, of course, been made on these and plans are under preparation by the engineers. No 6 will be advertised in January, and it is expected that within the next six months the whole canal, from Rice Lake to Trenton, will be under contract.

Charivari Followed Nuptials At Otonabee Home Last Night

One of the consequences of a wedding in the country is a charivari. It is something not often heard of in the cities. Yesterday there was a wedding not far from the city in the township of Otonabee and last night some of the young blood determined on a charivari and equipped with tin pans, and other noise producers they gave an impromptu entertainment in front of the home of the newlyweds—at least they entertained themselves for the babal of sounds might be anything but pleasant to an audience. The young people were invited in and treated to good things and after the festivities returned to their homes.

STARTS TO WORK AT EARLY HOUR

Canadian Cordage Co. Have Three Hours to Use Electric Power When Demand is Light.

The working hours for the employees of the Canadian Cordage Company still number ten, but a change has been made in order to use the electric power when the load is as light as possible. Work is begun these days at 5.30 in the morning and the day is over at four o'clock, the business man's hour. One half hour at dinner time instead of the usual hour and the regular day's work is completed. The half hour is from 11 to 11.30, as it has been learned, and from this arrangement it may be seen that the Cordage Works has three hours during the day when the demand for electric power is at a minimum.

DESERVING FUND NOT YET ENTIRE

Generosity of Citizens Appealed to on Charitable Grounds.

During the last few days the donations to the fund which Mr. F W. Miller has charge of have been coming in rather slowly, and, it is hoped that any of those who intend to assist the family for whom it is being collected, will hand in their subscriptions at once. This fund was begun by a number of prominent ladies who have been frequently interested in charitable work, and it was at their request that Mr. Miller undertook to receive all contributions. Every one who is acquainted with the case has acknowledged that it is a most deserving one and it is for that reason that it should receive the support of the generous citizens of this city. There has already been received over $50, and about $40 is yet necessary in order to send this family back to their old home in England where the father expects to stave off the tubercular disease that is fast claiming him.

ENTERTAINS MEMBERS OF THE CLUB

Mr. E. Tisdall Was Host at Supper to the Fresh Air Club.

An enjoyable time was spent last night by the members of the Fresh Air Club, (F.A.C.) when they were entertained by Mr. Everett Tisdall, one of their number. The affair took the form of a supper at Tisdall's restaurant and all the members of the club were present. The spread was a delightful one and in every detail appealed to the young men. When all due justice had been done the delicacies a toast list was honoured, speeches being made by Messrs. Richardson, Newton Hopkins and Walter Godfrey. Before dispersing a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Tisdall for the enjoyable evening he had provided.

RAISED THE RAILWAY GATES

Pedestrian Almost Caused Accident by His Act.

The danger of raising railway gates after they have been lowered by the gateman because a pedestrian may be in a hurry to continue on his way, was demonstrated on Simcoe street the other evening. A man was going down the street with two women and was stopped by the gates which were down while one train was going by. When they were not at once raised the man lifted them himself and passed over the tracks and though another was following close behind. A horse and sleigh passed under the gates as soon as they were lifted and narrowly escaped the second engine. The gateman had to quickly raise the other gates to let the driver pass through. The gateman states that this is an offence which the law deals with and wishes it understood that any further actions of this kind will mean trouble for the parties that do them.

TO STIMULATE EXPORT TRADE

The department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, with a view of extending the foreign trade of Canada, brings itself into relations with the public, in order to secure suggestions which will facilitate the attainment of the object aimed at. A circular is being issued, with a request for suggestions, in reply to the following questions:

(a) What would you advise should be done to increase the export trade of Canada?

(b) What improvement or change do you think desirable in the compilation of the trade statistics published by this Department?

(c) Can you suggest any improvement in the collection and publication of commerce at information received from the Trade Commissioners?

As far as possible the suggestions should be accompanied by statements showing the reasons therefor. Should there be any general information which it may be thought desirable to communicate to the Department and which is not covered by the above questions, the information will be welcomed.

"A FLAGRANT EVIL."

It is somewhat refreshing to find a newspaper that assumes not only to represent, but to dominate a great political party, both finding fault with the conduct of its party leaders and accusing them of methods which it does not hesitate to characterize as "wrong and disgusting."

The Globe is so greatly concerned about the maintenance of political morality that it even suggests a resort to the infamous system that once prevailed in France, the use of les agents provocateurs for the "detection and punishment of such crime." It is amazing that with the evidence that is in the hands of every reading man of the province, of the prostitution of a secret service paid by the public for the enforcement of law, but really used by a party organization for its own purposes, a newspaper that has really a regard for public morality should suggest that the system of spies, sneaks and informers now in the pay of the Government at Toronto, should be extended so as to introduce its objectionable and deteriorating influence into the conduct of Dominion elections.

When Parliament, disgusted at practices that for many years were the means of maintaining the Conservative party in power, placed upon the statute books the present law regarding the purity of elections, it acted simply from one point of view, and in its excess of zeal for a righteous purpose, did not take into fair consideration the interests of honest men and guiltless communities, who, under its sweeping and far-reaching definitions, are compelled to see innocent acts, wholly devoid of any corrupt or improper motive, distorted into what the Globe calls "electoral crime."

It is a fact, to any fair mind incontrovertible, and established by the precedents of courts, that a candidate for Parliament, having every desire to conduct his election not only with propriety, but within the limits of the law, finds himself at the mercy of any hypocritical rascal or of any injudiciously zealous friend, whose acts of ordinary hospitality in the course of common intercourse, when they come under the purview of the courts, are regarded as corrupt acts and the party in question is created by the court an "agent" of the respondent, without any possible warrant in fact.

The controverted election law needs an amendment so that in its practical operation it shall not be open to vexatious and frivolous use, by men who do not aim at justice, but seek to gratify a private malice or a political animosity.

Not only should those trivial acts that belong to ordinary intercourse between decent people, be written off the statute, for they do not and cannot either influence the results of an election, or by any possibility actually constitute any form of bribery, but the power should be taken out of the hands of perverse and unscrupulous persons, to abuse the intention of the law and impugn the integrity of an election and the good name of a constituency through an information under what is described as the "general terms of the act."

By the laws governing ordinary crimes and misdemeanours, no man can have his liberty or his reputation assailed by vague and indeterminate accusation or assertion before a magistrate, that some irresponsible or malicious person "is informed and believes" that he has been guilty of a breach of some of the laws on the statute books. A specific offence has to be charged in order to give any complainant, honest or dishonest, a standing in court.

Why should those who in the wisdom of their neighbours, or in the pursuit of a proper and laudable ambition, are chosen as representatives of the people in Parliament, be deprived of a safeguard that is extended to the meanest offender against the law?

Take the case of the protest against the return of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the city of Ottawa. The Conservative leaders and the Conservative press not only accepted the situation gracefully, but were even pronounced in acknowledgment that the result was a fair expression of the will of the great majority, and for the best interests of the constituency. Yet an obscure individual, without responsibility in the public life of the Capital, is enabled, under the law as it stands, to challenge the seat of Canada's greatest statesman, and the fair fame of our capital city under "the general terms of the act." Sir Wilfrid Laurier's legal representative in responding to this petition, among other objections, presented this:

"The petitioner had no reason to believe, and did not, in fact, believe, that the several allegations, or any, contained in the petition were true when the petition was presented.

"The petition was not presented in good faith, is false and malicious, is an abuse of the process of this court, and is purely vexatious, intended solely to harass the respondent."

This description accurately and properly defines the character of nine out of ten of the election protests. They are not intended nor expected to promote purity, but to gratify disappointed ambition or personal malice. The credit of the country abroad and the standard of morality at home, are being hurt by these wholesale and, as we believe, unfounded accusations of political immorality, made for the most part by men who have made unsuccessful attempts to utilize the reprehensible weapon which in defeat they attempt to direct against opponents who have been honoured with public confidence.

What the country appears to need, to deal with the situation in an effective way, upholding electoral purity by every reasonable safeguard, is not, as the Globe suggests, a system of public spies as now exists under the misuse of the provincial license act, but an amelioration of the law, so that the acts of courtesy and civil communication between man and man shall not be falsely construed as corrupt acts, and the requirement that no member chosen by the vote of the people for any constituency, shall have his seat impugned or the reputation of his constituency assailed, upon any information that does not make specific and precise declaration in respect of any illegal acts alleged.

Campbellford Appeals to Ottawa—Prospects for Alberta Development—Fenian Conspiracy Experience Revived—London Times Apologizes for Libelling Canada

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, December 16th—A deputation representing the Board of Trade the town Council and the manufacturing interests of Campbellford waited on the Minister and Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals yesterday afternoon with respect to the route of the Trent Valley Canal through the town. Their views as to the best location for the canal were laid before Hon Mr Graham and Mr Butler and a decision will be made in a few days.

Premier Rutherford and Attorney-General Cross of Alberta are in Ottawa on a private mission. In the course of an interview to-day Premier Rutherford declared the intention of his Government to urge a vigorous policy of railway construction to open up the vast areas of good agricultural lands north of Edmonton. During the past autumn, he said, over 2,300 homesteads had been taken in Alberta and Saskatchewan as a result of the Western Lands Act passed at the last session of Parliament.

The reports that a number of Irishmen in Chicago have started a movement to ask Sir Wilfrid Laurier to intercede with the governor-general to pardon the three Irishmen, Karl Dollman, John Nolan and John Walsh who were given life sentences in Kingston for conspiracy to blow up the Welland canal at Thorold in 1900, were brought to the attention of the Canadian authorities yesterday. No hope was held out that the appeal would be granted, if only on the ground that in the appeal opportunity is taken to argue that the three convicts were "victims of the secret service system of Great Britain", and to allege that the men in question were "pigeons" of British detectives This is treason and felony Dollman, whose real name is kept a secret by the officers of the Crown was leader of the clan in St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City, which was identified with the conspiracy. The attempt, as is well known, failed.

Hon. S. N. Parent, chairman of National Transcontinental Railway Commission received this morning a cable from Sir Charles Russell, Canada's legal agent in London, stating that the London Times in response to complaints entered by the Commission through Sir Charles had published the following retraction under the heading, 'The Canadian Elections' 'Our attention has been called by Hon. Simon T Parent, K.C. the chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission of Canada, to a certain cable sent by one of our Canadian correspondents, and appearing in the Times of Oct. 24th, and the Mail of Oct. 26th, 1908. We desire to say that this message was not intended to convey the slightest reflection upon the Commissioners or on their integrity: we, ourselves, do not regard the despatch as containing any such reflection, and we regret that any body should put any such construction upon it."

HOW TO CURE A HEADACHE

To attempt to cure a headache by taking a "headache powder," is like trying to stop a leak in the roof by putting a pan under the dripping water. Chronic headaches are caused by poisoned blood. The blood is poisoned by tissue waste, undigested food and other impurities remaining too long in the system. These poisons are not promptly eliminated because of sick liver, bowels, skin or kidneys.

If the bowels do not move regularly—if there is pain in the back showing kidney trouble—if the skin is sallow or disfigured with pimples—it shows clearly what is causing the headache.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure headaches because they cure the cause of headaches. "Fruit-a-tives" act directly on the three great eliminating organs—bowels, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" keep the system free of poisons. "Fruit-a-tives" come in two sizes—25c and 50c. If your dealer does not have them write to Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CHRONIC CATARRH NOSE AND THROAT

"At the Advice of Friends I Tried Peruna and the Results Have Been Highly Satisfactory." — So Writes Mr. Pilon.

MR. RAOUL PILON, 116 Rue Notre Dame, Lachine, P. Q., Can., writes:

"I write you a few words to express to you my satisfaction at being cured. I was afflicted with catarrh of the throat and nose and suffered much. I was greatly discouraged. I had a bad breath and a bad taste in my mouth in the morning.

"I took treatment for some time without obtaining relief. At the advice of friends I tried the Peruna and the results have been highly satisfactory. At the end of four months I was completely cured."

Neglected catarrh becomes chronic. Having developed into the chronic stage, a longer and more persistent treatment will be required to cure it than if the disease were treated at the onset.

However, Peruna generally brings relief, whether the catarrh is acute or chronic. If you are wise you will keep Peruna on hand and take a few doses at the first appearance of a cold or cough, and thus perhaps save yourself both suffering and expense.

Peruna is recognized the world over as a standard remedy for catarrh. A multitude of people have been benefited by it.

Many Patients Treated for Consumption at Muskoka Hospital Free of Cost —A Worthy Object.

STAMPS AT RICHARD HALL'S

Miss Halliday of the local branch of The King's Daughters has received a communication from Mrs. M. S. Savage, Toronto, the Provincial Secretary, referring to the sale of Christmas stamps in aid of the Muskoka Free Hospital, which was referred to editorially in yesterday's Examiner. The communication in part says—

The object of this Christmas Stamp Campaign is to raise money for the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives which has cared for a large number of patients from all parts of Canada, a large proportion of them being treated entirely free of cost. No patient has ever been refused admission to this Hospital because of his or her inability to pay, and because of this fact it is felt that a liberal response should be made from the various circles appealed to. There are no other Institutions in Canada except those conducted by the National Sanitarium Association where patients suffering from Tuberculosis are treated free, and perhaps you may be aware, the Hospitals in the various cities throughout Canada refuse to receive consumptives in the public wards.

The Muskoka Free Hospital has accommodation for 75 patients. Many more applications are received than there is accommodation for. What occurs in such a case is the applicant's name is put on the waiting list, and is admitted as soon as there is a vacant bed.

It is the intention to devote the money raised from the sale of the stamps to increase accommodation for needy patients, and thus admit applicants more promptly.

The stamps will be on sale at Messrs. Richard Hall & Sons, in charge of two of the King's Daughters on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

AFRAID OF CARRIE.

English Temperance Movement Disapproves of Her Tactics.

London, Dec. 16.—The English prohibitionists have decided not to associate themselves with Carrie Nation, ostensibly because she confines her action to saloons, while they aim at the whole drink traffic, from the manufacture downwards, but actually because they fear the risks her tactics involve.

Mrs. Carrie Nation arrived at Glasgow Monday to carry on her usual campaign against intemperance, cigarette smoking and other things of which she does not approve. She was greeted by 3,000 persons, most of them hostile, whose hooting made the cheers of her supporters inaudible.

Her first assault was on a hotel adjoining the railway station, where, hurrying to the bar, she accosted a barmaid with, "You're going to hell." The barmaid's reply is not recorded.

As the crowd continued to increase and was evidently in a mischievous humor, Carrie went to her rooms at a temperance hotel and kept herself secluded from those she knew were not supporters of her antics. Her business was postponed until later.

Vancouver, Dec. 16.—At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon federal immigration officials allowed Emma Goldman to cross the boundary line at Blaine, having first ascertained, however, that the American officials would take her back to Washington State at any time she wished to go.

Boils and Pimples

Are caused entirely by the blood being in an impure condition, and the quickest and simplest way to get rid of them is to take a few bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This purely vegetable remedy has cured thousands of cases of these painful and unsightly troubles during the past thirty years.

BOILS.

Mr. S. J. Weir, Riverview, Ont., writes:—"Last summer I had nineteen boils on my neck and back. I was off work for over two weeks. I took everything I could think of but to no effect. I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters and before I had used half the bottle the boils were gone. I took the rest of it, however, and I have not had a boil since."

PIMPLES.

Mrs. W. J. Crandon, St. Mary's, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with pimples on my face for a couple of years and tried a good deal of patent medicine, but they were not of much use. Finally I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and am now entirely cured."

King In Cordial Mood.

London, Dec. 16.—King Edward left here for Brighton yesterday, his appearance indicating that he had practically recovered from his recent attack of influenza. He will remain at the seaside resort until about Dec. 21 when he goes to Sandringham for the holidays. By that time he expects to have fully regained his health.

As he boarded the train yesterday His Majesty chatted pleasantly with the railroad officials on the platform and cordially acknowledge the salutations of his fellow passengers.

His eye was bright, his step brisk, and he gave every indication of rapid convalescence.

Phonograph as Witness.

Pittsburg, Dec. 16.—Through the testimony of a phonograph record, C. A. Rumstay was yesterday held for trial on a charge of assault and battery. The complaint was made by John E. Hinds on behalf of his wife. Hinds declared that the screams of his wife were recorded on a blank record that had been placed in the machine to reproduce a piano solo which a lady friend of hers was playing. The record was admitted as evidence. It is remarkably clear and the voices can be easily distinguished.

Noise Fiend Still Free.

New York, Dec. 16.—Because the anti-noise ordinance bylaw adopted by the board of aldermen in response to persistent popular clamor does not contain sufficient stringent provisions for the curbing of the evil, Mayor McClellan vetoed it yesterday afternoon.

The ordinance contained provisions relating to flat wheels, loose trucks, and other evils, but did not mention other sources of constant annoyance, such as the carting of steel girders, etc., through the streets.

Perley Denies It.

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—George H. Perley, M.P. for Argenteuil, says he knows nothing about the story which comes from Montreal to the effect that he is one of the four Conservatives who have formed a pool to finance the protests filed in Toronto against certain Liberal members of Parliament, Sir Wilfrid Laurier included.

Huge Revenue From Tobacco.

Paris, Dec. 16.—The French nation last year consumed $100,000,000 worth of tobacco, upon which the Government made a profit of $75,000,000.

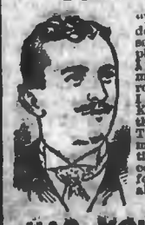
VARICOCELE CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.



"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers know of your valuable treatment.

PRESIDENT EXPLAINS THE BY-LAW

What the City Obtains by Purchasing the Fair Grounds.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Our municipal elections will soon be upon us, and the Peterborough Industrial Fair directors are very anxious that the electors should understand why they are asked to vote on a by-law to buy the exhibition grounds.

Now Mr. Editor, we don't ask the city to purchase those grounds for exhibition purposes alone, but what we ask is that the city purchase the grounds for recreation purposes and allow the fair directors a place to erect suitable buildings.

At the present time we have the fair grounds under a short lease, subject to three months' notice in case of sale.

We have now arrived at a time when the management of our fair must have good buildings to meet their requirements and worthy of the city of Peterborough, and I ask all fair-minded citizen, would the board be justified in spending any money on grounds which they don't own, and might never get using more than the present year.

We have had two successful years with our fair and have now a nice balance to our credit, and as a board we feel that if the city will purchase grounds where we will have a permanent place to erect on, that before our next fall fair, the directors will spend a large amount in suitable buildings to accommodate the stock and poultry, also to allow our merchants a place to make exhibits, as they are very anxious to do.

Now, Mr. Editor, what we want the citizens of Peterborough to do is to carry this by-law by their votes, to purchase the present grounds, as the investment is considered good. Mr. Morrow has already received an offer from a real estate dealer of twenty-six thousand dollars—$26,000.

By extending George street south across the property and holding the western portion, which is the cheapest part—for park purposes, and the eastern part, which is worth the most money, to be sold in building lots, then there would be a large amount of the purchase money returned from their sale.

If there is any information the citizens would like to have I will be pleased to give it to them.

Yours very truly,
R. H. LEARY,
President of Peterborough Industrial Fair.

A DIFFERENCE IN THE PRICE OF BEEF

A Considerable Overheard on the Market This Morning—Which Was the Best to Buy.

It was on the market this morning There were a number of sleighs of beef and purchasers were passing and repassing inquiring about the price. One man stopped in front of a load of fine looking beef and was told that it was six cents a pound. "Why I can get it for less than that" he remarked, and went on down the row. Finally he came back again saying "I told you you were too high. I got a quarter for five cents a pound." "You have, eh," the first butcher replied," and have you got meat worth taking home and are you sure that the weight is what is marked", and then he went on to show that often those who sell low are under weight sufficient to make up for the difference in price. "For" he said, "I can buy just as cheaply as the next, but I could not make a copper if I sold at five cents and give exact weight." The purchaser sort of pooh-hooed the idea but he was not sure that he got such a bargain after all.

OBITUARY.

THOMAS JOHNSTON

The death occurred on Sunday evening of an old and very highly respected resident of Otonabee in the person of Mr. Thomas Johnston, who passed away at the residence of his son, Mr. W D Johnston, lot 28, concession 9.

The deceased was 83 years of age, and was born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland. He came to this country at the age of twenty-one years. He did not settle in Otonabee until three years later, in 1854. Previous to that he resided a short while in New York State and then in Durham county. In 1854 he was married to Margaret Dundas. She predeceased him fifteen years ago. He was widely known and highly respected by all who knew him.

Two sons and one daughter are left to mourn his loss. The sons are Messrs. W D and T. J. Johnston, and the daughter is Mrs. Christopher, all residing in Otonabee.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon from lot 26, concession 9, Otonabee, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

MR. ALEXANDER STEWART

The death took place in Otonabee this morning of Mr. Alexander Stewart, at the age of 61 years, after an illness of about a year. He was born in Ireland on Nov. 9th, 1847, and came to Canada a few years later. Since then he has always resided in Otonabee on lot 13, concession IV. He was married there twenty-seven years ago to Miss Fanny Matchett, daughter of the late Robert Matchett, who still survives him. There are three sons and two daughters all living at home. The sons are Melville, Livingstone, Dalton, and the daughters are Clara and Blanche. Mr. Stewart was a well-to-do farmer and very much respected by all who knew him.

The funeral will be held on Friday from the residence of the deceased, at 2 p.m. to Little Lake Cemetery.

MR. JOHN IRWIN

This morning at an early hour, Mr. John Irwin died at his rooms over the post office, at the age of 73 years. Mr. Irwin was a shoemaker by trade, in his early days, but has been the caretaker of the post office ever since it was built. It will be remembered that Mrs. Irwin died just seven months ago, and the sad occurrence this morning makes the second death within the year. He was one of the veterans of the Fenian Raid, in 1866. Three sons and two daughters survive him. The sons are, Fred, John and Robert, all living in the city, and the daughters are, Mrs. James Lillico, of North Monaghan, and Mrs. F. Derrick, of this city. Mr. Irwin was an old resident here and the family have the sympathy of the whole community in their sad bereavement. The funeral will be held on Friday at 2 p. m., from the post office to the Little Lake Cemetery.

ZAM-BUK AS A CURE FOR PILES

Impressive Cures of Women Sufferers—Our Readers Should Note These Cases.

Wherever there is suffering from piles, Zam-Buk should be applied! There are lots of reasons for this, but one of the best is that in practically all cases of piles where the use of Zam-Buk is persevered with complete cure—not mere relief—is the result.

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, of 253 Hochelaga street, Hochelaga, Montreal, says :—"I suffered from blind, itching and protruding piles for years. Sometimes they were so bad that I could hardly bear to move about. The inflammation, the burning smarting pain, the throbbing, the aching, the overpowering feeling of dullness and dark despair when this ailment brings, the shooting spasms of agony—all were so terrible that only sufferers from this awful ailment can understand!"

Bad as this case was, Zam-Buk triumphed, and Mrs. Hughes suffers no longer. It needed a little perseverance with Zam-Buk certainly, but in the end it cured!

Mrs. E. Boxall, of Scott street, St. Thomas, says :—"For months without cessation I endured great pain from bleeding piles. For as many months I tried everything which I thought would give me ease, but in the end, dispirited and still suffering, I gave in."

Then it was she heard of Zam-Buk, and she adds :—"Although I feared Zam-Buk would be like the ordinary remedies — useless! — I am glad it was not. It soon proved itself to be very different. It rapidly gave me relief, and after a time cured me completely. I would like to let all sufferers from piles know what a grand thing Zam-Buk is."

So one could go on quoting case after case, and it is by working such cures that Zam-Buk has earned for itself its great reputation.

Now if you suffer from this terribly painful ailment just be guided by the foregoing cases!

For internal piles melt a little Zam-Buk and thoroughly soak a wad, made of clean but old linen. Then apply to the part. If the piles are external, application of Zam-Buk is still more simple. Do it upon retiring. Next morning you will be satisfied!

Zam-Buk is a cure also for cold-sores and chapped, cracked hands, ulcers, festering sores, blood poisoning, eczema, bad leg, ringworm, scalp sores, burns, scalds, and all skin diseases and injuries.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c a box, or may be obtained post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price; 3 boxes for $1.25. You are warned, however, against cheap and dangerous imitations sometimes offered as being "just as good."

A SPLENDID ANNUAL CONCERT

Held at Knox Church Last Night—Solos, Quartettes, Violin and Bagpipes.

GLEE CLUB'S SELECTIONS

The second annual concert held in Knox Church on Tuesday night was a great success, there being a large attendance. All the numbers on the programme were very good indeed. The Glee Club led by Mr. Common sang two excellent selections. The male quartette also, consisting of Messrs. Walton, Biggs, Zepp and Black, sang very well and received well deserved encores. The solos without exception were well rendered, the vocal selections by both ladies and gentlemen proving a great pleasure to the audience. Dr. Park on the violin and Mr. F. S. McKay on the bagpipes were the only instrumental numbers of the evening and great praise is due these gentlemen for the way they rendered Scotch, Irish and Yankee airs.

Mr Greenhalgh sang and gave a very humourous sketch on phrenology and Mr. Coleman sang a song in costume. The following was the programme—

BRONCHITIS VICTIM

Little Daughter of Mrs. Hastings of Fitchburg Suffered for Years—Could Not Attend School Winters.

COMPLETELY CURED BY VINOL

"For many years my little daughter suffered from bronchitis. Every winter she was out of school more than she was in, until at last I had to take her out of school entirely. We had one of the best doctors in the city, and while he would bring her out of the acute attacks all right, they kept occurring. At last she got so very bad that it did not seem as though she could stand any more spells. Knowing that Vinol had cured my little nephew of congestion of the lungs I decided to try it for my daughter. I did so and could soon see a great difference. She took four bottles in all and it has completely cured her. That was a year ago and she has not had an attack of bronchitis since and seems strong and well." Mrs. J. E. Hastings, Fitchburg, Mass.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains tonic iron together with all of the healing, medicinal and body-building elements of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cods livers—but no oil to upset the stomach and retard its work. It does not taste of oil and children love it.

If Vinol fails to benefit any case for which it is recommended we will refund every cent paid us for it. That's your guarantee; we know it will do you good. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner of George and Charlotte streets, also Payne's Drug Store corner of George and Simcoe streets.

SUGGESTS NEW SITE FOR THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS

A Communication From Pro Bono Publico on the Question.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir.—I beg of you a little of your space to write a few words commendatory of the city's proposal to buy grounds for a permanent Exhibition. But I must differ on the idea that the proposed grounds would ever be a permanent site for the exhibition. These grounds have continually been spoken of as a good speculation anyway. Well, this city is not looking for speculations but the ratepayers I believe would vote for a suitable permanent site.

The ideal site for these grounds is on the bank of the Otonabee and let us have them big enough for all park purposes, including the street railway and in keeping with our idea of the future greatness of our city. This location would give us four times the area for one-third of the cost of the site to be voted on. This would be proper foresight and money in our pocket. This Monaghan location on the river bank would be very convenient of access for all lines of rail and for boat, and would be a place of enjoyment for our people the whole year round which the present grounds could never be.

It has been said we must secure the present grounds because of the race track. The best asset of that track is its sandy foundation, and as the foundation is better further down, a good track can be built on it for a very small expenditure.

Should we not, just for the present, require a portion of the large park I have proposed, the unused portion would bring us in enough rents to carry the expenditure.

As to the distance—two miles or a little over, from the post office—this is nothing to anyone who has confidence in his city, and why should not we all have instead of letting this virtue be a monopoly of the West, with not half the advantages.

The Hilliard farm was a good investment, and this would be a better.

I urge the general public to write short letters on this matter and let us know the general opinion.

Yours sincerely,
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Peterborough, Dec. 16.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF

From Coughs, Colds, Sore Throats and Hoarseness by Using Hyomei.

When you catch cold you want to get rid of it as quickly as you can. You don't want to lie around the house for a week swallowing nauseating drugs.

Why not avoid all this? Why not relieve your cold in five minutes? Why not cure it over night? You can do it by using Hyomei, the sure and guaranteed cure for colds, coughs, sore throat, catarrh, bronchitis and asthma.

William Guest, of Ayr, Ont., says: "Booth's Hyomei, has proven to be a most satisfactory treatment for nasal catarrh and bronchial trouble. I have doctored considerably for these troubles and conscientiously say that nothing ever used has given me such quick and lasting benefit as this remedy. I have found it especially good for cold in the head and cough. I am very glad to endorse Hyomei as an article of uncommon merit."

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is medicated and antiseptic air. You breathe it into the lungs through a small pocket inhaler and its soothing influence as it passes over the inflamed membrane of the respiratory tract, stops the mucous discharge, allays the inflammation and the cold is cured. A complete Hyomei Outfit costs $1.00 and Wm. Madill will refund your money if it fails to cure.

LT.-COL. MILLER'S RETIREMENT RECOGNIZED BY DELIGHTFUL BANQUET OF THE OFFICERS

Was Presented With a Handsome Gold Watch by His Fellow-Militiamen—A Most Enjoyable Affair in the Armouries Last Night.

BRIGHT SPEECHES MADE

To honour Lieut.-Col. Miller on his retirement from active command of the 57th Regiment, after forty-three years' faithful service, was the meritorious purpose of a most enjoyable banquet held in honour of Lieut.-Col. Miller by the officers of the Peterborough Rangers in the Mess Rooms in the old armouries last evening. The event was a most delightful success and the retiring officer might well be excused for being proud as he listened to the eulogies that were abundantly poured out by his brother officers. The key-nots of the many excellent speeches was the affection and respect that is felt for Lt.-Col. Miller by those who have been associated with him in military life in Peterborough. This was evidenced by the presentation to him during the evening of a beautiful gold watch suitably inscribed, and was further borne out by the enthusiastic references to his good qualities and his faithful efforts on behalf of the 57th Regiment.

Lt.-Col. Halliday, the President of the Mess, made a most acceptable toast master, and gathered around the festive board which was artistically adorned for the occasion with candles and other decorations, were the following: Major (Rev.) J. C. Davidson, chaplain of the 57th; Major E. B. Clegg, Lieut. Wm. Langford, Jr., Capt. F. A. Clarke, Lieut. A. G. Carruthers, Lieut. W. R. G. Higgins, Capt. R. T. Hounsell, Lieut. J. M. Gemmell, Lieut. H. C. Fairweather, 74th Regiment, Capt. R. F. McWilliams, Capt. D. Walker, Adjutant; Capt. Joseph Mills, Major Wm. Langford, Sr., Capt. V. Eastwood, paymaster of the 57th, Lt.-Col. H. C. Greenwood, Major L. M. Hayes, Capt. W. Harold Cluxton, Lieut. R. N. Merritt, Hon. Capt. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, chaplain of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons; Lt.-Col. J. Z. Rogers, Lt.-Col. A. Stevenson, commanding the 57th Regiment, Lt.-Col. Miller, Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers, Lieut. Jas. D. Clarke, Lieut. M. Comstock, Lieut. Dr. Cameron, Capt. A. P. McLean, Lieut. J. E. Hodgson, Lieut. Rackham, Capt. R. F. Watt and Mr. F. H. Dobbin.

Mr. T. H. Hooper was the caterer for the occasion, and the others attacked the many good things which he had provided with true military zeal. The menu was an extensive one but the courses gradually fell beneath the determined assaults of the attacking force.

The 57th Band was present and during the repast played a choice programme of music under the direction of Mr. Gliddon. It was an act of courtesy to Col. Miller on the part of the band and was much appreciated by that gentleman and his brother officers.

The Toast List

The toast list that followed was a most enjoyable one. The speeches were bright and interesting and were interspersed with vocal numbers and recitations that were much appreciated by the gathering.

The toast "The King" was enthusiastically honoured, the banquetters rising and heartily singing the National Anthem.

Lieut.-Col. Stevenson in proposing the toast to the guest of the evening explained that the banquet was more in the nature of the expression of the good will of the Regiment to Lt.-Col. Miller than it was in commemoration of the fact that he was retiring from active service. That was the reason that the banquet had been delayed, and not held until a year after Lt.-Col. Miller's retirement. He was sure that the officers of the 57th did not want to lose Lt.-Col. Miller from the mess, and the commanding officer of the 57th went on to pay a most hearty tribute to his predecessor with whom he had been connected for many years in the service. He referred to his military experience in connection with the American civil war, and at the time of the Fenian raid, and pointed out that Col. Miller had been involved in military matters ever since. In concluding his excellent speech Lt.-Col. Stevenson asked Lt.-Col. Miller to accept on behalf of the officers of the 57th, a go ld watch inscribed, "Presented by the officers of the 57th Regt., P. B., to Lt.-Col. Miller, Dec. 15th, 1908." The toast was honoured with the utmost enthusiasm, the officers singing "For He's a Jolly, Good Fellow," and giving three cheers and a tiger for the Colonel.

Col. Miller's Reply

Col. Miller replied to the toast in his usual eloquent manner. He thanked the officers for their kind words and gift, and assured them that as long as he could put on a uniform he wanted to come over and see the 57th drill. He referred to the past record of the Regiment, pointing out that the Peterborough Rangers had had a glorious career, and had never failed to respond when called upon for an extra effort. He had always had a kindly feeling for the officers of the service of the two corps, and during the five years during which he had been in command of the regiment he had received splendid support from them. They had kept their men excellently together, and had shown themselves to be officers and gentlemen. In conclusion he wished them every success.

Capt. W. H. Cluxton was heard to great advantage in a vocal solo, "O Canada," which was much appreciated by the gathering.

Capt. Walker, after referring in eulogistic terms to Col. Miller and his services on behalf of the regiment, gave a recitation that caused much merriment.

Toast to Sister Corps

The next toast honoured was that to "Sister Corps," with which were coupled the names of Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers and Hon. Capt. Dr. Langfeldt, of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm.

Lieut.-Col. Rogers, in replying to the toast, gave a brief historical review of military affairs in Peterborough County, from the organization of the first corps in 1837. His address was an interesting one, and contained many reminiscences that were listened to with appreciation by those present, especially the older members of the regiment. Incidentally Lieut.-Col. Rogers paid a hearty tribute to the guest of the evening.

Hon. Capt. Langfeldt, after expressing his pleasure at being present, passed on to refer to Lieut.-Col. Miller, whom he had known for seven years. He was, he said, one of God's noblemen. It was sufficient to say that he was a man. Dr. Langfeldt referred to his pleasant associations with the members of the 57th Regiment, which he had enjoyed while acting as their chaplain. In conclusion, he pointed out that the old generation was passing away and that the great need of every walk of life was to get men to properly fill the places of those who had gone. His eloquent speech made a deep impression upon the gathering.

Capt. Cluxton rendered another song "Girls, Girls, Girls," which was taken as a toast to the ladies and received with enthusiasm.

The Composite Regiment

The toast to the Composite Regiment was next honoured, and in responding Major E. B. Clegg, after paying a tribute to the guest of the evening, stated that the objects to be obtained from the Composite Regiment were undoubtedly of advantage to the city corps. The 57th Regiment had nothing to be ashamed of in connection with the Composite Regiment, inasmuch as at the camp this year, the composite regiment for the Eastern Ontario District was composed entirely of members of the Rangers. He again expressed great regret at Col. Miller's retirement from active service.

Capt. Watt's voice was displayed advantageously in the vocal solo, "The Minstrel Boy," which was well received.

Col. Stevenson proposed an impromptu toast to Lieut.-Col. Greenwood, formerly of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons and an old resident of Peterborough, who has recently returned to Canada from South Africa where he went at the time of the war. In doing so Col. Stevenson referred to Lieut.-Col. Greenwood as one of the best representatives that Canada had ever sent to South Africa.

A South African Veteran

The toast was heartily honoured by the gathering, and in response Lieut.-Col. Greenwood, after thanking the officers of the 57th for their kindness, expressed himself as being glad to be back in Canada again and to visit Peterborough, which he had grown to look upon as his home. He gave a short description of the Engineers' Corps of 900 men, which he had commanded while in South Africa, and his remarks were most interesting.

Col. Miller was heard to advantage in the stirring recitation Glencoe, based on an incident in the South African War, and his effort was loudly applauded.

The toast to the Press was next honoured and was responded to by the representatives present, Messrs. F. H. Dobbin, on behalf of the Review, and F. D. Craig, for the Examiner.

Major Hayes added variety with a comic song that caused much amusement, and Col. H. C. Rogers followed with the song, "Molly Malone," which was received with much applause, the company joining in the chorus.

The toast "The Babies of the Regiment," was received with enthusiasm, and Lieuts. Cameron, Rackham and Carruthers in reply made eloquent speeches, referring to their pleasant associations with the 57th Regiment and with Col. Miller.

Major Hayes proposed a toast to the past and present pay masters of the regiment, and it was heartily honoured.

In reply Major Wm. Langford thanked the officers of the 57th for the honour and referred to the conditions in earlier days, when things were not so pleasant. He also added a tribute to Lieut.-Col. Miller.

Capt. Eastwood, the present paymaster of the regiment, also praised Col. Miller for his services, and referred to the work done by Major Langford, as paymaster. He hoped that he would be enabled to live up to the example set him by his predecessor.

This concluded the toast list and a most enjoyable affair was brought to a close with the singing of "The Bold McIntyre," Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem.

Last night's affair is probably the last of its kind that will take place in the old drill shed, and this fact was referred to by several of the speakers, who pointed out that they had enjoyed many good times in the old building.

A DISASTROUS FIRE IN MONTREAL

The Henry Birks Building Suffers Hundred Thousand Loss.

SEVEN PERSONS RESCUED

Six Girls and a Baby Are Taken From Burning Building When Birks' Jewelry Co.'s Headquarters Is Swept by Flames—Many Small Firms Are Heavy Losers by Catastrophe—Loss Is Covered.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—A disastrous fire broke out yesterday afternoon in the Birks' building at the corner of St. Catherine street and Phillips square, the estimated damage being in the vicinity of $100,000.

The building occupies a whole block in the heart of the uptown retail section, and is one of the largest and finest buildings in Montreal. Henry Birks & Sons, the well-known jewelers, occupied the ground floor, and the top story, while Notman, the photographers, occupy a portion of the building.

The fight with the flames was a spectacular one, six employees, all girls, having to be removed from the windows by the firemen, while the little baby of the janitor was carried through the dense smoke.

The fire started in Birks' mail order room and considerable damage was done to the stock by water and smoke.

The insurance, including the building, machinery, stock, etc., was over half a million dollars. This amount is insured in all the companies doing business all over the Dominion. The Royal Insurance Co. carries $50,000, which is the largest amount carried by any one company. The Queen carries $30,000 and the Phoenix of London $45,000. In fact the balance is spread over in amounts of from $5,000 to $40,000 amongst the London and Lancashire, the Northern Union, and Union Assurance Co., the North British Mercantile, the Liverpool, London and Globe, the British America, the Globe, the Alliance, the Phoenix of Brooklyn and the Guardian.

Mr. Notman, when seen last evening, estimates his loss at about $20,000, all of which is covered by insurance.

The history of the firm of H. Birks & Sons is the history of the last half century of Montreal's mercantile life. From a very small beginning the Messrs. Birks opened the present store, which is the finest in Canada and the largest jewelry establishment in America, the floor space being considerably in excess of the famous Tiffany store which is the pride of New York. It is 90 by 200 or 18,000 square feet in all.

The firm has branches in Ottawa, Winnipeg, Vancouver, the Montreal establishment employing 900 hands.

The tenants of the Birks' building were: W. Notman & Sons, Dr. J. M. Jack, Dr. A. D. Amos, the White Dental Manufacturing Co., Ernest A. Cleveland, Waring & Gillies, Limited; Drs. Hamilton and Mathewson, the Carter Crume Co., Limited; Miss E. Christie, dressmaker; J. C. Nichol, J. K. Ferguson, C. M. Morgan, dentist; J. B. Morrison, dentist; H. Ross Matews, dentist; Peter Brown, dentist; A. W. Robinson, civil engineer; W. J. and A. E. Giles, dentists; Wm. Lamb, caretaker, and X. Stutz, tailor.

Bishop's Sermon Causes Trouble.

North Bay, Dec. 16.—French-Canadian members of the Church of St. Mary-on-the-Lake at North Bay, are declared indignant over remarks made by Bishop Scollard in the course of his sermon Sunday morning, when he rebuked several prominent French-Canadian members of the congregation and, it is alleged, made statements which, they declare, might have a tendency to injure their business. One man is said to contemplate action for $25,000 damages.

Six jurors were chosen Monday, the 12th juror taking his seat shortly before six o'clock last night, when adjournment was taken until to-day.

A feature of the trial will be a tank of water and a model float and catboat in miniature replica of the scene of the shooting, which will be placed on a table in front of the witness stand and iron manikens, representing the principals in the affair, will be moved about in the marine theatre to illustrate actions and positions taken in the tragedy by Hains and the witnesses.

Temperance People Get Set-Back.

Winnipeg, Dec. 16.—So far as evident at midnight last night the local option campaign gives the temperance people a set back relatively three to two. Kildonan reverted to the "wets," the severity of the provisions permitting search for liquor undoubtedly influencing the electors.

Louise, the late Hon. Thos. Greenway's county, which retained local option through years of hard campaigning, has also gone over to the enemy, and in Winchester the result is open to doubt, but favoring the dispensers.

In Emerson option carried by one.

Another Montreal Jewel Robbery.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—A robbery even more daring than that perpetrated opposite the central police station last Friday night, when $1,400 worth of diamonds were stolen, was pulled off last night when, right under the nose of a policeman standing at the busy corner of Craig and Bleury streets, three young fellows smashed the window of Cohen & Co. and made off with a pair of diamond ear-rings valued at $300.

THE CANADIAN NORTHERN BUYING LINE

Canadian Road Said to Be Absorbing Wisconsin Central.

WANT CHICAGO ENTRANCE

Milwaukee Dispatch Says Purchase of Duluth, Rainy River and Winnipeg Railway by Canadian Northern Means That Latter Wants to Gain Access to Chicago to Feed Northwestern Lines.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 16.—The sale on Monday of the Duluth, Rainy River, and Winnipeg Railway to the Canadian Northern, the deal being closed at Toronto, is believed to be the first step toward the acquisition of the Wisconsin Central Railway by the Canadian Northern.

For the last several months it has been generally reported in Milwaukee, where the Wisconsin Central had its home until lately, that the Wisconsin road was wanted by two railroads and also by the Steel Trust. The Canadian Pacific was said to be after the road, but to have changed its plans to provide for the taking over of the Chicago Great Western. The Canadian Northern, the rival road, which frequently acts through Fernald & Co. of Boston, who swung the purchase of the Wisconsin Central to the Bradford interests of Cincinnati, was said to be negotiating for control of the trans-Wisconsin.

The Chicago terminal contract of the Wisconsin Central was said to be one of the objects of the Canadian lines, which needed a Chicago entrance to feed their northwestern lines. The Canadian Northern report, however, was discredited by the fact that the Canadian road had no inlet to Duluth. The purchase of the Duluth-Winnipeg road, however, gives the Canadian Northern connection with the Wisconsin Central at Duluth and by the purchase of the Wisconsin almost an air line to Chicago.

George J. Gould, at the last Wisconsin Central meeting, became a director of the line, and it is said here, though without definite knowledge, that in him the men controlling the Canadian Northern have already a friend on the Wisconsin Central directorate. The purchase of the Wisconsin Central by the Canadian Northern, however, is rather a Wall Street deal than an outright purchase.

Coal Won't Last Long.

New York, Dec. 16.—That the entire coal supply of the Pennsylvania coal fields will be exhausted in 84 years was a prediction yesterday by Prof. William Griffith, a mining expert of Scranton, Pa., at the hearing of the Government suit against the anthracite coal-carrying roads for alleged illegal combination in restraint of trade.

Prof. Griffith estimated the total available supply of anthracite for shipment in 1908 at 2,229,201,650 tons, and said that at the present rate of consumption the supply would be used up in 1932.

Ontario Power Pipe Line.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 16.—The Ontario Power Co. is preparing plans for the construction of a new pipe line to increase its capacity of electric power by 65,000 horse-power. Work will be commenced early in the spring.

The work is made necessary to handle the contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission. The tunnel will be of steel, lined with concrete and be 30 feet in diameter and three-quarters of a million dollars. With the new line the company will be able to develop 180,000 horse-power.

Rockefeller's Huge Gift.

Cleveland, Dec. 16.—John D. Rockefeller says he is unable to understand why the newspapers are directing attention to his proposed establishment of a $50,000,000 fund for the education of orientals in the Far East.

"It will take years to obtain the necessary legislation to accomplish the ends attributed to me, and it is much too early to make a public announcement at this time," he said.

Jealous Republics.

Rio Janiero, Dec. 16.—The relations existing between Brazil and the Argentine are distinctly strained as a result of the jealousy over the alleged activities of each country in the matter of increasing its naval force.

The incident of the official telegrams said to have been intercepted and published by an ex-Cabinet Minister of the Argentine's adds to the ill-feeling, which shows no signs of decreasing.

France Buys Railways.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—Lt. Col. Frank Meighen, who has just returned from Europe, declares that state ownership of railways is fast becoming a reality in France, as the Government of the republic, believing in the policy of state-owned roads, is rapidly buying up all the railways in the country.

DORANDO RUN OFF HIS FEET; COLLAPSES NEAR THE FINISH OF RACE WITH TOM LONGBOAT

Italian Runner Leads at Start of the Matched Marathon in New York, But Canadian Indian Proves to Be the Better Runner and Finishes Strong—Dorando Goes Twenty-Five Miles and Three Laps.

New York, Dec. 16.—As on that memorable occasion of his first Olympic, Dorando Pietri collapsed within sight of the goal last night, and Tom Longboat, the Canadian Indian runner, who had been led by a yard or more nearly all the way, won the Marathon race at Madison Square Garden last night.

The race was hard-fought from start to finish, and kept the thousands of spectators in wild excitement. At twenty-five miles Dorando was leading by two yards. A moment before Longboat had made a remarkable spurt and put himself on an even footing with the little Italian. Dorando immediately regained first position, and the men were fighting it out in the twenty-sixth mile, with Dorando in the lead, but visibly weaker. The chances of Longboat appeared to improve in the second and third laps. In the fourth lap, while the crowd was crying itself hoarse, both men slackened perceptibly. Then suddenly Dorando staggered and dropped, Longboat finishing alone. His time for the distance of twenty-six miles 385 yards was 2.45.05 2-5.

The Marathon fever drew a gathering of over 11,000 persons to the Garden, and many men and women were fighting for admission at 9 o'clock, when the race was scheduled to begin.

By order of the fire department, the doors of the Garden were closed as the race started. The four or five thousand persons who had been unable to obtain admission, though many of them were ticket-holders, created so much disturbance that police reserves were sent to the scene. These finally restored order.

The race started at 9.11 o'clock. Longboat won the toss and took the pole position. Dorando jumped into the lead and set a steady pace, with the Indian a few feet back. Both were running easily, but at a good clip.

The first mile was made in 5.14 1-2, Dorando leading by two yards.

Longboat took the lead early in the third mile, but held it for three laps only. Dorando letting out a link in his speed and running around the Canadian. Dorando then continued in the lead, and at the finish of the tenth mile was running at a steady, fast gait, two yards ahead of his opponent. The time for the ten miles was 58 minutes 57 seconds, which is 1 minute 9 2-5 seconds faster than the time made in the Hayes-Dorando race for the distance.

THE WINNER.

Longboat showed signs of fatigue in the seventeenth mile, but kept on doggedly within striking distance of the Indian. In the twentieth mile Longboat shot ahead and dropped into a natural lope, which kept him in the lead for five yards. Then Dorando, amid wild cheers, forged ahead. In the second lap of the twenty-fourth mile Dorando regained his advantage. Both men moved more slowly and showed weariness. In the beginning of the twenty-sixth mile Longboat sprinted, and the Italian went to the rear. In the middle of the mile, and when a quarter of a lap behind, Dorando fell to the track, and it was necessary to pick him up and carry him to his dressing-room.

DORANDO BLAMES LONGBOAT FOR TRIPPING; TOM SINGS "MARCHING THROUGH GEORGIA"

Examiner Special.

New York, N.Y., Dec. 16. — Tom Longboat says: "Dorando is a great runner and ran a good game race, but collapsed the same way he did in England. I knew I had him after the sixteenth mile. I passed Dorando when and where I liked. He never passed me till I let him. When Flanagan thought I needed encouragement he brought my sweetheart to the trackside." Longboat entered the dressing room singing "Marching through Georgia," without a patch of skin on either foot from the toe to heel.

Dorando says: "Longboat threw out his leg and tripped me when I tried to pass him. I fell on my hip on the rail and could not get up. I wasn't tired at all and I watched Longboat and saw he was very tired. I will run him again to-morrow or any time. He won by fouling me."

Y.M.C.A. TRACK AND FIELD CLUB— C.A.A.U. CHAMPIONS MAY BE HERE

The year the Y. M. C. A. intends putting more time to the promotion of good clean athletics in this city, and on thursday night a meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. parlours at 7.30 sharp for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. It is likely that a constitution will be drawn up and every member who is interested in Athletics is asked to attend this meeting.

Some of the boys are already looking forward to the Canadian track and field spring championship and also the Dunlop Trophy for the long distance men. A suggestion was made by one present that an endeavour should be made to have the championship meet held in this city. There is no doubt that if the Canadian championships were held here it would do a lot to increase interest in athletics and would give the people of Peterborough an opportunity to see Canadian Champions in action.

Come to this meeting prepared to offer any suggestions and be ready to help in the work of the club and make it an organization worthy of the name.

BANKERS HAVE INCREASED LEAD IN THE P.B.C. BOWLING LEAGUE

The Bankers sprung a sensation on the bowling fraternity last night, when they wrested three straight games from the Belmonts in the league series of the P. B. C. The winners greatly strengthened their hold on first place, having a record of eleven wins and only one loss. Two of the three games were of the closest and most exciting nature, but the second contest was an easy one for the bankers, who beat out their opponents in this event by 86 pins. In the other two games fourteen and fifteen pins, respectively, separated the rivals at the finish.

The Belmonts showed little of their real form, their scores being exceptionally small throughout. Ferguson, of the Bankers, was in exceptionally good form, and put in a big 505 as his portion, Barber being second, 31 pins behind, just one pin below Wareham, who had second high score of the evening.

In the second game of the double-header, the Iroquois took two from the Frontenacs, after losing the opening game of the series. Gutterson and Berrette made their debut with the Frontenacs, and they fought it out for high score for their team, Berrette having a four pin advantage at the finish, with a score of 442, which just tied Martin, who was high man for the Iroquois.

There will be no league game to-night, but to-morrow night the Midgets and Pacifics will meet while Friday evening will see a meeting of the Examiner B and Lock Works. On Saturday Hutch will attempt to lower the colours of the Examiner A championship aspirants.

The scores follow:

PETERBORO' INTERMEDIATES GROUPED WITH THREE OLD RIVAL TEAMS

The grouping of all three series in the O.H.A. was done last night at a meeting of the executive held in Toronto at which Dr. A W MacPherson, of Peterborough was present.

Peterborough has been placed in a splendid group in the intermediate series and will fight it out this season with Cobourg, Belleville and Lindsay. The convener of the group is T J Turpin, Cobourg, and the delegates will meet in Port Hope to draw up the schedule, the meeting to be held as soon as possible. It should be a great race between the four clubs for the championship of this district.

The junior group is not by any means as satisfactory inasmuch as the local kids are grouped with the four Lakeshore towns, Port Hope, Cobourg, Oshawa and Whitby. The train connections between Peterborough and those places is very bad, especially in the case of the last two, but it was apparently the only course that the O.H.A. could have done, unless they had given Peterborough a bye for the first round and allowed the other four teams to fight it out.

O. McMillan, of Port Hope is the convener of the district which will meet at Port Hope.

LONGBOAT DEMONSTRATES THAT HE SHOULD HAVE WON OLYMPIC MARATHON

It's hats off to Tom Longboat today.

The speedy redskin brought home the bacon last night in his race with Dorando in New York City, and thereby demonstrated to the world that had he been right in England the Olympic Marathon championship would have rested in Canada and not in the land of Uncle Sam, where the last two professional races in New York have shown that it does not properly belong. Hayes, awarded the first place in the Olympic Marathon, is easily beaten by Dorando, and then Tom Longboat comes along and takes the Italian into camp. If Jas. E. Sullivan can explain that dope he is a good one. Longboat's victory last night will be gladly acclaimed all over Canada, for he has once more won laurels for the athletic life of this country.

Dorando has nothing to be ashamed in his showing. The time was not as fast as in this recent race with Hayes, and it would look as if the Italian pastry cook had been attending too many banquets since that event. Otherwise his collapsing in slower time than he negotiated the distance before, is hard to explain, unless it was that he was forced along at too rapid a pace in the early stages.

A CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE MEETING TO-NIGHT

A meeting of the City Hockey League will be held this evening at the Y.M.C.A. at 7.30 o'clock. A representative from each club is requested to be on hand, as business of importance, including two or three amendments, will be considered. A deputation from the Junior City League will be present to submit a proposition regarding playing their games and financing their league.

A WOMAN'S BACK WAS NOT MADE TO ACHE.

Thousands of Women Suffer Untold Misery Every Day With Aching Backs That Really Have No Business To Ache.

Under ordinary conditions it ought to be strong and ready to bear the burdens of life.

It is hard to do housework with an aching back. Backaches come from sick kidneys, and what a lot of trouble sick kidneys cause.

But they can't help it. If more work is put on them than they can stand it is not to be wondered that they get out of order.

Backache is simply a warning from the kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney troubles.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you in the same way as they have cured thousands of others.

SEVERE PAINS IN BACK.

Mrs. O. Warren, Radisson, Sask., writes: "I was troubled with very severe pains in my back for years. I tried everything I could think of but they did me no good. A friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking two boxes, I have not been troubled since."

Price 50 cents per box, or 2 for $1.25, all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering specify "Doan's."

HOCKEY

Fred Whiterott is evidently bound to give Edmonton the strongest team that money can produce. A despatch from Edmonton to-day states that Lester Patrick, the former star Montreal hockey player, has been signed, and will join the team at Winnipeg. Steve Vair, the Barrie player, has been released and the team will consist of Lindsay, Hugh Ross, Patrick, Pitre, McNamara, Tom Phillips and Whiterott.

• • • •

"Go out and buy a team and get the Minto Cup," was evidently the order issued to Manager Whiterott at Edmonton this fall. And Whit. has "went and bought. He has gathered them in from Montreal to Vancouver, and the only reason he didn't go further is that those are the limits of first-class hockey. Look at the bunch he has bought: Phillips, Vancouver; Pitre, Montreal; Vair, Barrie; Lindsay, Toronto; Hall, Winnipeg. He comes from Peterborough himself, so the only thing on the team that belongs to Edmonton are the sticks and uniforms—and come to think of it, they were imported too.—Toronto Telegram.

• • • •

The Fort Williams, the newly organized senior hockey team, held a practice at the Arena rink last night. About fifteen players were out in uniform.

Lightfoot, of last year's Wanderers, showed his usual good form, and Renton, of Peterborough, did good work. He is a good stick handler.

Wilson, McDonald, Marshall and Montgomery Russell, of the city league teams, were among the number practising.—Fort Williams Times.

Sporting Comment

The Italians' battle cry "On! on! Dago." did not prevent the Onondaga winning.

WRESTLING.

Youssuff Mahmout, the big Bigarian, who put it over Yankee Rogers at Montreal some weeks ago, is evidently some wrestler. Last week at Chicago he beat Fred Beell in straight falls, and never was in any danger while doing it.

A WESTERN PAPER'S PROSPERITY

Advance of the Lethbridge Herald Under the Management of Mr. W. A. Buchanan, Formerly of Peterborough.

CELEBRATED ITS BIRTHDAY

The Lethbridge Daily Herald is a lusty, well nourished yearling, with the brand of enterprise on its flank. "Billy"—in the directing and at the foot of a cheque, W. A. Buchanan, a former Peterborough boy and newspaper man, is managing director and editor of the Daily Herald, is making it go. It is a bright, newsy sheet, well filled with live advertising, and in its make up and general character vividly reflects the breezy progressiveness of the west. On Friday last the Herald celebrated its first birth day. It began life as a weekly three years ago, with a staff of two; to-day it has sixteen employees on its payroll of $1,200 per month, or $15,000 per year. Those who know Mr. Buchanan, his enterprise and ability, are not surprised at the Herald growing and thriving under his management. The first birth day was celebrated on Friday, December 11th, the management giving the employees a banquet. The book of the banquet is quite a triumph of the typographical art, illustrated with a pa ;icture of the staff, and a cut of the Herald building. It, as the Herald itself, bears the stamp of prosperity. The Examiner congratulates the Herald on the auspicious occasion, and includes Mr. Buchanan, who is another example of Peterborough boys "making good."

LATEST NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

Seeking a Senatorship—The Immense Grain Movement of the Season—The Old International Boundary Dispute Revived—British Columbia's Cabinet Representation.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Senator Wm. Gibson and Mr. W. O. Seeley, M.P., waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday to urge the appointment of Mr. Adam Zimmerman, ex-M.P. of Hamilton, to the Senate vacancy caused by the death of the late Senator Merner of Berlin.

The close of navigation brings the interesting information that over 48,000,000 bushels of wheat of the crop of 1908 passed Winnipeg before the last boats went out. Shipments for the last week of open water reached the enormous total of 5,103,007 bushels. The entire movement of wheat for this season leaves all other years many miles behind.

A. P. Barnhill and John Keefe have been appointed Canadian Commissioners to deal with the Intercolonial question of observations in the St. John River, where it forms the boundary between New Brunswick and Maine. Hon. H. A. McKeown and Hon W. H. Jones, members of the late provincial government, have been appointed counsel for Canada.

The representation of British Columbia in the Cabinet is the principal political topic in the ante-sessional period. It is undoubtedly the desire of the Premier to retain the services of his colleague, Hon. Mr. Templeman, but the difficulty is that he cannot retain his portfolio without being provided with a seat. Mr. Ralph Smith, Liberal member for Nanaimo, is anxious for Cabinet preference, but the rank and file of the party in the province want Mr. Templeman retained. He was beaten by only a narrow majority, and the election is contested. In a by-election Mr Templeman will undoubtedly be returned. How to bridge over the interim, so that his services may be retained for the government, is a somewhat puzzling problem.

THE POST OFFICE STAFF INCREASED

Two Men Have Been Added to Handle Christmas Mail.

Foreseeing a heavy Christmas mail the post office staff has been augmented by the addition of two extra men, who will help in the handling of the large amount of mail that is expected within the next ten days or two weeks. It may be that one of them will be put on outside work if necessary. Hundreds of pounds of mail will pass through the post office, and during the Christmas days the office will be overburdened with work. It is to give the citizens a prompt service that the staff has been enlarged.

WAR DECLARED AGAINST HOLLAND BY VENEZUELA IN VIEW OF A VESSEL CAPTURE

J. N. Barber, (Special)

Washington, D.C., Dec. 17.—(United Press Despatch).—Venezuela has declared war against Holland, according to advices received at the State Department to-day. This news is contained in a despatch from Secretary Paxton Hibbin, Secretary of the Legation at Bogota, Colombia. He states that the Colombian Minister of Foreign Affairs has received the following telegram from Caracas, dated December 14th, 1908: "In view of the blockage established and the capture of the blockade of a Venezuelan vessel, the head of the government at Venezuela, after assuming extraordinary powers for the defence of the country, has declared a estate of war."

PARENTS OF ARTHUR HANNING SEND THANKS TO THOSE WHO ARRANGED FOR HIS INTERMENT

Mr. Jas. Skippen Receives Letter After Considerable Delay—The Young Man Was Drowned in the River Below St. Railway Wharf.

GRATEFUL TO THE S. O. E.

Mr. James Skippen has received a letter from Mr. W. M. Hanning, of Manchester, the father of Arthur Hanning the young man who was drowned about six weeks ago, a short distance below the street railway wharf. Mr. Skippen met with considerable delay in trying to find the address of the parents of the unfortunate boy and it was only after many letters to people who had known him, that he at last received the desired information.

A few days ago the following reply came to him:

Dear Sir,—I hope you will pardon me for not answering before this, but it was owing to your letter and newspaper clippings having been sent to a relative for perusal, and not returned to me until to-day, that a delay was caused. It came as a great shock to my wife and I, on receiving from you the confirmation of my son's accident.

I thank you for your kind sympathy and thoroughly appreciate your great kindness for what you have done. I am also grateful to Mr. Bailey and the Sons of England for their kind and generous help. If you succeed in getting any money that was due to Arthur, you might hand it to the Sons of England Society.

If there are any letters left by Arthur I should esteem it a favour if you will forward them to me.

My wife unites with me in thanking you for all the trouble you have taken.

Yours sincerely,
WM. A. HANNING.

WM. RATTRAY, BASEBALL CATCHER, ARRESTED IN TORONTO FOR THEFT OF $683 FROM LOCAL HOTELMAN

Wm. Rattray who will be remembered by local baseball fans as the catcher of the Athletics Midland League team and who has played for the Peterborough team for several years was arrested yesterday in his home in Dovercourt Road, Toronto, by Detective Geo. Guthrie on a charge of of stealing over $683 from Ms. Martin Connors proprietor of the City Hotel and will be brought to Peterborough to-day for trial. P. C. Newhall went up to Toronto this morning and will bring his man down this afternoon.

The theft occurred some months ago and the police have been after Rattray ever since. Mr. Connors had drawn a sum of money from the bank for the purpose of cashing some of the C G E pay checks. The money was left in a drawer in the bar and next morning it was gone. Rattray who had been seen in the city the day before and who was not to be found next morning was at once suspected and the local police were notified. He had left the city by that time and Chief Rossel at once wired the Toronto authorities giving them a description of Rattray but he seemed to have mysteriously disappeared and the police were unable to find him. There was a humour that he had gone to Chicago and Chief Rossel notified the authorities in that city, but they were unable to find any trace of the missing man, of whom nothing was heard until his arrest in Toronto yesterday. He will likely appear before the Magistrate to-morrow morning for a preliminary hearing.

Scarltaina Cases Concealed
A Menace To Public Health

One of the evils which the authorities cannot deal with and which is largely responsible for the spreading of scarlet fever is the concealing of it when it appears in a mild form. A medical man, speaking to a reporter this morning, said that this fever is found in three forms. There is scarlatine simplex, the mildest form and the most malignant type, with another that is intermediate between these two. The first is commonly called scarlatina and it is known that there are people who, when this breaks out in the family, conceal it, saying thatt if a physician is called in he will order the house placarded. They go about their daily work just the same as usual, and very likely will carry the fever to another in whom it may rage in the most malignant form, with the chance of recovery very small.

The doctor said that persons such as these do not realize the danger they are carrying around with them when they try to evade calling in a doctor to treat scarlatina. Because he may order the house quarantined as a protection to those who are not immune to the disease.

Young Man Convicted Of Beating His Mother Is Fined By Magistrate

At police court this morning a young man was charged with the somewhat unusual offence of assaulting his mother and as a result was fined $5 by City Clerk Armstrong, who occupied the bench in the absence of Magistrate Dumble. The young man pleaded not guilty.

His mother, however, swore that he came home in a state of intoxication yesterday and when she had reproached him about it he had denied that he had been drinking. She had called him a drunken beast whereupon he had struck her, knocking her back against the wall and beating her in the face. "I believe he would have killed me if the neighbours had not come to my rescue" said the poor woman to the Magistrate.

A woman who lives near the complainant testified that she had heard the young man using bad language and had then heard his mother scream and she had gone to the rescue. She had seized the defendant's arm and separated the two.

"I don't know why you pleaded not guilty in the face of such facts," remarked the Magistrate, "Unless you were ashamed to admit that you had been beating your own mother."

He inflicted a fine of $5 to be paid in ten days with the alternative of ten days in gaol, and at the request of Chief Rossel put the young man on the black list.

Herman Zack, one of the local Jewish colony, was charged with peddling without a license and was called into the box by the Chief to give evidence. He denied that he had been peddling. He simply delivered goods for which orders had been sent to his place of business. His brother who had a license was a peddler, but he had not done anything of the kind.

The case was dismissed.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17,

TUBERCULOSIS RECORD.

The present propaganda in the interest of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, through the medium of the "Christmas stamp," suggests some consideration of one of the most fatal of diseases, and the ravages it makes in the ranks of the population of the province and Dominion. According to the report of the Provincial Health Officer there were during the month of October last 157 deaths in Ontario from tuberculosis, or consumption, 63 more than from all known contagious diseases combined. The total number of deaths from measles, smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping-cough and typhoid, was 94, to which typhoid contributed 50. The total number of deaths from these diseases, including consumption, was 251, so that tuberculosis was responsible for 62 1-2 per cent. of the deaths resulting from the diseases mentioned. Fatal as is tuberculosis, the advances of medical science, or rather scientific hygiene—for medication plays an insignificant part in the successful treatment of consumption—provide a curative treatment for consumption, if taken in its earlier stages, and, where cure is not possible, a great amelioration of suffering and, comparatively, comfortable prolongation of life. At the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives the only effective treatment for consumptives is applied on gospel terms—free. Not a single patient has ever been refused admission to this institution on account of inability to pay. Hundreds of homes, some of which are known to ourselves, have consumptive patients, many of whom from lack of means cannot take a change of climate or adopt other palliative measures within the reach of persons of means. To assist the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives is open. To provide free treatment money is needed, and to provide some of this need, the Christmas stamp is provided. These stamps are being sold all over Canada, and the season when the spirit of good will is in the ascendant, is a happy time to make an appeal whose spirit is so divinely in accord with the spirit of the Divine Lord of the Christmas. These stamps are for sale in various places, a list of which will be found in our news column. Buy and use these stamps on your holiday correspondence, and you will be a help in spreading the knowledge and aiding the work of one of the grandest secular agencies of beneficence in Canada.

The sale of a million "Christmas stamps" will enable the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives to double its capacity, and place 150 beds at the disposal of needy patients —whom all other hospitals reject.

FORESTRY IN DETAIL.

The axe laid to the root of the tree is the real root of the water shortage which has resulted in so much loss, and inconvenience to every class of citizens, farmers, industrialists and others. All this is due to the extensive and general removal of our forests, the natural reservoirs of water. When we had the forests, the rainfall was largely taken up by the leafy floors and absorbent surface soil. It was permitted to filter out slowly and was a perpetual source of supply to streams, rivers, lakes and underground springs. Now the water of spring-time rushes off in tumultuary freshets, with the consequence that during summer and autumn there is a deficiency of water and, sometimes, as this season, a disastrous water famine. Added to these conditions is the fact that the removal of forest growth affects the rainfall, rendering it less regular, less seasonable and less favourable to growing crops and pastures. Rather late in the day attention is being earnestly directed to forest conservation and reforestry. Years ago the Government of Ontario set apart large forest reserves, millions of acres and now attention is being given to reforestry operations. But the scheme and the activity are too restricted. To have appreciable results reforestry must be made more general. There are hundreds of thousands of spaces on Ontario farms unfit for cultivation. We see farmers laboriously tilling hillsides for scanty crops. The removal of the trees exposes these hillsides to the full force of the torrential rains of summer, with the result that the humus, the natural mould, is washed away and the hillsides made more or less barren. If these precipitous slopes were planted with trees, in a few years they would constitute reservoirs; the fallen leaves would absorb the rains so the water would be slowly filtered into the valleys.

Besides, the tree growth rightly managed, would in time furnish a fuel supply. This also suggests the planting of rocky or stony field corners and spaces which cannot be tilled. These might, better than not, be growing trees for fuel and for the forestry benefits which such planting universally adopted would create. If every farm in every part of settled Ontario were thus treated, the farm-community and the people at large would derive indirect benefits from the very considerable restoration of forest growth and individual farmers would benefit from direct results in the way of shelter and fuel supply. This latter is important. On many farms there is no fuel and many farmers are compelled to use coal or buy fire wood. Nearly every farmer could grow his own fuel, for on nearly every farm there are waste spaces of more or less area where fuel timber could be grown. An excellent tree for this purpose is the common locust (Robina Pseudacacoia.) It grows readily and rapidly in almost any soil. It grows to a fairly large size. There are locust trees on Mr. LeBrun's property on Simcoe street with trunks nearly two feet in diametre and sixty feet in height. The wood of the locust is firm and dense and makes excellent fuel. A gentleman who this year cleared a neglected plot, overgrown with locust, used the wood and declares that it is as good as hard maple for fuel. Once planted a locust grove would be everlasting. If the trees are cut late in the winter or in early spring they will throw out new shoots from the roots, and in time new trees are the result. Thus on a comparatively small plot a farmer can grow a perpetual supply of first-class fuel. In addition to being a good fuel wood the locust is as lasting as cedar for fence posts, railway ties, etc. If railways would plant their right of way (except at sharp curves) with locust trees and properly trim them and care for them, they would do much to supplement the rapidly vanishing supply of timber for ties, if not, in the course of a few years, grow all the sleepers required for their lines. The plantations could be so treated in the time and manner of cutting, as to furnish a perpetual supply. The advantage of cutting ties at the spot where they are needed would same transportation.

The idea seems worthy of consideration not only for its essential value but for the forester'atic values which the planting of railway rights of way and waste places on our farms would represent. There are millions in a wide-spread and practical popular appreciation of the value of forest growth, both for its climatic and economic value.

The country that recklessly removes its forest growth is like the foolish man who lives by spending his capital.

A RATHER COOL PROPOSITION.

Under the above heading the Weekly Sun deals with the question of the duties on woollens, from the viewpoint of the interest of the farming community which it speaks for:

The attention of Sun readers is particularly directed to the statement contained in the report of lectures given at the Winter Fair, of what is asked for in the way of increased protection by the woollen industry.

That industry is not satisfied with a tariff based on the value of finished imports; it demands, as stated by Mr Wardlaw at Guelph, a specific tax based on weight—twelve cents per pound on all woollen clothing imported. Such a form of taxation is, as Henry Glendinning pointed out during the discussions which occurred on the presentation of the demand, open to exceptional objections; it bears more heavily on the poor than on the rich. With taxation based on value the expensive suit, made of fine material, will pay more in Customs duties than the cheap suit manufactured from coarse material. With specific duties, levied on the weight of the article, the cheap suit which would probably weigh more than the expensive one, might have to bear the higher rate.

The spokesman for the woollen manufacturers contended that in any case the duty would be a small affair—merely a matter of some seventy-three cents on a winter suit. Even if we admit that the tax would not amount to more than the figure stated, this seventy-three cents would not represent all the cost to the purchaser. To the duty a wholesale and retail profit on handling would have to be added, and this would bring the total up to at least a dollar per suit. There are about a million and a quarter families in Canada, and these will purchase the equivalent of at least four suits of woollens per family annually. Four suits of woollens, at a dollar in duty per suit, will figure out for a million and a quarter families at five million dollars a year. That is the extent of the burden the people of Canada are asked to assume for an industry paying one and a half million dollars a year in wages.

The rate of duty on all the woollen goods imported into Canada in the short fiscal year of 1907 averaged almost the even 30 per cent. In making up this average there is included a quarter of a million pounds of shoddy, imported as raw material for Canadian woollen manufacturers on which the duty worked out about 15 per cent., a quarter of a million yards of women's unfinished dress goods, imported for the purpose of being finished in Canada, on which the duty was 20 per cent.; nearly 600,000 lbs., of felt, to be covered in Canada, on which the duty was a little over 20 per cent. and various other similar articles at varying rates. If we exclude from the calculation the partially finished goods imported by woollen manufacturers to be finished in their factories, we will find that their average of protection on finished products was considerably in excess of 30 per cent. Furthermore, although nearly 4,000,000 lbs. of raw wool was imported by these manufacturers in the nine months ending with March, 1907, the total duty collected amounted to only 60 cents. It was admitted at Guelph by the spokesman of the manufacturers, who appeared there that much of this wool was similar to that produced by Canadian farmers, and so subject under the law to a duty of 3 cents per lb., but that the Customs authorities allowed it to be entered as not similar to Canadian wool, thereby exempting it from Customs taxation, as a favour to woollen manufacturers.

By becoming parties, to put it mildly, to a misrepresentation of the Customs law, woollen manufacturers are allowed to import their wool duty free; they are legally allowed to import shoddy and other partially manufactured goods at a low rate; they are protected to the extent of over 30 per cent. on their finished product, and still they asked those present at the Winter Fair to endorse a demand for more. It was a fairly cool proposition to lay before a farmers' meeting—quite as cool, indeed, as the surrounding temperature even with the thermometer several degrees below freezing.

Reading is to the mind what exercise is to the body.—Addison.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The British prohibitionists refuse to adopt Carrie Nation. When the "dry" forsake her surely the suffragettes will take her up. Hatchet hysterics should appeal to the parliament-pummelling sisterhood.

The Chatham Planet, Conservative, is opposed to protesting Mr. McCoig's election. It claims that money was illegally spent by both parties in West Kent, and argues that "the first duty of Conservatives is to wash their own hands clean and leave Liberals the condemnation of public opinion if they refuse to do likewise."

RECENT HOLIDAY AND OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Contemporaries That Come Dressed in Their Christmas Garb.

The Examiner has received from the Delmar Music Company, Montreal, a copy of the song "O Canada." The melody of Mr. C Lavallee, harmonized by Mr. G A Grant-Schaefer, is fitted with English words by His Hon. R Stanley Weir, Recorder of Montreal. The words have a virile ring of patriotism and the musical arrangement—for solo, mixed voices or unison chorus, with four part chorus—combines to give a most effective ensemble of spirit and statelineas, dignity and fervour. The new setting of "O Canada" in musical value, literary merit and patriotic inspiration should meet with wide popular favour. It is copyrighted in Canada and the United States.

The Christmas number of the Farmers' Advocate is quite out of its class, and, in its elaborate beauty of illustration and apt quality of letter press, looks more like the edition de luxe of an art journal than the holiday aftermath of a year's staid, sober catering to the wants and interests of an agricultural constituency. The Farmers' Advocate is, almost if not, the foremost of publications of its kind produced in any country. Following up its progressively progressive methods has produced a Christmas number unique in its elegance and acceptability.

Nearly all our "esteemed contemporaries" have or are issuing special holiday editions, and all of them, thanks to improvements in illustration methods and syndicating facilities, are in every way creditable, and worthy in spirit of the season they commemorate.

NEW REGIME BEGINNING IN TURKEY

Turkey's Parliament Opens To-Day With Great Rejoicing.

FIRST IN THIRTY YEARS

People Eagerly Await Result of Constitutional Government—Sultan Will Ride Through the Streets While Children Sing Liberty Hymn—Constantinople Is In Holiday Attire For the Big Event.

Constantinople, Dec. 17.—Turkey makes her bow as a full-fledged constitutional monarchy to-day, when the new Ottoman Parliament holds its first session.

This assembly was provided for in the constitution granted by Sultan Abdul Hamid last July, and is the first body of its kind to meet in the empire for over thirty years. The life of its only predecessor was brief, but hopes are entertained for the success of the new-comer.

To-day has been proclaimed a general holiday in honor of the Parliament, and the city is doing its best to observe the occasion fittingly. The decorations are quite unprecedented, and most of the population is in the streets eagerly discussing the prospects of the new regime. Practically every regiment in the Constantinople garrison will line the route under arms, when the Sultan drives to open the assembly, while school children, stationed at vantage points along the way, will sing the hymn of liberty as the imperial cortege passes.

Congratulatory addresses have been received by the new Parliament from both the British Parliament and the Russian Douma.

Gordon Gibson Dead.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—Major Macdonald, secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. J. M. Gibson, yesterday morning received a message from his honor saying that his son, Gordon Gibson, had died Tuesday evening at Colorado Springs after a prolonged illness. Hon. Mr. Gibson and Mrs. Gibson left last week for Colorado. The deceased was 28 years of age, and was one of four sons, there being also two daughters. The remains will probably be taken to Hamilton for interment.

Nearly Fifty Millions.

Winnipeg, Dec. 17.—Navigation has closed and over 48,000,000 bushels of wheat of the crop of 1908 passed Winnipeg before the last boats went out. Shipments for the last week of open water reached the enormous total of 5,103,097 bushels. The entire movement of wheat for this season leaves all other years many miles behind. The situation, so far as the outlook for the future is concerned, is much more bearish than it was a week ago.

Agreement Not a Treaty.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Secretary of State Root before the Senate committee on foreign relations yesterday explained that the only obligation upon either party to the entente between United States and Japan relating to the maintenance of Chinese integrity is that they shall consult with each other before undertaking any action concerning Chinese affairs. The agreement does not assume the character of a treaty.

Suggests a Cure.

New York, Dec. 17.—W. L. M. King, M.P., sailed for England yesterday to attend the international conference on opium to be held at Shanghai, China, beginning on Feb. 1. Mr. King said:

"It is my opinion that the use of opium in a harmful way can only be checked by striking direct at the very root — the raising of poppies to so great an extent as to make possible the spread of their produce as other than a mere medicine."

Blizzard In Newfoundland.

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 17.—The worst blizzard experienced in Newfoundland for many years has been raging for 48 hours, and heavy damage has been done to fishing vessels, a number of which have been blown ashore at various points.

No loss of life has yet been reported, but it is feared that several schooners have been blown to sea or sunk. Traffic on land is at a standstill.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The G.A.R. will meet in Salt Lake City next year.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General, will arrive in New York on Saturday from Great Britain, and is expected to proceed at once to the capital.

John Bruce Woodward, a student at the state university, died at his home at Maysville, Ky., as the result of the bursting of a blood vessel in his lung while he was blowing into a lung-testing machine.

The monument to the Irish dead, the immigrants buried at Grosse Isle, will be erected there about the end of July or August next. It will take the form of a Celtic Cross suitably inscribed to the nameless dead. The A.O.H. will hold big ceremonies in connection with the event.

Runs With Throat Cut.

Montreal, Dec. 17.—The spectacle was witnessed last night on a crowded thoroughfare, of an Italian running among the Christmas shoppers with his throat cut. He was gashed by a razor in the hands of an unknown assailant. The blood left a trail in the snow and the injured man collapsed within sight of his home.

Robbery or revenge was thought to be the motive. The man was taken to a hospital, and it is thought he will probably die. His assailant has not yet been arrested.

Loss to Pembroke.

Brockville, Dec. 17.—Delahay Bros., proprietors of the National Manufacturing Co. of Pembroke, have come into possession of the plant of the Cossitt Co. of this town, makers of agricultural implements. The Delahay people were burned out quite recently in Pembroke.

The works will be greatly enlarged, and the removal of the Pembroke staff to Brockville means a large addition to the population at an early date.

Father Hand Appointed Bishop.

London, Ont., Dec. 17.—A report was current yesterday that Rev. Father Hand of Toronto had been appointed to the bishopric of London, in succession to Archbishop McEvay.

The report was stated in authoritative Roman Catholic quarters to be premature. At St. Paul's rectory, Toronto, it was stated that Rev. Father Hand would be back next week for Christmas. Until his return no definite information was available.

BOTH CLAIM VICTORY.

Local Option Results In Manitoba Were Close.

Winnipeg, Dec. 17.—Both the temperance and the liquor forces are claiming a victory as a result of the vote on local option on Tuesday. Local option carried in five places; was sustained in six, repealed in one and defeated in 70, as follows:

Carried, with following majorities: Emerson 1, Roblin 11, Winchester 60, Hamiota 123, Minitonas 20.

Repealed: In Kildonan by a majority of 66.

Defeated, majorities: Morris 27, Selkirk 6, Carberry 35, Russell 3, Municipality of Louise 35, Westbourne 28, Franklin 56.

Sustained, majorities: North Norfolk 6, Edward (large majority), Pipestone 250, Odanah 19, Swan River 18, South Norfolk 16.

In Selkirk the temperance people claim there was wholesale impersonation, there being a large resident vote there. In Emerson, on the other hand, the liquor people assert two Americans voted for local option which gave the law its majority of one. They will demand a recount.

A great many more contests that had been planned by the temperance people were knocked out by the court on a technicality.

SEVENTEEN WILL VOTE.

Back is Busy Rounding Up Towns That Want Power.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—Seventeen municipalities will vote on the electric power bylaw—on Jan. 4. These are situated in western Ontario.

Hon. Adam Beck and A. F. Lobb have been touring in this district and pointing out the facts which render the present an opportune moment for the adoption in the west of a cheap power policy. An option on the construction of an additional 193 miles of transmission line at the contract rates submitted by F. M. McGuigan, is chief of these.

At least 5,000 horse-power will be required if the 17 centres vote in the affirmative.

Windsor, Walkerville, Chatham, Kingsville and Leamington are some of the principal places.

In Chatham there is some opposition from those interested in the natural gas plant but it is not generally considered that the gas interests would suffer.

Woman Shoots Assailant.

Hamilton, Dec. 17.—There was another shooting affray yesterday afternoon amongst foreigners, and Kata Kataranin, an Austrian woman, who keeps a boarding-house at 406 North Hughson street, was locked up on the charge of shooting at Hurnash Gaskbasvitch, a boarder, with intent to kill. The boarder secured the warrant. When he appeared at police headquarters he displayed two bullet holes in his clothing. One bullet grazed his shoulder and another his side. The side of his face was blackened with powder. The woman cannot speak English, but when an interpreter was secured she told him that the boarder had attempted to assault her in the absence of her husband and the shooting was done in self-defence while she was struggling with her assailant.

High Pressure Didn't Work.

New York, Dec. 17.—The lives of 150 persons were endangered, hundreds of others were temporarily driven from their homes, and property valued at $200,000 was destroyed by fire in a factory building at 213-217 Grand street yesterday.

Failure of the new high pressure water service made unusually difficult the task of the firemen.

Mail Clerk Sentenced.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—George Mark Lett, employed in the registered letter department of the postoffice, was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary. He pleaded guilty to eight charges of theft of money letters during a period of 18 months. There are some 32 other cases yet unaccounted for.

Extensive Transfer Thefts.

New York, Dec. 17.—Two office boys of the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. have uncovered a system of wholesale transfer stealing. Two conductors and two boys have been arrested. The company has lost thousands of dollars through the system. Dishonest conductors disposed of transfers by the pad to boy agents, who in turn sold them at two cents or three cents each.

Daughter's Loyalty.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 16.—With a painting valued at more than $1,000 in her possession, Carlotta Rodrigues, the young daughter of one of California's most noted artists, lived in poverty and actual want for several years, and finally died through privation rather than sell the picture, because it was the last production of her father's genius that remained to her.

Fifteen Killed.

Limoges, France, Dec. 17.—A collision in the Pouch Tunnel between a freight and a passenger train near here yesterday resulted in the death of fifteen persons and the injury of thirty others. Fire broke out after the accident and most of the victims, including the engineer of the passenger train, were pinned beneath the wreckage and burned to death.

Sikhs Stick.

Vancouver, Dec. 17.—Col. Swayne, governor of Honduras, left yesterday for Ottawa. He was unable even to hire a dozen Sikhs for police work at fairly high wages, and is convinced that all the Hindus now in British Columbia will refuse to go anywhere else.

Bridge Collapses, Kills Four.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 17.—Four men were instantly killed and four others seriously injured by a portion of a concrete pier of the new bridge erected over the Potomac River at Willemsport collapsing yesterday.

New Magistrate For Windsor.

Windsor, Dec. 17.—Gordon J. Leggatt has been appointed police magistrate from Jan. 1, succeeding Alexander Bartlett.

A FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

Associated Charities Open One in Toronto—Have Men Ready to Undertake Any Work.

AN APPEAL TO EMPLOYERS

In order to relieve the intense situation of the unemployed of this province, who seem to gather in the larger centres during the early winter months, it has been decided by the Associated Charities to open a free employment bureau in Toronto. This appeal is being sent broadcast through the province to the manufacturers, farmers and all people who employ labour to co-operate in this work; and it is earnestly hoped that anyone needing help of any kind, skilled or unskilled, will apply direct to the "Toronto Free Employment Bureau," 71 Victoria street.

The bureau already has hundreds of capable men willing to undertake work of any kind that may be offered them, who prefer work rather than charity.

The help of the people in this district will considerably lessen the necessity of appeals being made for large sums of money to be used for charity.

A LARGE BOAT FOR NEW ONTARIO

Being Built for the G. T. R. in the Peterborough Factory.

The Peterborough Canoe Company is building a large boat to be used for passengers and freight traffic by the Grand Trunk Pacific on their line in New Ontario. This boat is 40 feet long by 11 feet wide, and it is fitted with a 6x6 steam engine. It will take one of the largest flat cars made to carry it to the end of the line; from there it will be put in a cradle, placed on rollers and hauled to its destination. It is large enough to take an upper deck, but will only be fitted with canopies at present. This is the third boat that the company will have sent into the wilds of Canada beyond the reach of the railways. The company is also building a considerable number of special launches for the summer trade. The launches are 20 feet long by four feet wide and will hold seven people comfortably. They are fitted with a 4 h.p. 2 cylinder engine and will have a speed of 12 miles an hour. About the middle of January they will have their show rooms open where they will show canoes, launches and also their supply of motor accessories which they are going to handle.

AN INDIAN LEGEND FROM COBALT SILVER DISTRICT

Indian Chief Used Silver Tipped Arrowheads Against His Foes.

J. S. Crate, special commissioner for The Toronto World, who is travelling through the Montreal River District, tells in a realistic fashion of the Indian story of the first finding of silver on Montreal river.

It seems that a chief of an Indian tribe became supreme in power through the using of silver for bullets and also silver to tip arrows of his warriors with. The glistening white metal cast fear into the suspicious hearts of the red men who were opposed to this chief. Finally, however, a warrior who had been trusted, gave the secret away, through his love for a squaw of another tribe which was threatened with annihilation. He saved the tribe, but it was the ruination ultimately, of his own people. Skeletons have been found with silver arrowheads and bullets imbedded in the bone, to corroborate this legend.

The Rural Schools Threatened With A Scarcity Of Teachers

Closing of Model Schools Has Cut Off Supply—Will Have to Wait Until Normal Schools Turn Out Higher Priced Pedagogues.

CERTIFICATES ARE LIMITED

A scarcity of teachers is being reported fro many parts of the Province and inquiries in Peterborough County point to the same fact. Particularly is this true of the schools in the rural districts owing to the change of the students from Model to Normal schools. When the former were done away with it left a whole year or more before the latter schools were turning out their embryo teachers. These have to spend a year in training in the Normal schools with the result that a better class of teachers should be occupying the schools of the Province in a few years.

There are many resignations at the Christmas term and in this county for example the model school was relied upon to fill the vacancies. This year this is out of the question for the Norwood school has been done away with. The Normal school will have its students ready next summer and in the meantime it is feared that some school sections will find it difficult to secure teachers.

The names of those who have been awarded teachers' limited third-class certificates were made public by the Education Department yesterday, the students being graduates of the Provincial Model Schools. The certificates correspond to the professional district certificates, and are valid for five years, and only for such schools as the Minister of Education may approve. To obtain such approval the school Board must make application through the inspector and with the latter's approval. The certificates have been mailed to the individual addresses. Among the names were Miss Mary Costello of Ennismore; Margaret O'Neil of Hastings and Florence Hubble of Stirling.

Visit Of The Sheffield Choir Told By London Musical Herald

Well Pleased With the Result of Their Musical Pilgrimage To Canada.

In the London Musical Herald received to-day, Mr. J. Kenneth Curwen, as its special correspondent travelling with the Choir of the Sheffield Musical Union, gives an interesting story of the visit of the choir to Canada. He prefaces the description of the tour with the remark that the choir is not composed of professional musicians, and indicates the magnitude of the task of finding two hundred amateur singers able and willing "to sacrifice a month of their time and to bear a substantial proportion of their own expenses on a trip of some 6,000 miles." The correspondent summarises the impressions of the Choir regarding the trip in the following paragraph:—

"One is still too close to this great fortnight to form a just conception of what it has meant. Our reception throughout has been most gratifying. We have been welcomed by the municipality of almost every city, even the smallest, at which we halted. And private members of the community have been most kind in every way to us. We are returning profoundly impressed with the possibilities of this huge country, only the fringe of which we have been able to see. The choir, although working under considerable difficulties, rehearsing in mid-ocean, tired with constant travelling, and frequently worried by inadequate hotel arrangements, still sang magnificently, and gave what we hope will be a considerable impetus to musical life in Canada, while incidentally strengthening the cordial feelings between the Dominion and the Mother Country. The spirit in which the choristers went and were received was a splendid one. There was no thought of jealousy. The members of the choir and the Canadian musicians were fellow worshippers at the shrine of the art of Choral Music.

High Grade Oranges Will Be Scarce For Christmas Supply

While there is no reason to fear that this will be an orangeless Christmas, still the citizens of Peterborough will have to pay more for the fruit and be satisfied generally with a poorer quality.

The partial failure of the California crop is the reason. Not that the trees in the Sunny State did not produce as much as other years, but it takes cool nights to ripen the fruit, and these have been lacking. This was followed by weeks of rain which prevented the oranges from being picked. The result is the California or seedless Navels are smaller this year and the owners of the groves are waiting for them to grow.

Prices Will go up

According to local brokers there will be enough California stock to supply the demand at increased prices. They are retailing to-day for 40 to 50 cents a dozen, and the price is apt to go up.

As a consequence people will have to fall back upon the cheaper grades of which the supply is up to the mark. There are lots of Florida and Mexican oranges, but these are not seedless and are not packed with the same care, and are poorer generally than the California, though often sweeter.

RUMOUR OF DEPARTMENTAL STORE FOR PETERBOROUGH

A rumour is current on the street that a branch of a large departmental store will be opened up shortly in a portion of the ground floor of a George street store. No information can be had that will state positively that arrangements have been completed. It is felt in Peterborough by those with whom the Examiner reporter comes in contact that the business can be very well handled by the stores at present situated here, and that the matter should be carefully considered before a lease is given for the introduction of a business of this kind.

California Fruits Do Not Compare With Those Grown In Canada

A few days ago a well known local citizen had a letter from Pasadena, Cal., from a friend of his who has many friends here. The writer, one of Chicago's leading lawyers and capitalists, some years ago was a regular visitor with friends here. A few weeks ago the writer with his family and servants went from Chicago to Pasadena to spend the winter—that much advertised winter resort. In his letter recently received by a friend here, the writer noticed that whilst the climate was beautiful the fruits raised there bore no comparison with those raised in Canada. Among other remarks in his letter the writer said: "Here we get cucumbers 3 to 4 feet long but very thin and absolutely no good. The apricots and peaches look good but are quite tasteless. The apples are small, hard and with no flavour. Grapes are large but have no taste. We get melons of great size, but they taste exactly like squashes. The recent drought has made the air so full of dust that leaves on the trees are brown with dust. One sees hedges of our regular house pot geraniums that grow to a great height. Still the flowers have no smell. Roses grow to a prodigious size. In fact they kill themselves by over growth unless constantly cut down and back." Taking it, "big and large" Canada's winter is more than counterbalanced by our scentful flowers and tasteful fruits.

ROSES BLOOMING BY THE FENCES IN THE EMERALD ISLE

Mr. Samuel Anglesey, who has just returned from spending a few weeks in Ireland, says he has never seen a more beautiful country. When he left the roses were all in bloom along the fences, and he has brought some of the roots home with him to try and grow them here. He has also roots of the shamrock, and the heather which he is going to cultivate if possible for a hedge. The heather grows to about four and a half feet high and is very fine and slender. It would make a very graceful hedge if it can be got to grow.

Among the curiosities that he has brought out with him are a bundle of blackthorn walking sticks, a large piece of peat and six Irish potatoes, which he says are the most highly flavoured he has ever tasted.

He had a splendid voyage to the Old Country, but it was very rough returning. When the vessel arrived at Halifax harbour, it had to shut off steam and drift in.

VISITS OLD HOME AFTER LAPSE OF ELEVEN YEARS

Mr. James McIntosh of Milwaukee Revisits Scenes of Earlier Days.

Mr. Jas. McIntosh, of Milwaukee, Wis., visited in the city last week after an absence of eleven years. He was in Lindsay attending the funeral of his brother the late Mr. Lachlan McIntosh and came down from there to visit his friends in Peterborough. The lapse of eleven years he finds has made a vast advance in the growth of the city.

OFFICERS OF MINING COMPANIES IN TROUBLE

Alleged to Have Committed Breaches of Mining Act.

The campaign against officers of mining companies, who, it is alleged, have not complied with the requirements of the companies act, is being pushed vigorously. Yesterday summonses were served on three officers of the Titan Montreal River Mining Co., Mr J W Garvin, President, Mr E S Edmonson, Vice President, and Mr J H McKnight, a director. The parties named are ordered to appear at the Police Court on Friday, Dec. 18, at 2 o'clock.—Globe.

AN APT COMPARISON

"Sealshipt" Oysters which are now on sale by S. A. Oke, are a recent development in improved methods of oyster shipment. They are packed by the National Oyster Carrier Company, a concern whose aim may be likened to that of the modern up-to-date newspaper of the Examiner class, inasmuch as both are serving the public, the one in furnishing fresh clean news the other in providing oysters of the same quality.

The National Oyster Carrier Company pack "Sealshipt" Oysters in steel containers with ice around the container. No ice or water comes in contact with the oysters, so the consumer gets solid meats, natural in size and colour—not bleached and bloated or washed by ice.

"Sealshipt" Oysters are sold from a porcelain lined display case with the "Sealshipt" trade-mark in blue and white on the outside. This is a guarantee that you are getting the finest oysters produced and that they have the real, piquant, delicate oyster flavour. They are entirely different from the common tub oysters.

EX-MAYOR MAKES REPLY TO THE PRESENT MAYOR

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir:—In your issue of the 14th, there appears a letter purporting to be written by Mayor Rush in reply to my letter re the management of the City finances. The Mayor undertakes to say that my statements are "misleading" and that I misrepresent the conditions. Let us see who is trying to mislead.

I said there would be a deficit on the Current Account of $15,000, which would require an additional taxation next year of two mills to get square. The Mayor says there are uncollected taxes and other items which will wipe out this deficit. But if the Mayor wants credit for the amounts which came in after the close of the year, he must take out the similar receipts at the beginning of this year, and this he has not done. Who is trying to mislead? If the adjustments at the end of this year are equal to those of last year, and surely the Mayor will not lay claim to having left dragging behind a greater amount than that most incapable Mayor of 1907, the figures I have given will be exactly correct. If they are less, so much the worse for the present Mayor. If we are $7,000.00 ahead at the beginning of the year, and $8,000.00 behind when all accounts are closed after the year, are we not $15,000.00 behind on the year's business?

But the Mayor says that this year's Council has spent so much more on the streets to give employment. Has anyone seen any improvement in the care of the streets? Is there anything to show for 50 per cent. increase in the expenditures? True there has been more work done with the road roller, but that is the very work which gives least employment for the money spent. True the Mayor, who, because of the false cries upon which he was elected, began with a policy of economy, has found that sewers and sidewalks and crossings and drains have to be built, but the Mayor knows perfectly well that the cost of these works is not charged to the Current Account at all, and has nothing whatever to do with the question of deficit. Who is trying to mislead? What really happened was that the Board of Works, finding the work to do, went ahead to do it, while the Mayor, whose duties surely include the oversight of the relations of the departments of the City's work, fell asleep till the Board was jerked up in August with the notice that their appropriation for the whole year was practically exhausted. Perhaps the Mayor would like to take credit for reducing the wages of the men, while maintaining or increasing the salaries. Probably he would say that the men's cost of living has decreased—but they haven't heard of it yet.

I have had to trespass so much on your space to explain the Mayor's "misleading" statements that I shall have to deal with the sale of the debentures to-morrow. I shall mention but one other thing: there appeared in the Review a letter signed "Critic." I have only to say that I do not answer a cad who writes a personal attack anonymously.

Yours faithfully,
R. F. McWILLIAMS.

VISIT THE NEW MUSIC DEPARTMENT—MAIN FLOOR REAR

LILLIAN RUSSELL

Appears Here Next Wednesday in "Wildfire."

Lillian Russell comes to the Grand next Wednesday in her racing comedy "Wildfire," almost directly from her remarkable run at the Liberty Theatre, New York. It is the same clever play from the pen of George Broadhurst and George V. Hobart, in which Mr. Joseph Brooks presented Miss Russell last season. Whatever change in the cast will be noticeable are for bettter and the third act has been re-written and greatly improved; otherwise the production and the story, as well as the company, are identically the same as figured in the memorable hit made last season by Lillian Russell in "Wildfire."

The famous American beauty is seen in the character of a young widow, who has inherited a racing stable from her husband. In life he had operated the plant secretly, under the name of John Dutro and as it is the only asset left the widow, she undertakes to continue the game until she can dispose of her property to the best advantage. The plot develops in the effort to have her favourite mare, "Wildfire," beaten in a race which it is essential she should win. How the widow surmounts these difficulties and carries her fight to a successful finish against the scheming bookmakers and race track people, is the theme in the story that appeals directly to all lovers of fair play and clean sport.

The play is presented in three acts, one showing an exterior at Hempstead, Long Island, the second the interior of a racing stable at one of the big tracks near New York, and the third, the drawing room of the widow's home. The decided contrasts in these environments are a delightful part of the story, and the successful manner in which Miss Russell handles the various scenes makes possible the span. Ordinarily, to mingle the home atmosphere with the tense excitement of the race track would seem impossible, but the subject is handled so cleverly in 'Wildfire," that one never realizes the difficulty.

Aside from her exquisite presentment of the central character in this story, Miss Russell completes the picture by dressing the part faultlessly, and she will wear during as many acts three of the newest creations in the Directtoire model. These stunning gowns will be a treat to the feminine portion of her audience. In her support will be found such well known favourites as Thurston Hall, Sydney Booth, Fred. Sheridan, Will Archie, Joseph Tuohy, Gilbert Douglas, Franklin Roberts, J. Hayes Hunter, Ernest Truex, Adolphe Lestina, Ellen Mortimer, Annie Buckley and Mary Elizabeth Forbes.

BLUE AND WHITE DEGREES IN NEW TRUE BLUE LODGE

Sister E. Bell the Worshipful Mistress—The Watch Tower Lodge No. 7.

The Royal True Blue Association added another Lodge to their number last evening when the new Ladies' Lodge was organised. Bro. M. E. Ketcheson, District Organizer, presided over the meeting. The ladies are taking a deep interest in the matter, and the new Lodge has every reason to expect a rapid growth. They also chose a suitable name as it will be known as Search Light Lodge, No. 7. The nights of meeting will be decided later, owing to the hall being occupied by other societies. Watch Tower Lodge, No. 277, had several members present and assisted in the different parts of the organisation programme.

During the intermission following the Blue Degree the members enjoyed a pleasant repast. The White Degree was conferred on the new members and the election of officers was taken up. Quite an interest centred in the choice of a Worshipful Mistress and several nominations were offered. The ballot proved favourable to Sister E. Bell. There was also a great interest shown in the election of Deputy Mistress and Sister M. Pickens had the honour of this office conferred on her. The choice of the lodge for Recording Secretary was Sister Carr.

An adjournment was made to meet again at an early date when the election and installation of officers will be completed and the Scarlet Degree conferred. The full list of officers will be published after the next meeting.—Com.

PRESIDENT CASTRO'S SUN SETTING

The Venezuelans Rise Against Him in Caracas.

HIS OVERTHROW PROBABLE

Infuriated Mob Sweeps Through City Destroying Property of His Friends and Tearing Down His Pictures and Statues—President's Deposition May Come Now at Any Moment — Martial Law.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 14, via Willemstad, Curacao, Dec. 17.—The people of Caracas arose yesterday against President Castro.

An infuriated mob, unhindered by the police, swept through the city, wrecking the property of his closest friends. The people rounded up all the statues and pictures of President Castro from the clubs and other public buildings and burnt them with rejoicing on the Plaza Bolivar.

No official act deposing Castro from the Presidency of Venezuela has yet been taken, but such a step is expected any moment.

The first building to be attacked and looted was that of the lottery monopoly. The offices of the state enterprise that has enriched itself at the expense of the people were ransacked and pillaged.

The crowd then moved to the printing office of El Constitutional, the organ of President Castro, of which Gumersindo Rivas is editor, and pillaged it completely.

It was after one o'clock by the time the crowd had gotten thus far in its depredations. It lacked leadership, and paused in default of other fields for its destruction energies. It was then that a detachment of troops was called out for duty on the city's streets, and acting President Gomez issued a manifesto prohibiting further manifestations. These measures had the desired end, for the mob quieted down and dispersed, while the city was placed under martial law. Today the city is quiet and business is normal, but further disorders and rioting are expected to-morrow at the funeral of Maracano Rojas, one of the men killed in yesterday's fighting. There have been no demonstrations against the Netherlands, in spite of that country's warlike attitude. They have all been directed against President Castro and acting President Gomez.

EXCITEMENT IN DOUMA.

Rightists and Socialists Clash and the President Resigns.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 17.—During the course of an exciting session of the Douma yesterday afternoon Nikolai A. Khomyakoff, the president of the Douma, quitted the chamber and wrote his resignation.

Scenes of excitement arose over the discussion in the House of the Government bill to grant a credit of $500,000 for the benefit of the employes of the prison administration, who were victims of outrages while on duty or their families if the employes were killed. The Socialists and Laborites hotly denounced the administration and the inquisitorial torturing methods applied to political prisoners.

Deputy Bosanoff, in a specially violent speech, asserted that as a result of the rigorous rule 60 per cent. of these prisoners developed consumption.

The Rightest deputies angrily protested against this, whereupon M. Bosanoff declared that the Rightists possessed less honor than Russian convicts on the eve of execution.

President Khomyakoff in response to a stampede on the part of the offended deputies, called upon M. Bosanoff to withdraw this expression. M. Bosanoff did so to the satisfaction of the president of the Douma, but the Rightists quitted the House in a body and went to the president's room, where they insisted that M. Bosanoff must apologize. Thereupon M. Khomyakom wrote his resignation and left a chairman, Prince Volkonsky, in charge of the Douma. The credit was finally adopted.

BRITAIN MUST HURRY.

Standard Correspondent Warns England Against Delaying Preference.

London, Dec. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A writer described as "One of the Captains of Canadian Industry" wrote The Standard as follows:

"There has been enough delay; Canada has had enough of Little England temporizing. If Britain has not within a year a Government-prepared reciprocity or preferential tariff, my firm belief is that Canada will decide to play her own business game. Once that is started, alas for poor sentiment and the prospect of a really solid united empire."

The Standard says it is only a partner, the leading overseas nation within the empire that Canada can reap the full harvest she has laboriously sewn to retain her individuality and develop on national lines.

Harry Symons, K. C., Toronto, writes the press suggesting that the Barbadoes, and possibly the whole West Indies, should unite with Canada. The suggestion is viewed with considerable interest.

Lee Wah was to pay the Montreal Chinaman $85 if he succeeded in getting into the country. Lee Wah was fined $500 or one year in the penitentiary.

ENQUIRY GOES ON AT OTTAWA

Marine Investigation is Resumed at the Capital.

ONE OFFICIAL RECEIVED $500

Late Frank Polson of Polson Iron Works Gave Commander Spain $500 to Invest and It Has Never Come Back, According to Witness—Big Job Done Without Making Contract With Department.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—While there was no conclusive evidence of wrong-doing brought out in evidence at the Marine Department enquiry by Judge Cassels here yesterday, counsel for the commission seemed to regard some of the statements made with considerable suspicion.

Much of the attention of the commission was devoted to a payment of $500 to Commander Spain by the late Frank Polson of the Polson Iron Works, Toronto. Mr. Spain said that he had received this money for the purpose of investment in real estate in British Columbia, but not having so invested it he returned it in bills to Mr. Polson.

J. B. Miller, principal owner of the Polson Iron Works, swore that there was nothing in the books of the company to show that this money had been refunded.

Mr. Watson, K.C., got witness to say that he always tried to be careful in business matters, and then asked him if that were so why he could not explain various entries in the books of several checks drawn chargeable to cash. Mr. Miller said that was Mr. Polson's end of the business. He trusted him in such matters. If the money was returned to Mr. Polson he might have used it for expenses without entering it.

The examination then switched to the tender for the construction of the Government protective boat Vigilant, which was built to replace the Petrel in Lake Erie waters. The tender was for $124,000 as against $86,000 put in by the Bertram Engine Co. Mr. Miller declared that the Bertram tender was for a smaller boat, and the specifications were different. A search through the records of the Department revealed the fact that the Bertram Co.'s specifications had been returned after the Polson tender had been accepted.

Mr. Watson thereupon got the permission of the commissioner to telegraph to the manager of the Bertram Iron Works to come to Ottawa and bring the specifications with him.

Mr. Watson elicited the fact that repairs by the Polson Iron Works to the Petrel had been executed without contract. These ran to about $20,000.

"Would you care to say what profits were charged on the labor of the men employed?" asked Mr. Watson.

"No."

"Outside of good work, what gratuities were given?" interrogated the judge.

"It may be that some were given, but not many."

"You could shorten matters by saying what gratuities were given the employes of the Marine Department," pursued the judge.

"I don't know that they got a cent. If anything of that kind was done, it was done by Mr. Polson," declared Mr. Miller.

The charges for repairs to the steamer Aberdeen were then taken up. Mr. Watson wanted to know why the original tenders called for an expenditure of only $17,000, while the accounts showed that $45,423 had been paid. Mr. Miller explained that the original tenders did not include everything, and there was some confusion in the orders. The company during the last three years had done business with the Department to the extent of $296,000. It had lost money on a good deal of the work, and would not average a fair profit.

R. O. MacKay of Hamilton, whose steamer Golspie had been chartered to take supplies to the lighthouses, was asked why $7,500 was paid for the service when he had offered the boat for $5,800.

Mr. MacKay said the tender had referred to a smaller boat. The work had been got for him by Mr. Zimmerman, M.P.

Several others were examined, but owing to the lack of books there was nothing conclusive.

Treatment Successful.

Albany, Dec. 17.—Three patients died and 301 were discharged out of a total of 477 treated during the fiscal year just closed at the New York State Hospital for Treatment of Incipient Pulmonary Tuberculosis.

Of the 301 patients discharged, many were reported as cured and others as greatly benefited by the treatment.

The average number of patients treated during the year was 158, at a cost of $9.47 per week per capita, and a total for all purposes of $109,017.

Birks' Fire Loss.

Montreal, Dec. 17.—The Birks' fire losses are estimated as follows: Building and fixtures, $50,000; Birks' stock, $10,000; Notman & Sons, $4,000; Miss E. Christie, dressmaker, $2,500; Waring & Gillow, $1,500; Dr. J. B. Morrison, $500; Dr. C. F. Morrison, $250; Montreal Dental Supply Co., $400; Dr. Hamilton, $1,000; Manufacturers' Supply Co., $200; F. X. Stutz, $2,000. Total, $86,350.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Or again, you have, a sinking sensation, a feeling you are going to die; or perhaps, you wake in your sleep feeling as though you were about to choke or smother, and rest leaves you for the night. If you allow these conditions to continue for a short period even, you will begin to feel your health declining. It is the nerves and heart not acting rightly, and they can only be set right by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They soon induce healthful, refreshing sleep, not by deadening the nerves, but by restoring them to healthy action.

Mrs. E. Nutt, St. Mary's, Ont., writes:—"I can gladly recommend your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as I was greatly troubled with my nerves. I was so bad I could not sleep at night without the lamp burning, but after taking four boxes of the pills I became all right again."

Price, 50 cents per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

IMPORTANT MOTION ADDED TO CONSTITUTION OF CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE LAST NIGHT

Lively Meeting Held—Six Clubs for the League—Mr. F. A. Clarke, a Life Member of Executive—Assistance to Junior City League

SCHEDULE AT NEXT MEETING

That the interest in the Peterborough City Hockey League has reached fever heat was well illustrated last night at the meeting in the Y. M. C. A. parlours. Representatives from the Strathconas, West Ends, Rough Riders, T. A. S. and Lakefields were present and the application for entrance by the Belmonts represented by Harry Clarke was accepted. The Y. M. C. A. who had entered have decided not to play this season and on motion it was arranged to refund them their entrance fee of two dollars. This leaves six teams in the league which should this year be a better success than ever.

The meeting was presided over by President C G Graham. Among those present were Messrs. McNorn and Butcher of the West Ends; Wilson and Weatherston of the Strathconas Harry Clarke of the Belmonts; Quinn and Hurl of the Lakefields; Giroux of the Rough Riders; Denneard and Derocher of the T. A. S. and Messrs. E. N. McWilliams and F. A. Clarke.

Discussion was begun early during the meeting on an amendment to the present constitution respecting the playing of the players in the City League this year and the effect in their standing should they play in the Intermediate O. H. A. and finally on motion of Messrs. Derocher and Wilson it was decided that those players who have never played intermediate or senior O. H. A prior to the season of 1907-08 would be elegible to play in the City Hockey League this season. The various representatives with the exception of Lakefields voted in favour of the motion.

Time for Amendments

Mr E N McWilliams introduced a motion to the effect that any amendments to be added to the constitution must be considered at the annual meetings and that notices of these amendments be given to the secretary at least two weeks prior to the annual meetings. This was seconded by Mr. Quinn and carried.

On motion of Messrs. McWilliams and Denneard it was decided that in the consideration of protests representatives of the clubs interested be not allowed to vote.

Life Member of the Executive

In view of the interest and progressiveness shown by ex-president F. A. Clarke it was unanimously agreed that right to make him a life member of the executive.

A motion governing this was made by Messrs. Wilson and Harry Clarke and met with universal favour from those present. Mr. Graham referred to his excellent services of the past and no doubt this honour will be appreciated by any who have any connection with the league.

Mr. Denneard, secretary of the Junior City Hockey League submitted a proposition by which the junior teams could play their games on Thursday nights prior to the senior games. Mr. H. Clarke moved that each team in the Junior League be given twenty tickets to sell on order to help them pay for the ice for their respective games and also that each team pay $5 from the sale of these tickets to the Senior City League for the privelege. This was seconded by Mr. Denneard and carried.

The present secretary B. F. Huston, gave notice of his resignation and the appointment of a successor was left with the executive.

The next meeting of the league will be held on Monday, Dec. 28th, when the schedule will be drawn up, and when each team will require to have its guarantee of $20 ready to be handed over to the secretary.

THE FIRST HOCKEY OF THE SEASON; BILL MILBURN TRAINER OF TEAM

The first hockey practice of the season for the intermediate O.H.A. team will be held to-night at Brock street rink between 7 and 8 o'clock. All candidates for the senior team are asked to be out in uniform, as the players should take every opportunity to get into shape as soon as possible. A good sheet of ice is available to-night, and there should be a big squad of players on hand for the initial work-out of the season.

"Bill" Milburn, who assisted Dick Baker in looking after the Strathconas last season, and who succeeded him as trainer for the T.M.C.A. Harriers, has been secured by the Club as trainer for the two teams, and will be on hand to-night to look after the players for whom everything is ready at the rink. He guarantees to have the squad in good condition for the opening game.

LONGBOAT AND SHRUBB MAY COME TOGETHER IN NEW YORK ON JAN. 9

New York, Dec. 16 — Two more Marathon races are being arranged for Madison Square Garden. The first is scheduled for the night of Jan. 9, between Tom Longboat, the Canadian Indian and vanquisher of Dorando Pietri, and Alfred, the English professional champion.

The closing event of the series will be the Marathon Derby, with Tom Longboat, Johnny Hayes, Dorando Pietri, and Alfred Shrubb as the contestants.

After winning last night's race, Longboat challenged Shrubb to run over the Marathon distance, and under the same conditions that governed the two races held at the Garden. Shrubb wishes a shorter race — not more than fifteen miles—but it is thought that if sufficient inducements are offered the Englishman will accept. Shrubb is a more scientific runner than even Hayes or Dorando.

Dorando rested to-day. He is under contract to run at Buffalo in about ten days, and he will later run at Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco.

Longboat was around to-day feeling little effects of the race. He said there was never a moment from the start to the finish that he could not have come out and beat his opponent and would have smashed the record had Dorando not slowed up during the last five miles. He ran according to the instructions of his manager.

MEETING TO-NIGHT OF THE Y.M.C.A. TRACK AND FIELD CLUB

To-night at 7.30 the Y.M.C.A. Track and Field Club will meet in the Y. M.C.A. parlours for the election of officers for the coming year. A club of this kind is what is needed at the "Y" to promote and control athletic track and field events. From present indications, there will be a large attendance at the meeting to-night, and the club will get away to a good start.

Every member of the Y.M.C.A. who is interested in athletics is cordially invited to attend this meeting and offer any suggestions that will help make this club a success.

LONGBOAT SHOULD GIVE SHRUBB A RACE; CANADIAN PEOPLE WANT THE CONTEST

It's up to Tom Longboat to give Alf Shrubb a race now. The redskin by defeating Dorando on Tuesday night has gained many laurels for himself and for Canada but a victory over Shrubb would be a much more notable achievement. The little Englishman is a real champion, there is no getting around that fact, and after all what has Dorando or Hayes done in comparison to the feats of the 115 pounder who has made the name of Shrubb known from one end of the world to the other. The controversy between the two men on paper has been dragged out long enough and it is time it was settled one way or the other.

Shrubb seems to have made a most reasonable proposition to Flanagan in that he offered to run a series of three races with the Indian at 10, 15 and 20 miles. You might just as well ask Longboat for one race at ten miles as to ask Shrubb to meet the Onondaga at twenty. The last is Longboat's distance and the former is Shrubb's; therefore each would have a race at his favourite distance, while 15 miles is fair halfway house between the two distances for the third race. Not until Shrubb is disposed of can Longboat claim to be a world's champion and the Canadian people would like to see the matter settled. True the boasting of some of Shrubb's supporters has rather soured Canadians on the Englishman, but the fact remains that for eleven years he has been cleaning up all comers in both amateur and professional circles in the British Isles, France, Australia, United States and Canada.

There are many people who will not be satisfied until the question of which is the better man is settled.

INDIAN TOYED WITH THE ITALIAN; LAUGHED AT HIM ALL THE WAY

New York, Dec. 16.—Tom Longboat is the world's long-distance champion. Beaten in England, in the great Marathon he came right back, and beat the game little Italian who won and lost the Olympic classic, and then came over here and trimmed J. J. Hayes, the official victor.

Tom Longboat's victory was remarkable. Only half in shape, and with his friends so fearful that he hadn't enough of the old reserve to stand such a gruelling grind that they refused to wager anything worth while on him, he beat Dorando, and beat him soundly.

He worried Dorando into collapse, and when the Italian lay writhing in agony on the ground, he galloped by, and won all alone. Collapse came when they were only eight laps, or four-fifths of a mile, to go.

Dorando, who was gamely trying to hold the Onondaga's wonderful spurt, suddenly pitched upon his face and rolled into the crowd.

It was dramatic in the extreme.

Longboat, the little son of Italy all the way, suddenly jumped him on the last mile. The Italian laid behind, and when the Indian was out in front gobbling up the sawdust trail in giant strides, the olive-hued champion's little sturdy legs were twinkling in and out.

The excitable Italians were waving national flags, and screaming in a half frenzy for their beloved champion to come again. Earlier in the race Longboat had yanked the Italian a couple of fast quarters half a dozen times, and then side-stepped, and let the little fellow by, on the rail. Only those on the side of the house where he did the Alphonse-Gaston act knew he was only toying with Dorando and when he came back in the lead they thought Dorando had out-speeded the lean, hungry wolf of the north.

LONGBOAT SAYS THAT SIMPSON COULD BEAT DORANDO WITHOUT DIFFICULTY

New York, Dec. 16.—"It was a circle all the way," said Tom Longboat after the race, "I was always running easily, and after the fifth mile I knew I had him. I wasn't in shape but when he made it an easy pace I knew it was all over. The next time I meet him I'll beat him a mile. There are better men in Canada than Dorando. Hulmer, Simpson, Wood, and Coley are all better men."

Flanagan Satisfied

"Say, Longboat has proven what I have always contended," said Tom Flanagan "that he was the world's best distance runner, and I am satisfied now to quit the game."

After Shrubb now

Longboat says he will run any man in the world now, any distance above fifteen miles.

"I am after Shrubb now," says Longboat.

EDMONTON PILES UP BIG SCORE AGAINST STRATHCONAS

The Edmonton Bulletin of Dec. 12th has the following:—

At the Thistle Rink last evening the Edmonton Stanley Cup challenge team clearly demonstrated their ability to play fast hockey and aroused the hope for winning the Stanley Cup in the 2,000 spectators who witnessed them play. The event was advertised as a match with Strathcona, but the Edmonton team was so much faster than their opponents that the latter were never in it at any stage of the game. Notwithstanding the obvious inequality of the teams the game was well worth seeing, for it gave the Edmonton sports a chance to see that they were getting good value for their money in the team that has been engaged to go east and take a fall out of the Montreal Wanderers.

The final score last evening was 21 to 0 in Edmonton's favour and just about indicates the relative strength of the two teams, Strathcona has a number of good players but they are not in the same class with the bunch of puck chasers which Manager Whitcroft and the Edmonton Hockey Club executive have got together. The Strathcona players were unable to make any head, however, against Edmonton, and as the score against them mounted upwards they gradually lost heart. Parr, the Strathcona goal keeper, worked overtime all through the game, and it was largely due to his efforts that the score was not 42 instead of 21. He is a splendid man in goal and stopped numerous hot ones. But when four forwards are raining shots on goal from every direction with two defence men taking occasional spurts down the ice to try their hand, it would need a stone wall in front of the nets to keep the puck out.

The following was the line-up:—

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD READY FOR HOCKEY

Manager and Committee Selected—Going for Evergreens.

St. Andrews Young Men's Guild at their meeting this week made some arrangements regarding their hockey team for the season. Mr. Mortimer Johnson was selected manager and a committee composed of Messrs. Donaldson, Rae and McDonald was chosen. The Guild have entered a team in the Church League which meets on Friday night to draw up the schedule.

Every member of the Guild is requested to be present at the church to-morrow night at seven o'clock to go out after evergreens for Christmas decorations in the church.

BASKET-BALL.

The Lindsay Free Press says of Tuesday's basket ball game:

Longboat did the trick with Dorando last night, but on the same evening the local Y.M.C.A. intermediate basketball team was trimmed to the tune of 27—15 by the Y.M.C.A. senior team of Peterborough.

The locals were utterly outclassed in weight and height, the Porridge Town boys being young men, but nevertheless the local kids kept them hustling, and with a few more heavy practices with the pigskin will show the fast eastern town where they get off at.

The Peterborough team were a bunch of gentlemen, and of fine standing in the basketball circles, and certainly gave the locals a few pointers in the "com." question here last evening.

The game was, all the way through, quite exciting and enjoyable to the large gathering of townspeople, who almost filled the stand seats.

Mr. Eaddie refereed the game to the satisfaction of all, and to neither team was there any partiality shown by the local physical director.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

Peterborough—G. Lees, G. Martin, defence P Wallace, centre; M. Dobbin, H Cressman, forward.

Lindsay—Wm. McMahon, D. Newton, defence, H. Newsome, centre; H. Higinbotham, I. Connell, forward; Mercer, spare.

Referee—Mr. Eaddie.

Time and tallykeeper—F. Chapman.
